The bad salesman makes excuses for himself at the end of every trip, all through the year, and at the end takes a cut in his salary or looks for another position. The good salesman plans his year's work from the beginning. Carefully he studies his territory, making his work fit his set plan; watches every move of his competitors; takes every vantage-point smilingly, easily, but fairly, and wins in the end because his mind has been on his business.

Territory as a Firm Asset.

One of the most important things to the average salesman in specializing his efforts is to confine his work to as limited a territory as possible, insuring profitable returns for energy expended. Seven out of ten salesmen traveling with trunks and representing wholesale concerns, cover from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. more territory than is necessary to produce the best results to be obtained. Few, apparently, recognize the fact that concentration of energy on a limited number of accounts produces in the end much more satisfactory business than the same results reaped from a broader field. A little soil well tilled is infinitely better than a large acreage half raked over.

Your territory is an asset of your house just as much as its surplus capital, stock, or book accounts. The worth of your territory as an asset is gauged entirely by the manner in which it is gone over. This does not apply to all lines in the manufacturing world, but it is invariably the case with jobbing houses or wholesalers in any line.

The too infrequent calling upon customers leaves a loophole for your trade to escape and scatter its accounts among a large number of houses; but this escape could not be possible if you would visit your customers oftener. Every time you give your competitors a chance to wean away your customers' accounts and likewise their confidence, you render your trade of an uncertain quantity as well as quality.

"But," argues the salesman who has not tried this plan, "how can I keep my road work up and show good sales every day, if I visit my trade oftener than their demand for goods requires?"

The answer is: The nature of your accounts and the results at the end of the year, not at the end of the day, is the determining factor in your ultimate success.

By keeping in the closest possible touch with your trade you are eventually enabled to establish a custom that you can call your own, and your work is accomplished with the minimum amount of effort and expense. But that is not all. Confidence in business is the guiding-star of all satisfactory operation. It is secured mainly by a close relationship between buyer and seller.

Keeping the Eggs in One Basket.

Did it ever occur to you how thoroughly you can aid in promoting the interests of your customers, as well as your own, when you have once obtained their confidence to the fullest degree, and that the best possible thing under any circumstances for them is to keep their purchasing eggs as much in one basket as possible, provided the basket is the right one?

Many a small town dealer has allowed his ship of commerce to ground on the shoals of bankruptcy, solely because he purchased from too many houses and could not watch his payments, besides getting more goods on hand than his limited output demanded. All this the clever salesman with singleness of purpose can avert.

I have witnessed the plan of traveling men on limited territories carried out to an eminently successful conclusion in many cases where it was tried. A few years ago my house had but one man covering the state adjoining the one on the east of that in which we were situated—territory that was generally conceded to be in "the enemy's country." Right here I want to emphasize that that "enemy's country" cry is pretty much a time-worn, punctured theory in the minds of the energetic salesman and the progressive and aggressive house. These assume—and correctly so—that the logical market for any territory, irrespective of distance or position, is the one that can offer the best inducements to draw the patronage of that territory.

In the "Enemy's Country."

Well, Mr. Salesman of the "enemy's country" argued that there was not enough business for a second salesman in his state. He protested against the intrusion with a fervor that would easily have made him top man on the annual sales sheet had this new-found energy been directed on sales-making on his own account in place of arguing against it on the other fellow's. He stoutly maintained that if a division of his territory occurred he could not conduct a profitable business on the section allotted him; that the experiment was bound to be a failure; that the house would regret it, and in the end he would be obliged to take back that portion of his territory given to a new man, and have the up-hill work of regaining the lost prestige that was certain to result from the change.

We were determined to try the experiment, however, and the following year the state was split in halves, the eastern section going to a new man and the western to our old traveler.

Five years later the new man's sales amounted to one hundred thousand dollars a year, against eighty thousand of our former salesman, and yet the latter showed an increase over his previous work and was gaining every year.

Later, precisely the same thing was repeated in two or three other states, with the same results.

In a still more notable instance we had a man traveling on a territory situated far distant from the house. His annual sales amounted to about one hundred and forty thousand dollars, for the greater part of which he received credit on house sales.

In the "Divine Rights" Class.

The sales manager endeavored to point out to him the superior advantages of his territory, and the results to be obtained by making two trips each season in place of one, as was his custom. Being of that "divine rights" class of men, he was a trifle touchy on the subject of any interference from the house as to the regular routine of his work as he thought it should be conducted. The matter was urged upon him until it got on his nerves, and he became exceedingly uncomfortable, so much so that one day he rushed into the office of the president and flaunted his resignation before him in a tragic manner, loudly protesting against interference with his personal rights. Little did he realize that the man who always thinks of his rights is the first to forget that they involve an equal number of responsibilities.

The reverse of what he expected from his melo-dramatic effort happened. His resignation was accepted promptly, and just as promptly there commenced a rehabilitation of his former territory. It was divided into three sections and given to three young men in the house anxious to get on the road, and who were charged to the brim with enthusiasm and with ideas instilled into them from headquarters. At the end of the first year their sales in the aggregate amounted to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Three distinct territories had been established, each covered by a man with fine, growing prospects, and each man working like a Trojan in a spirit of friendly rivalry, the outcome of which could only mean a largely increased business for all concerned.

It is a great thing for a salesman to realize that honest, intelligent effort will bring its reward much more effectually and satisfactorily on a territory that does not encumber him with dead weight on account of its size. Clear your ship for action, and see to it that the barnacles of shortsightedness are cleaned from its bottom.

Getting Hold of a Life's Plan.

At the very period in which this chapter was under consideration it was my privilege to form the acquaintance of a gentleman whom I engaged on a commission to assist the committee of which I had the honor to be chairman, in the great public-spirited movement looking to the commercial and physical advancement of a Greater Chicago.

In the special work upon which we were engaged the services of my newfound acquaintance proved to be invaluable, notwithstanding we were paying him a commission that netted him on an average more than four hundred dollars per month. From boyhood his business career had been decidedly checkered, embracing the promotion of all manner of enterprises, from political campaigns, mining stocks, and expositions, to the management of theatrical companies, and even appearances before the footlights himself as an understudy when occasion demanded.

IT SURPRISED HIM.

The sales manager of a large dry goods company recently took an extended trip over his field in order to become acquainted with the customers of his company. For some time previous to his trip he had been carrying liberal advertising in a representative trade newspaper. Upon his return, in conversation with the advertising representative of that paper, he said he was quite surprised to find what a help his advertising was in building up the reputation of his company with the trade. "Salesmen," said he, "often fail to realize how trade paper advertising helps them, but I know it does, nevertheless."

THE GROCER'S WINDOW

Suggestion for An Attractive Display for the Fair Season—Something About Signs and Display Car ds—Window Dont's.

With the approaching season of fall fairs, each of which has its special attractions in the form of merry-go-rounds, circle swings, etc., a window such as suggested in the accompanying sketch, which, by the way, with the idea appeared originally in the Modern Grocer, will attract an enormous amount of attention, would prove a remarkably good advertisement and should lead to the sale of a good deal of goods. A mechanical window, with something moving, always proves a big attraction. This carries out that idea and brings it on at a time when it is particularly applicable.

The suggestion is for a window imitating the familiar airship swings, with packages of goods being swung instead of people, the model utilizing the principle of centrifugal motion. The swing is intended to be run with a small electric motor, which may be bought for a couple of dollars and connected with a battery or with the electric lighting system, according as it is wired. This, of course, depends on local conditions. The swing itself is comparatively easy to make.

To start with a good, straight, stout pole is needed for the shaft. Upon the upper end of this shaft a wheel-like frame to be constructed. Rods of equal length are run out from the shaft and the other ends are connected around by a wire. This wire is divided into equal parts.

From each division drop two cords, making twenty cords in all, each to be the same length, coming about six inches from the floor. To the end of one of the two cords tie one end of a carton. To one of the two cords which drop at the next division tie the other end of this carton. Guy strings will be necessary to make the carton sit upright. The upper side of the carton is to be cut away and figures, dolls, etc., are set inside.

When all the ends of the strings are connected there will be ten cartons used. Upon the strings flags and pennants are strung so that when the swing is in motion it will present a gay and lively effect.

Upon the floor at the back of the shaft a platform is made of cartons and also a little power house. The motor connections may be made beneath the floor of the window, or the connecting belt may be left in sight to add to the interest. As the small motors, as suggested, run at high speed, it will be necessary to reduce this by means of a large driving pulley on the swing shaft, or possibly by means of an intermediate shaft and set of pulleys. The swing should run so that the carton cars swing out to about a 45 degree angle. The effectiveness of the display may be heightened by adding seasonable goods at the sides and rear of the window, and a couple of appropriate display cards.

CARDS HELP WINDOWS.

Grocery windows are always strengthened by window signs and display cards. The advertising ammunition furnished by the manufacturers of the products you handle can be used to bring out the artistic effect of your window.

But you should not depend on the other fellow's ideas entirely. Every man must work out an idea, which he feels will appeal to his customers and bring them into his store.

New shipments and consignments of an extensively advertised product can all be used to strengthen your window. New ideas never fail to appeal.

Your display windows as well as your advertisements should be planned and designed to sell something. To merely attract attention is not enough. It means that your window is not a paying proposition.

You would not think of retaining the clerk who was a loss to you, and you should be just as particular about your display windows.

SOME WINDOW DON'TS.

Don't slight the windows.

Don't let the glass become dirty.

Don't depend too much on fixtures.

Don't neglect the upper part of the window.

Don't stick to one style of trimming; branch out.

Don't skimp on elbow grease in cleaning the glass.

Don't wait until a trim is fly-specked before changing it.

Don't overlook the utility of a certain number of fixtures.

Don't be afraid to try something new in the way of a display.

Don't let a window stand too long. A week is about the limit.

Don't fill a sunny window with goods that the sun will discolor.

Don't be afraid to spend a little money on the trim. It will come back. —Ex.

It is estimated that from $140,000,000 to $160,000,000 is spent every year in the United States and Canada for gum drops, lolly-pops, taffy, jawbreakers and candy of different kinds. Without the children the candy manufacturers would have to go out of business. It isn't the rich man's dollars, but the poor children's pennies that made the enormous total. And most of the candy sold to children is, of course, of the penny variety.

"Take the all-day sucker, for instance, A certain manufacturer conceived the idea of sticking a meat skewer through a piece of candy and the thing made a hit with the children. Within a few months the demand for the all-day sucker became enormous and the man who originated it became a millionaire. A few years ago the Easter egg was practically unknown in the land. It was brought over to this country by the Germans, who place a great deal of importance on the observance of Easter. Now the Easter candy trade is as important as the Christmas trade, which is saying a great deal. In these two instances tastes were created, absolutely. It is the same with the Italian squash and others."

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

In passing through the Eastern Townships, and especially those parts of it which have been most productive, evidences of the past drought may be observed, although the country has pretty much recovered. The tendency of the market to continue high looks like an indication of the increasing sale of milk for other purposes beside the manufacture of cheese and butter. The increase of shipments of milk to the cities, for household purposes is increasing in compound proportion to the increase in population, which shows that it is becoming more popular as a beverage. Then, the condensed milk factories are taking large amounts where formerly there was no demand in this country for milk for this purpose. So far none is being used in this country in the manufacture of powdered milk, but it will be only a matter of time until large quantities will be required for this purpose. While for reasons of expediency the farmers were compelled to kill some of their cows last year owing to the high price of feed, the enduring evil of this action cannot be too strongly urged. It has been stated that the country will not recover its equilibrium in milk production for three years, and if other sources of consumption appear as rapidly as they have in the past few years it will require more than three years.

Receipts of cheese for the week ending August 8 were 78,149 boxes, against 86,395 boxes for the corresponding week last year. Receipts for the season, up to August 8, were 936,752 boxes, as against 1,087,390 boxes for the same period of last year. These figures are not so discouraging as they have been on occasions before, and point very eloquently to the fact that with the vast number of disadvantages which we have encountered this year we may yet finish ahead of last season in the total production. Shipments of cheese from Montreal last week amounted to 60,216 boxes, as compared with 77,428 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. for the previous week, and 72,575 boxes From Quebec there were shipped 7,161 boxes, making a total of exports for the week of 67,377 boxes. Total shipments from Montreal since May 1, were 821,-219 boxes, as against 963,687 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total shipments from Quebec since May 1, 27.320 boxes, as against 37,903 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total exports since May 1, 848,-539 boxes, as compared with 1.001.590 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

Some weeks ago a few facts were mentioned in connection with the advent of Siberian butter in the British market and the possibility of it replacing, in a measure, the products of some of the British colonies. After some investigation it was found that this condition was only prevented by the lack of adequate transportation facilities in Siberia. Suddenly this summer, however, a considerable supply of Siberian butter arrived on the London market, and it was found that some improvements had been made in the freighting facilities of that country, and immediately the effect of it was felt in London. The influx of Siberian butter leaves it in almost supreme command, as the Danish article is very scarce and the Australian product is not arriving freely. Prices are high, which means that the Siberian product is receiving a fancy margin over others in view of a reduction in transportation charges and prevailing high prices for other makes. In this instance the profit has increased in two directions. All of these conditions tend to make it more difficult for Canada to compete in this market, However, she is this year laboring under extraordinary conditions, which, it is hoped, will disappear in a couple of years.

Shipments of butter last week were 3,869 packages, as against 5,822 packages for the previous week, and 4,188 packages for the corresponding week last year. Total shipments since May 1, 59,-092 packages, as against 40,250 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Receipts of butter for the week ending August 8 were 20,573 packages, as compared with 14,984 packages for the corresponding week of last year. This shows that we are for the corresponding periods of the two seasons gaining on the record established last year. Total shipments of butter since May 1 are 59,092 packages, as against 40,250 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Export price, 23c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Aug. 13, 1908.

Good business at home and less encouragement from abroad is the report from Canadian packers this week.

The drop of from 6 to 8 shillings in Great Britain explains the reason for little business being done in that market. The slump is explained, not by any large receipts from other producing points, for as a matter of fact these have been below average, the Danish "killings" aggregating only 39,000, as against a usual 45,000 to 48,000, but the trouble has evidently arisen in England itself. Very hot weather has been prevalent for some time over a large part of the island and this has reflected in a rather unusual way on the demand for meats and bacon of all descriptions. Canadian bacon, being a little above the average, suffers at once from such conditions and the decline is operating here in materially checking exports of pork products.

Canadian business, fortunately, keeps on an excellent basis, the cool weather of the past week probably having a beneficial effect on demand, which continues active. This helps to keep the packers busy and factories are running this week up to fair capacity.

The slump in the British market has, however, had its effect on prices offered here, which have dropped about 15c. Packers are offering $16.40 f.o.b., and the market is none too firm at this as the supply of hogs is fairly plentiful. One unfortunate feature of the deliveries, however, is that the hogs are not up to the top notch, the quality being prevailingly light.

United States markets have been on a lower basis since last report on large receipts of hogs, and lower prices in the west. The home trade is rather disappointing, and eastern exporters are doing little by reason of large western sales at Chicago parities.

A NEW EARLY TOMATO.

London Man Secures Crop Several Weeks in Advance of Usual Time.

Phillip Jean, who resides on the Hamilton road, east of this city, has perfected a tomato which will yield a crop several weeks before the ordinary plant.

The growers have been watching the plant closely and were surprised to hear that the first crop was sold at the canning company's plant on Rectory Street the early part of this week. The regular season for the tomato begins about the first week in September.

Since the London Canning Company located its plant in this city the growers have taken a much keener interest in the perfecting of produce. Each year Mr. Jean has taken the earliest and largest tomato and kept it for seed and in this manner has perfected the tomato.

Much interest is also being taken in a new butter bean which was imported by the company from Orange, N.J. It is practically solid meat and bears as fast as the ripe ones are picked.—London Free Press.

THE HIGH-WATER MARK in Low-water Times

That's the record of

to August, 1908.

While other cereal concerns have cut down advertising and show a decreased business, Shredded Wheat is advertising more extensively than ever and shows an increase in sales of many thousand cases over the sales for corresponding month of 1907.

The reason? You know it if you know Shredded Wheat. No other cereal food can match it for strength-giving, body-building material, for economy, or for wide culinary uses.

No other grocer makes a larger profit on Shredded Wheat than YOU do—no "deals," no premiums, no "sugar," no bribes. The same old policy—A Square Deal for a Square Dealer.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour Steady and Firm with Good Outlook—Business in Cereals Good for Summer Season.

There is little change of any kind to report this week in grain and its products. The markets are generally steady and firm with prices unchanged.

The flour situation seems to depend almost wholly on the reports of the western crop, and in accordance it has been firm, though not to say stiff, during the past week. With the present good prospects for a bumper wheat crop in all parts of Canada, and with less encouraging reports from other wheat-growing countries the outlook for good business this fall is exceedingly bright. Prices promise to be fairly high, but not unreasonably so. Prospects are bright also for a large and increased export business.

Cereals, too, are steady, and manufacturers generally report encouragingly on the business being done at this usually quiet time of the year.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—During the past week numerous inquiries from foreign countries bring before our notice more forcibly the fact that most sources of supply, except Canada, are short. The Russian wheat crop is very small and the Argentine is not up to last year's crop. All of these conditions, it is thought, will keep prices in Canada fairly high, and it is expected the export price for new flour will be stiff. It is expected that this year Canada's crop, which, if nothing unforeseen occurs, will be a large one and will be distributed pretty widely. Prices remain unchanged locally.

ROLLED OATS—At the time of our last quotation considerable activity characterized this market, which, however, seems to have relapsed into its former dull condition. Dealers seem to think this only a temporary condition, and are looking for a permanent brightening up soon. It was thought that prices might weaken, but just now the market possesses a strong undertone, which will tend towards an advance, rather than a decline. Prices are the same.

TRADE POSSIBILITIES IN AFRICA

Large Opportunities for Canadian Manufacturers Who Are in Earnest.

"Canadian business men do not realize what a fertile field there is in South Africa awaiting their cultivation to yield splendid results."

This is what Captain J. W. C. Martyr, F.R.A.S., Chief South African Agent of the Elder Dempster Company steamships, said to a representative of the Canadian Grocer regarding trade relations between Canada and South Africa. Captain Martyr is visiting Canada with a view to promoting commercial relations between the two countries.

"South African merchants," said he, "would much prefer to handle the lines of Canadian manufacturers, but the latter do not appear to realize this, and they are allowing the United States firms to capture practically all of the trade which Canadians could have for the taking.

"In some lines there is noticeable an increase in exports to our country. I speak chiefly of cheese. Of this South Africans are importing larger quantities than ever, and the Canadian article is now crowding out that of English make. The export of this line may be developed to an unlimited extent. The United States cannot compete, for the vessels going to South Africa from American ports are not equipped to carry cheese. Freight rates from Canada are more advantageous also.

"Your butter is a little too salty for the trade in South Africa, and the Australian line is sold chiefly. We make very little ourselves.

"There is any amount of trade to be secured in canned meats, fruits and vegetables. Two of the largest American packers control the canned meat trade at present, but if Canadian packers went after the trade in earnest they could win it. Twenty million natives are beginning to use canned goods, besides the white population. This will give you an idea as to the future there is for these.

"The best part of our flour imports are from Canada, two of your large milling companies shipping very largely every year. Our only mills are located at Cape Town and are not able to nearly supply the demand. These are only a few of the lines which might be developed.

"You have every advantage over the United States yet you do not seem anxious to profit by the opportunities presented. Our tariff gives you a preference of three per cent., while freight rates between Canada and South Africa

MUST IMPROVE EVAPORATED APPLES.

Suggestions for Better Curing and Packing which Evaporators Should take Cognizance of.

The following letter, from a firm well qualified to speak authoritatively on the subject, draws attention to a matter which deserves attention and action. It will be read with interest by the wholesale and retail grocery trade generally and should be brought to the attention of manufacturers of evaporated apples. —Editor.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—We would be glad if you could find space in your valuable paper for a few lines on evaporated apples. Having handled this product largely during the past few years we can easily see where improvements can be made, in the interests of this valuable commodity for Canada. During our experience we have had various complaints. Probably the worst is, the manufacturers do not dry their apples sufficiently to keep them. They are not cured properly, too much moisture is left in the goods, causing them to ferment very soon after the buyers have them in store, especially so when the weather turns a little warm. We have had many complaints of this sort, both locally and from abroad, and it certainly would be in the interests of all manufacturers to see that they pack their goods in dry condition. They should also see that they are better trimmed and cored, and be more particular in screening the apples. Too much small waste and seeds are left in the stock.

It is possible that the question might be asked in making these suggestions, whether we expect to get choice or fancy apples, but this is not the case. The driers in New York State make a good uniform prime evaporated apple, on the conditions mentioned, and the Canadians have lost a lot of ground here, and there is no reason why they cannot take more care and have a better reputation.

One of the difficulties is, we know, that there are too many small plants in Ontario, who pack say, 25 to 50 boxes at a time, and set them aside, waiting for another batch to be made up. As the season advances the quality improves, but there may be a dozen different qualities in making up enough for a carload. When these goods are received on the market, on a contract calling for prime evaporated apples, some of them will pass, but a portion of the car will not. The fact is, they run very irregularly. We would advise the evaporators to pay more attention to the uniformity of their quality. This can be adjusted by not packing their goods so soon, but letting them lay in a pile until they get a shipment and have these mixed thoroughly to make the lot run uniform. If this is done a good deal of the trouble that has taken place the last two years would be done away with.

We also have had some complaints about short weight. This has caused considerable trouble in several cases that we know of. Buyers are quite willing to pay for the goods whatever they agree to, and expect full weights, and when they arrive and they find they run from three to five pounds short, the packer in some cases is unwilling to adjust such a claim, but the middle buyer of car lots must suffer, unless he makes the shipper give him the allowance, which is only just. This should be avoided from the start, and no doubt the buyers will be more careful in future on account of past troubles. This applies to barrels as well. Most of the shippers try to ship allowing a 20-lb. tare in each, and these barrels will run all the way from 20 to 28 lbs. In packing cores and waste they should allow actual tare.

Unless these things are given more attention and more care is taken Canada is bound to lose a reputation as an exporter and manufacturer of evaporated apples. This latter clause applies to green apples as well. Canadians apparently are more careless about shipping apples, both green and evaporated, than many of our neighbors to the south. We must wake up to keep abreast of the times, pack better goods, and be more true to the brands, so that the buyers will not hesitate so much about buying Canadian brands.

There is a discriminating duty in Germany against our apples, which is unfortunate. If this troublesome question could be overcome our Canadian evaporators would receive about 60c per cwt. more for their apples. The Canadians are letting the matter go along passively, without any action being taken by the authorities to have it settled. The same question will arise this year, and something should certainly be done to offset it. Probably the producer figures he can dispose of his product to domestic consumption. This may be the case in off years of crop, but with any size apple crop it is difficult to dispose of the output, as will be seen by last year's pack. It is up to the evaporator himself to avoid these difficulties, and we feel certain if every one will produce better goods it will pay them doubly in the end.

Yours truly,
W. H. MILLMAN & SONS,
Toronto.

WHO ARE PHILANTHROPISTS?

Patrons of catalogue houses should realize that they cannot get something for nothing, except in a few rare instances, and even then not from the successful mail order houses whose profits make millionaires. If something must be gotten for nothing it may be had from the small store which has not perfectly systematized its selling cost, but certainly not from the large corporation. They do not know the meaning of philanthropy any more than any one else.

Ask your editor to urge that before sending out of town, customers ask the local dealer what his price is. They will not have to pay any more at home, quality considered, and will see the goods before they buy.

The fruit trade of Toronto has assumed such proportions that three M.C.R. fruit cars will make the trip from Queenston to Toronto every day for the balance of the season.

Oranges and Lemons Advancing—Canadian Pears the Latest Arrival—Apples Reported Scarce—Plenty of Potatoes, Tomatoes and Green Corn—Atlantic Sea Fish Hard to Obtain.

Fair business with plentiful supplies of Canadian lines, appear to cover the fruit situation in the Canadian markets this week. Import lines—oranges, lemons, pineapples—are firming up and are decreasing in receipts. Watermelons and California fruit are now ready sellers, and are good, firm lines. Canadian pears have made their appearance and they, together with home-grown plums and peaches, are expected to oust the imported lines of similar fruit. Apples are not coming in so freely as was expected, the dry weather in the country having had much to do with that.

Tomatoes and potatoes are the important lines among the vegetables. From all over the country comes word as to the excellence of these two lines. They are very free in supply also, and this has brought down prices to some extent. They would go lower but for the fact that dealers are bidding high for the privilege of buying. Cabbage continues to arrive freely, and corn is on the markets in great quantities.

Among fish lines the Eastern markets are depending almost entirely on the Pacific Coast for supplies, and the central markets are short on some sea varieties. Fresh water fish, too, are rather scarce, and buyers are picking up everything offering.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Verdelli lemons are now being quoted at $4.75 to $5. Pineapples are slightly firmer, the minimum price having advanced 25c. California Valencias are also stronger, now being quoted, in 288 size, at $5. Blueberries have declined slightly and are now arriving freely. Other lines remain the same. The demand during the week has been very good.

VEGETABLES—Montreal new potatoes are now offering at $3.25 to $4 per barrel, and Montreal tomatoes are also weaker, having declined 40c. Other lines have not changed since our last quotations. The demand during the week has been exceptionally good. The Canadian goods which are now offering are having good sale.

FISH—Eastern fresh salmon are finished and B.C. salmon are beginning to arrive in small lots, which, however, will increase as the season advances. Haddock and cod are still scarcer this week, and prices have advanced a little. Brook trout are in poor supply, but it is expected, as the season advances, that they will increase in quantity arriving. Lake trout are fairly plentiful. Whitefish also are a little more plentiful. Demand for smoked and prepared fish is slow. The pickled and salted market is dull also.

GREEN FRUITS—Oranges are having an off week. Since the beginning of July this line, along with lemons, have been firming-up, but this week, on account of the arrival of fresh supplies, a drop in price is noted. Pineapples are off and the California fruit is meeting with competition from Canadian lines. Some very fine home-grown peaches and plums are being shown, and within the past few days some excellent specimens of pears have come from the Niagara District. In consequence, there is a decline in price on the imported lines. Some few boxes of raspberries and a few baskets of late cherries are being offered. Canadian melons are meeting with favor and are a good line. Apples are stationary in price, reports from the country not being so roseate as a month ago.

VEGETABLES—There is a slight decline noted in a number of vegetable lines. Tomatoes have taken a further drop. Along with potatoes they are very plentiful. Potatoes are down some more, but are pretty firm at the prices asked. Buyers are competing in the country for potatoes and farmers are not at all backward in asking the highest price they think obtainable. Cabbage is away down, and green corn is less than a cent a cob. Stocks are plentiful and demand is very fair.

TRADE NOTES.

White Bros. & Crum, wholesale fruits, Winnipeg, have opened a branch at Regina.

W. Caldwell, Galt, has sold the product of his 12-acre apple orchard to a Hamilton dealer, for $750.

Big catches of salmon are reported from the Naas and Skeena Rivers, in British Columbia, and canners there are jubilant.

According to report, the pack of Behring Sea salmon is very short this year, and all other Alaska salmon will be 50 per cent. below the average.

The Kootenay strawberry crop was worth $25,000 this year, and the total value of small fruits is placed at twice that sum. Winnipeg took a great many this season.

The Hybla Butter & Cheese Mfg. Co., Hybla, Ont., capitalized at $1,500, has been granted a charter. The provisional directors are T. McK. Bartlett, W. G. Woodcox, Jos. B. Rutledge, Jas. Rutledge and J. McK. Sutherland.

ST. GEORGE'S BAKING POWDER WINS.

Grocers throughout Canada will beinterested in this reproduction of the 16th sheet St. George's Bak-ing Powder poster, with which they are familiar. This poster was exhibited at the poster display held in connection with the annual convention, in Detroit, of the Canadian and American Bill Posters' Associations, and it was award-ed first prize by a committee of three experts, who judged it the essence of simplicity, strength and clever handling of the subject. The wonderful success of St. George's Baking Powder can be attributed to two facts—quality of the baking powder, and the advertising it has had. The National Drug Company turned out a first-class baking powder and then, after making it known to the trade, began an advertising campaign to the consumer through Canada, spending thousands of dollars. They have done everything in their power to assist the grocer, which has resulted in enormous sales. This policy will be continued.—Advt.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Interesting Information for Clerks and Grocers Regarding the Goods They Hand Over the Counter.

Vanilla.

Vanilla plants are a genus of trailing or climbing orchids, of which the species known as vanilla planifolia is by far the most valuable for producing the fragrant vanilla pods or beans of commerce. Its home is in Central America and Mexico, but it also grows in various parts of the West Indies and in Fiji Islands, merely requiring a mean temperature of 75 to 80 degrees. It bears greenish-yellow flowers mixed with white, followed by slender three-lobed pods 8 or 10 inches long, and a quarter or half an inch in diameter, which are dark green at first, but are curved and yellow when fully ripe. These pods are filled with pulp and minute black oily seeds, like iron filings, and when gathered emit an aromatic odor so powerful as to often intoxicate those who climb the trees to pick them. When dried in the sun the pods turn to dark brown, or almost black, and shrink to about a quarter their original bulk. They are usually tied in bundles of 50 to 100, and either wrapped in tinfoil or packed in tin boxes.

Turmeric.

It consists of the ground rhizome or root of the Curcuma longa, an East Indian plant of the same family as ginger. It is also grown in China and the Archipelago, both for native consumption and for export. The roots are long palmate tubers, distinguished respectively as round and long turmeric, and are of a deep orange color inside. They are often badly worm eaten, but the odor and taste is aromatic, not unlike common ginger, and when chewed it tinges the saliva yellow. The actual coloring matter is called Curcumen. Turmeric is a condiment as well as a dye, and when ground to an orange red powder is used as a stimulating seasoning. It is the principal ingredient in Indian curries, and is the favorite coloring substance used in making mustard compounds, pudding spice, chow chow, pickles, etc.—Grocery World.

Wax From Sugar Cane.

A patent has been applied for for a process whereby wax can be extracted from the rind of the sugar cane. By the new process this wax is now removed from the filter refuse and turned to commercial uses. It is estimated that one ton of cane will yield 4 kilos of wax very similar in its characteristics to beeswax or Carnauba wax, which can be used for precisely the same purposes. The wax, which resembles that now used very largely for making cylinders for so-called talking machines, is exceedingly hard and capable of taking a high polish. It is understood that 110 factories in Java will this year be using this process.—Home and Colonial Mail.

ENGLISH TRADE IMPROVING.

Mr. Bertram Carr, of Carr & Co., biscuit manufacturers, Carlisle, England, who is visiting Canada at present, states the trade conditions in England are improving gradually and that soon the reflex of the panic on this side, which affected the Old Country, will have disappeared altogether. Manufacturers on the other side have been troubled by strikes, too, but these difficulties have nearly vanished.

BUSINESS AMALGAMATION IN SASKATCHEWAN.

Two firms in Wolseley, Sask., Magee & Thompson, and C. Tidey Co., have amalgamated and formed a joint stock company known as the Magee & Thompson Co., Ltd. Mr. Tidey has withdrawn from the business and the officers of the company, which, by the way, has an authorized capital of $100,000, are A. G. Thompson, president; Richard Magee, vice-president; John Bradley, secretary. R. A. Magee is manager and H. J. Hunt assistant manager. The grocery end of the business will be in charge of Mr. Bradley.

PERSONAL NOTES.

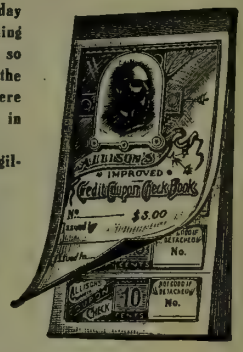
You can take a day off and go fishing whenever you are so inclined, secure in the knowledge that there will be no leaks in your absence.

No matter how vigilant you may be, the Allison Coupon System is a better safeguard against errors and petty losses than your own presence and watchfulness.



Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow exampleset in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

UNIFORMITY!

It is not "something similar" that you want.
You don't get Uniformity in "something nearly the same."
That word means a good deal in this connection.
It stands as one of the corner stones on which the magnificent success of

is founded, and which with their unvarying high quality has made them phenomenal Trade Builders.

The trade-mark "WOOD'S" means something tangible, not "something just as good" or "something nearly the same."

CURRANTS

To the Canadian Grocery Trade:

The dried fruit department of your business can be made highly profitable by selling good currants. By good currants we mean currants that are true to name and grown in the best districts—currants that are well-cured and packed under cleanly methods. Our brands fulfill all these requirements. Our name on the case is an absolute guarantee. We have agents in all the principal cities throughout the world. Your jobber will sell you "Meyer's" Currants if you ask for them.

Handle Canned Goods That Are Recognized Leaders.

A modern philosopher has discovered that "The more aims you have in life the less likely you are to hit anything." Concentration is one of the secrets of success. There is a wealth of wisdom in this for the merchant. Concentrate your efforts on selling well-known lines and you'll be ahead at the end of the year. Don't load your shelves with a dozen brands of uncertain Canned Goods and keep your customers forever experimenting.

Canadian Canners' Peas Have Created A Big Trade for us

And they will do the same for you. We particularly recommend our Grade No. 2 SWEET WRINKLE PEAS. They are deliciously sweet and tender, and rapidly win new friends wherever introduced. They have a constant and ready sale all the year round. They are genuine business builders and can be sold at a good margin of profit.

Our Peas are packed in four grades as follows:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

It's poor judgment to keep on buying goods that have proved to be poor sellers. Goods that the public don't want, you should not buy.

The one fact that has always stood out in the retail grocery business in Canada is the fact that "SALADA," Tea has always sold readily.

Every grocer, without exception, who has handled our goods right—concentrated attention and energy on them—has built up a large tea trade, without fear of competition from the tea-peddlers.

Make a feature of the fact that you sell "SALADA" Tea. It carries weight with every one of your customers, gives them the impression that your entire stock is "right."

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

Make Money out of Flies

It's time to even things up, because you've been losing money on them by spoilage of goods and annoyance to customers.

Brown's Famous "Fly Coil" has nearly three feet of fly-catching tape, and the flies crowd onto it by the hundred and STAY. Hang up two or three and rid your store of the dirty pests; then just tell your customers what they are, and see how fast you can sell the Coils. They do more good than "fly paper," and sell faster.

A Bumper Crop in the West

MR. MANUFACTURER, do you realize what this year's bumper crop in the West may mean to you?

It is the biggest crop in the history of the country and it will be worth a pile of money—much more than any previous crop.

The West will have plenty of money to spend and there will be a strong demand for high class goods.

Now is the time to push your goods in the West and develop a trade that will grow from year to year.

We can help you, as we have the selling organization to place your goods on the market.

We are established in Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, the three principal wholesale centres of the West. We can take your goods on commission basis, store them at these three points and distribute them to the wholesale trade.

To do business in the West it is essential that you should have live intelligent representation on the ground.

A HINT TO CANADA

What Australia Thinks of Champion's Vinegar

Extract from "THE GROCERS' ADVOCATE," SYDNEY, May 25th, 1908.

VINEGAR STANDARD.

Important Action by the Board of Health.

In conformity with the provisions of section 77 of the Public Health Act of 1902, the Board of Health has fixed a standard for vinegar, and there is no risk of over-stating the case to say that it is not before it is needed. The President of the Board, Dr. Ashburton Thompson, in referring to the action taken, indicates the fact that the authorities have become aware in this case, of the necessity of protecting both the public and the honest manufacturer; there are several manufacturers of vinegar in this State and elsewhere, who manufacture an article that has a sound title to the name either of vi egar or malt vinegar respectively. When for instance the retailer stocks or the consumer purchases a bottle of "Champion's" he knows exactly what he is getting, but there are many fluids which pass by the name of and secure custom as vinegar, that for the sake of the general health should never be allowed to pass into consumption. The result is that in the first place the public stomach is outraged, and indigestion mixtures are at a premium, while in the second the manufacturer who produces a sound article which cannot possibly be made under a certain cost, is penalised for his integrity by having his goods ousted from general favor by meretricious substitutes.

There is only one way to defeat this unprincipled tampering with food stuffs, and that is by establishing standards and punishing the manufacturer who produces for sale anythings which falls short of them. Under the New Pure Food Bill we sincerely hope this action, belated enough under the present Act, will be a marked feature. The standard set up n this instance is proclaimed in the following terms:

Chief Secretary's Office,
Sydney, 29th April, 1908.

It is hereby notified for general information, that, in accordance with the provisions of Section 77 of the Public Health Act, 1902, His Excellency the Governor, with the advice of the Executi e Council has been pleased to fix the following standard for vinegar :—

Vinegar shall be the liquid derived from the alcoholic and acetic fermentation or oxidation of the juice of grapes or of infusions of malt, lawful malt substitutes, or sugar and malt, or of the juice of apples, either with or without subsequent distillat on, it shall contain not less than four per centum of acetic acid, and shall not contain any free sulphuric acid, arsenic, lead, or copper.

W. H. WOOD.

In future, therefore, any of that chemical abomination which in time past has been wholly or largely composed of acet c acid coloured with burnt sugar, will have to be sold under a label which proclaims it to be "artificial" vinegar, failing which the vendor will be liable to prosecution for selling an article which "is not of the nature, description or quality demanded by the purchaser." Retailers therefore are reminded that as the New Pure Food Bill has not yet been passed, they will for the present have to shoulder the entire responsibility in the matter of selling vinegars. Price will be a fair criterion for their guidance; the experienced grocer knows quite well what a sound vinegar must cost, and if he is selling anything in the shape of a vinegar at a price below that, he will at any rate know that wisdom dictates the adoption of extreme precaution to protect himself from fine, and his business from loss of reputation. We understand that the authorities have been asked by some of the manufacturers, if the operations of the proclamation could be suspended in order to give them time to call in stocks at present distributed through the State. The Board has no authority to suspend the effect of any proclaimed standard, and although there seems to be an impression that the local authorities will so far appreciate the difficulties of the position as to refrain from taking action for a few weeks, yet we feel bound to caution retailers who may happen to hold any old stocks that will not come up to the standard that they stand in a position of danger.

How the Grocer Should Advertise

The Newspaper Versus the Circular as a Publicity Medium—Space Must Be Carefully Utilized for Best Results—Some Examples of Well-planned and Well-written Ads.—Conducted by W. F. Ralph.

J. Wineburgh, an advertising expert of New York, who is fighting in the courts for the right to hang signs outside New York street cars, has very decided views on what is and what is not legitimate advertising. Mr. Wineburgh, who is now in London, said to the British correspondent of the N. Y. Herald :

"If you have a good thing to sell the best way to get it before the public is to advertise it right out in the open or in a newspaper like the Herald. I don't believe in those circularizing schemes."

We wouldn't care to go so far as to completely agree with Mr. Wineburgh on the circularizing question, because we have not infrequently heard of and seen circulars which have produced results. But, on the whole, and so far as the average retailer is concerned, there is no medium that can compare for an instant for all round dependability with a really good newspaper.

There is this difference between the newspaper and the circular : One is paid for by the reader, while the recipient of the other gets it for nothing, It is only natural, therefore, that a person should be more anxious to absorb the contents of the newspaper than those of the circular.

A circular is always an intruder. It comes through a person's letter box or is thrown upon his verandah quite unsolicited by him. Unless a circular comes neatly enveloped through the mails, the first impression made by the circular upon the mind of the householder is one of annoyance at the untidy appearance it gives his hall or verandah. He or she is inclined to exclaim, "Dash those circulars !"

The Fate of the Circular.

As most personally distributed circulars are delivered during the daytime, their usual fate is to be picked up by a more or less annoyed housewife and cast into the stove. If, perchance, a circular does get read, it is not likely to lead to business unless it contains something extraordinary in the price-cutting line.

If a circular is received through the mail the usual first impression it makes upon the recipient is also one of annoyance, because when a man or woman opens a stamped envelope and finds it is not a personal letter as was supposed, it occasions disappointment. And to be disappointed is to be annoyed. "It's only a circular !" is one of the most frequent morning exclamations in modern language.

On the other hand, an advertisement in a newspaper commands the respect due to anything that has cost money to get. If an advertisement can be said to obtrude in a newspaper because of the fact that a man buys a newspaper primarily for the "news" it contains, the obtrusion is very far removed in degree from the kind of obtrusion inseparable from am unsolicited circular.

People expect to find advertising in the newspaper. Consciously or unconsciously women, at least, regard the publication of store advertising as an essential part of a newspaper's business. The very fact that an ad. appears in a newspaper gives it an appearance of authority which rarely attaches to a circular.

The Newspaper's Persistency.

Another reason for the superiority of the newspaper as an advertising medium for the retailer is the fact that it lends itself to persistence. It is a periodical publication coming out as regularly as clockwork, and reaching approximately the same people with each issue. This periodical covering of the same field at regular intervals is absolutely essential to really effective advertising. The ground must be constantly covered and re-covered; and no known method of circularizing can do this as effectively as a newspaper.

Where a newspaper of genuine circulation is available for advertising purposes it is safe to say that no circularizing scheme will bring as good results.

Careful Use of Space.

Of course, as has been iterated and reiterated in this column, results from newspaper advertising are wholly dependent upon the manner in which the advertiser makes use of his space, The blank space must be made to speak and speak with interest. And on the part of the publishers of the paper there devolves the great responsibility of clothing the language of the advertiser in a suitable and attractive dress of type. Worn type, indistinct or crude cuts, too lavish display—all these mar the effectiveness of the best written ad. To borrow the words of another writer :

"Since this space is so valuable neither the publisher who demands a high price, nor the advertiser who pays it, can afford to permit the use of uninteresting matter, shoddy composition or worn and obsolete type faces. Indeed, if the advertiser is to get value for his money every line must be made effective, not by the use of many words, but by making each one express the meaning and purpose of the advertiser. Indifference upon the part of the publisher in this respect, shows any observing advertiser who is not attracted by the advertisements of others, that if he buys such space other readers, like himself, will not be interested. Similar indifference upon the part of the advertiser must be attributed to his inability to understand or appreciate the real value of advertising, otherwise his own interest would compel him to demand a better presentment of his selling arguments. And such lack of interest upon the part of both publisher and advertiser insures the indifference of the readers, there being nothing in the argument or typography to attract or interest them in what is being advertised. They pass over the valuable space occupied by the advertisement and the opportunity to gain the purpose of the advertiser is lost."

SOME FIRST-CLASS EXAMPLES.

It is some time since The Grocer has reproduced any ads. written by J. A. McCrae & Son, of Guelph. That's not GROCERY TALKS.

Suggestions for Advertising Staple Products, Adapted From Recent Ads.

The following are a few suggestions for grocery talks in advertisements which are calculated to save a little of the busy ad. man's time. They are practical, applicable and attractive.

Coffee.

No breakfast is complete, no matter how well it is prepared, no matter how daintily it is served, or how great your appetite may be, unless you have included Blank & Co.'s coffee. This is the very best brand, and comes in one-pound and two-pound cans. We have cheaper coffees, and among those we would call your attention to our 25c blend.

Poor coffee is dear at the price—at any price. As a rule poor grade coffees are extremely acid—altogether too acid for stomach comfort. In fact, it's the long continued consumption of poor grade coffee that gives the health-drink man his chance. Good coffee is wholesome, and it's more economical as far as the pocketbook is concerned, because it will return many more cups of the beverage to the pound. For a really good and wholesome coffee, at a really reasonable price, try our own brand of Mocha and Java.

Tea.

A big pitcher of iced tea is welcome these days on any table. But make it right and, above all, use the right tea. Garan tea is peculiarly adapted to this use, because of the absolutely correct proportion of Formosa along with other varieties. This combination brings out the strong flavor when served cold. One-half pound canister 30c. One-pound canister, 60c.

About tea. Can you tell good tea not only by the taste after it is poured steaming into your cup, but by the look of the leaf? Can you tell whether it is tea that has been carefully grown, picked, dried and blended, and not merely the sweepings—half tea leaves, half dust—that fall to the floor while the natives are picking over the leaves and that are too often sold to the unwary as tea? Our careful study of the tea question and the time spent in securing perfect blends have been well repaid in the favor accorded to our special blends of tea.

Crockery and Glassware.

New shipments of china have just arrived, and as some of our customers have been waiting for these lots, we wish to say that we are now ready to fill all orders. Included in this lot is our classic white and gold china (stock pattern), also our green Empire pattern. We can fill orders for complete sets or individual pieces as required. Call and see these goods—You are under no obligation to buy!

"Putting up" fruit. Those who intend to put up fruit will need fruit jars. If the fruit is to be kept in perfect condition much, if not all, depends on the jars. Our fruit jars are the best obtainable and we have them in pints, quarts and half-gallon sizes. Jelly glass, too, at extremely moderate prices.

Fruit.

Ripe, juicy pineapples. Think of it! It pays to keep in touch with this famous grocery store of Abraham & Straus. With stories of prices going up on foods all over the country, the news here is invariably of low prices on the very best of summer foods—ripe, fine, sweet, delicious, juicy pines at 8c each, or three for 22c. They won't last long at this price and this will probably be the last opportunity this season. Not more than 12 to a purchaser. None sent C.O.D.

Cereals.

A woman reaps a rich harvest of satisfaction when she uses Blank-Dash flour in her baking. The satisfaction will not be her's alone, either. Every member of the family will share in it and enjoy the better bread, cake or pastry which the use of this flour insures. Don't fail to give it a trial the next time you need flour.

Rolled oats. When you use our special lines you get the only oats that are guaranteed not to have any bugs, worms or other foreign objects in them, you get the oats that give results. They have the looks, flavor, taste and appearance to make them appetizing. You run no risk in serving rolled oats for breakfast if you buy your rolled oats from us.

General.

Delightful warm weather menus can be made up from our stock. A visit to our store might help you decide "what to get for dinner"—or supper—or lunch—or for any occasion. The nicest table delicacies—the best staple groceries, fruits and vegetables, always fresh and reasonably priced.

First Apples and Peaches on the Vancouver Market—Developing the Tobacco Industry—Novel Prize System in Saskatoon.

VANCOUVER.

August 15.—In connection with the reduction of the price of bread to five cents for a one and a quarter-pound loaf, it might be of interest to mention a fact that was brought to the attention of The Grocer by a former resident of New Zealand who is now resident in this city. He stated that in New Zealand the standard price is five cents for a two-pound loaf, which is nearly double the weight of that sold in Vancouver. Moreover, bakers have to carry weights so that the bread may be weighed should any customer demand it. This, too, with flour, he says, at very few times cheaper than what it is here, and often it is much dearer.

The first shipment of local apples has arrived from Thomas Earl's orchard at Lytton, and the fruit is satisfactory. California Gravensteins are also on the market and look well and have excellent flavor. Extreme vigilance is being exercised by the inspectors in regard to the importations of fruit from California, for codlin moth is found. A large number of boxes of Bartlett pears have been condemned and returned to the place of shipment because of the presence of this pest.

J. H. Paul, of Fairfield Island, Chilliwack district, has the credit of being the first man in that part of the Province to have local peaches. Two weeks ago he picked the first of the season, and has established a reputation as being the leader with choice fruits and vegetables.

The extent to which fruit is grown in the Province is partially shown in the foregoing items. Last week the big cherry crop of the district around Victoria, on Vancouver Island was mentioned, and now reports come from Nelson of the fine growth of cherries on the Durban ranch, two miles south of that city, and managed by R. W. Hulbert. Seventeen and twenty boxes of 10 pounds each have been gathered from nine-year-old trees. The price realized was from 10c to 15c through the Kootenay Fruit Growers' Association. It is declared that the Kootenay cherry cannot be beaten, the Lambert being the king of the lot.

Tweddle & Son, and W. Hill, of Niagara, Ontario, and J. D. Honsberger, of Grand Forks, are the incorporators of the Grand Forks Fruit & Nursery Company, with a capital of $25,000, that will operate at Grand Forks.

P. A. Samon, representing the Havana Cigar Syndicate, of Winnipeg, Man., was at Penticton, in the Okanagan Valley, the other day, exhibiting some of the cigars made from the native tobacco and endeavoring to interest people of that vicinity in the growing of the leaf. The factory at Kelowna was opened on July 19th, and six cigarmakers and the same number of other employes are engaged, turning out 3,000 cigars daily. Larger premises have been leased and the staff is to be increased at once so that 10,000 cigars daily may be manufactured. It is the intention to move the entire factory from Winnipeg to Kelowna. To supply the factory, it will be necessary to induce growers in other places than Kelowna to go into tobacco culture. The price paid is about 10c per pound, and it is claimed that at this figure $200 worth per acre can be grown among fruit trees without in any way interfering with them.

The Gold Seal Liquor Company, Vancouver, has made a unique importation of cigars, in that it includes all the highest class of cigars that come from the Island of Cuba. There are two large consignments, and the order is the largest to come direct to this part of the Dominion.

Thursday afternoon, 13th, was a holiday among the grocery stores, it being the occasion of the clerks' annual picnic.

The Chilliwack clerks held their third annual picnic a week ago, on Thursday.

G. W. Deacon & Co. have bought out John Cunningham's stock at Port Essington, and are opening up a general store in the Upper Skeena Trading Company's old stand. Mr. Deacon comes from London, Ont., where he was designer for a large manufacturing house for many years. Prior to locating at Essington, he visited the Okanagan, but that did not suit him.

The stiffness of cured meat prices and the prospect of an immediate raise, brings to mind the mutton situation on this coast. Large quantities are brought here from Australia. There it is purchased for 7c or 8c, a carriage of 2c paid with duty of 3c per pound, and it is retailed here at from 17c to 22c. An effort is being made by New Zealand traders to get on this market, but it is impossible just yet as there are no cold storage boats plying between New Zealand and Canada. Cold storage space in the Australian boats is refused. The betterment of the New Zealand service is now proposed, and an increased subsidy will be asked for to enable the promoters to have larger steamers with the necessary equipment. If this is done, butter will also be brought in from October to April. It is thought that the mutton could be shipped as far east as Winnipeg, and the butter even to Toronto.

ONE OF THE STORES BURNED AT FERNIE, B.C.

The splendid grocery interior illustrated in the above engraving was that of W. J. Blundell, of Fernie, B.C., and was one of the stores destroyed in the recent disastrous fire. Mr. Blundell had one of the finest and most modern stores in the Province. His loss is estimated at $4,600, which was covered by $3,000 insurance.

A list of the losers at Fernie includes: J. E. McEwen, baker and confectioner, $8,500; Thomas Beck, confectionery, $5,000; W. J. Bundell, grocer, $4,600, insurance, $3,000; Crow's Nest Trading Co. and A. Macdonald & Co., $125,000, insurance, $85,000; Trites-Wood, $200,000, insurance, $117,000; S. Marks, grocer, $1,000; Western Canada Company, P. Carasella, general, $25,000, insurance, $12,000; Fort Steele Brewing Co., $185,000, insurance, $75,000.

J. C. Spedding, merchant, of Auckland, New Zealand, who passed through Vancouver recently on his way to England, placed orders for 6,000 cases of apples and 2,000 cases of onions in California. When improved boats are in service from Vancouver to New Zealand it is confidently expected that this annual business will come to British Columbia.

SASKATOON.

August 15.—A most successful four days' exhibition was brought to a close here on Saturday. There was a big list of exhibitors in every class of stock and produce, and numerous prizes awarded. In the industrial department were several attractive displays, that of J. F. Cairns being especially noteworthy. Besides a display of numerous articles required by the housewife, several young ladies were employed dispensing dainty cupfulls of Tetley's tea. The Young-Thomas Soap Co., of Regina, had a stand all to themselves for the display of their soaps and samples of their famous Young Tom, Purity Naptha, Palm Naptha soaps, and washing powders were freely distributed. Of toilet soaps the glycerine pumice was the most attractive. H. J. Nosworthy was in charge of the display. As a finishing touch to the fair, the semi-annual drawing of prizes took place at Cairn's store on Saturday evening. Two months ago the drawing was announced to take place on the coupon system as has been the custom at the store for several years. Information, however, was laid against Mr. Cairns for carrying on the drawing. The matter was taken into court and the magistrate gave his decision that the system was illegal. Not to be outdone, however, Mr. Cairns announced that the same prizes would be given under a different system. The new plan was that the purchaser of every $1 worth of goods would have a guess at the number of cash sales which the store would put through between July 27th and August 8th. The number of cash sales for the two weeks was 10,809, and the winner of the first prize came within two of that number.

Notes from the Eastern Provinces

New Ideas From Montreal—Large Arrivals of Sugar in Halifax and St. John.

MONTREAL.

August 17.—Grocers are like other business men in so far as their search for paying lines are concerned, and sometimes a certain line may be developed to such an extent as to make a good proposition. One grocer, whom, it is learned, has had previous experience in the confectionery business, has developed his candy counter to such an extent that it has become a source of considerable revenue to him. Let it be observed here that this man's store is a model of cleanliness, therefore he has started with one advantage, perhaps, over some of his less scrupulous neighbor grocers. His candy counter is isolated from the other countries, and is in the front of the store. He has a silent salesman and in this are kept his lines, and everything looks refreshingly clean and neat.

Sometimes it is amusing to note what the environment of a store will bring it in trade. Recently a small grocery commenced to supply a nearby bank with sandwiches for the clerks who couldn't leave at the noon hour, and now this branch of the business, which is conducted by the grocer's wife, has grown to considerable proportions. as many others, who prefer to stay in their offices rather than go home, are eating this woman's delectable sandwiches.

Another grocer has discovered a way for the disposing of his empty boxes. He explains to his lady customers the wonderful things which can be made from boxes by a little ingenuity and craftsmanship, in the way of housefurnishings. Many a cosy corner in the locality of this store has been fashioned from boxes bought at this grocery.

At this season of the year women are on the lookout for food which requires little cooking, and any advertisement which tells them how to get along without standing over a hot stove, or gas range, will be soon followed up. A bright grocer cleaned out his window and turfed it over with sods and had two palms growing on either side. In the centre was a large menu card about four feet high, with the lettering well done, and in the corner was a nice large bow of heliotrope ribbon to add to its beauty. On the card were printed the names of articles which would compose a good meal, and which could be prepared with a minimum of cooking. These large bills of fare were changed three times a day. After the dinner hour, or about five o'clock in the afternoon, the breakfast list was put in the window, and after the breakfast hour the lunch list was displayed, and so on. This advertisement, according to the grocer who displayed it, brought the required results, and many a housewife was grateful for the suggestions offered.

A regrettable mistake was observed on one of the leading streets a few days ago in the matter of window advertising. When a grocer undertakes to advertise his goods this way he should be very careful not to commit this same mistake. The window in question was plastered from one end to the other with paper bulletins scattered indiscriminately over its surface, and from the outside the effect was far from pleasing. In no case should these announcements interfere with the view of the goods on exhibition in the window. Naturally, when a person sees a certain line advertised at a certain price, which is attractive, they want to see the article, and if they have to hunt for a chance to see it, through the signs pasted on the window, it does not put them in a very amiable frame of mind. Another window, in striking contrast to this one, had a list written on the window on either side, describing the bargains displayed in the window, and this proved effective.

On entering, the first mentioned store it was found to be perfectly ordered inside and this makes the lack of judgment in the window signs all the more regrettable.

A method of collecting bad debts which has been tried in a country town, where the place is more feasible than in a large city, deserves mention. It seems a grocer had considerable difficulty with some of his customers respecting payment, and finally he advertised a number of accounts for sale in the town newspaper, publishing the names of the delinquents. Before he resorted to this, however, he sent each debtor a notification that such action would be taken, and rather than endure such publicity they paid their debts. There were some whom all sense of shame seemed to have vanished from, and, consequently, their names were published.

In the summer season certain causes militate against the practice of displacing goods in front of the store, which are chiefly sanitary reasons. The store of J. A. Labonte, Dorchester Street East, exhibits a solution of this difficulty. Mr. Labonte has several large glass cases with slanting tops which display the goods sufficiently, and, at the same time, preserve them from the clouds of dust which sweep along the street.

Two exceptionally fine delivery rigs have been noticed standing in front of Brouillet & Guay's grocery store, corner Burnside Place and University Street. Wherever these two rigs go in this city they will carry with them the impression that makes trade for the proprietors. The importance of a snappy turnout cannot be overestimated. It is, so to speak, the grocers' traveling representative.

Quite a number of grocers are making money selling sandwiches made of Bovril and bread. They are used extensively for picnics and for hasty luncheons.

The Early Closing Association of Montreal, held a picnic at Bout de L'Isle on Sunday to celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the society's foundation. The usual races were pulled off, and other athletic contests incidental to functions of this nature had their place as well. A banquet was held, which was much enjoyed. The credit of the success of this outing is largely due to the president of the society, J. B. E. Poirier, and other officers, assisted by the various committees. The distribution of prizes will take place at 149 Berri Street at 10 o'clock on the morning of August 23.

HALIFAX.

August 17, 1908.—The wholesale grocery trade is a little quiet at the present time, but the retail trade is fairly good. The commission business is very brisk, and the dealers have about all the trade that they can handle, both in the city and at outside points. New green corn is now on the market, and tomatoes and cucumbers are coming in in good supply. The new potatoes on the market are large and of very fine quality. Eggs continue a little scarce, and the best Nova Scotia stock is quoted at 22c. Butter is coming in a little better, but the price still keeps up. More dairy butter is being marketed now.

Charles Marsden, grocer, Spring Garden Road, has assigned to George E. Faulkner, the official assignee. Mr. Marsden, who started with a small capital, has been in business only a few months, and the liabilities are not very heavy.

After half a century in the retail grocery business in Halifax, the name of W. Charles Anderson to-day will pass from that line of business. Mr. Anderson died some years ago, and since then his son George R. Anderson has managed the business. Mr. Anderson also conducts a large gents' furnishing business, and the latter has grown so that he cannot find time to attend to both concerns, so he has decided to close out the grocery business. Commencing on Monday, August 17, the stock in the grocery store will be sold at reduced prices for cash until everything is cleared out.

The creamery at Brookfield, N.S., which has been running continuously for fourteen years, summer and winter, is this year receiving a larger supply of milk and cream than for many years, and the company finds a ready market for its butter. The company has now gone into the manufacture of ice cream.

Pickford and Black's liner Dahome, which arrived this week from the West Indies, brought 19,500 bags of sugar for Halifax and Montreal.

ST. JOHN.

August 17.—The heavy rains of the past few weeks will materially aid the root crops. Potatoes will be about an average crop, but oats and buckwheat are reported as being decidedly off. The hay crop is abundant and was practically all housed before the rains did much damage.

Business has been rather quiet and few changes are reported in market quotations. Butter and eggs keep high and there seems little likelihood of any drop in prices for some time. Raspberries, blueberries and blackberries are coming in freely. New potatoes are now selling at 30 cents a peck retail and other vegetables are quite reasonable.

Wm. Peters, jr., T. A. Peters, Edwin Peters, Frank L. Peters and C. H. Peters are seeking incorporation as C. H. Peters' Sons, Limited, with capital of $199,000; to carry on the feed business and tannery now conducted by the firm of C. H. Peters' Sons.

J. F. Tweedale, Arthurette; Judson C. Manzer, Andover; R. W. Demings, Perth; D. B. Hopkins and H. Hopkins, Andover ;and J. E. Armstrong, Frank D. Sadlier and Murchie L. Stewart, of Perth are seeking incorporation as the New Brunswick Produce Company, Limited, with a capital of $49,000; to carry on a general produce and lumber business and to build and operate cheese and butter factories. Perth is to be the headquarters.

Walter Ashton Prichard, for the past six years representative of the Lake-of-the-Woods Milling Company, in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, died in St. John on August 10 after an illness of some months. Mr. Prichard was a son of the late Gilbert R. Prichard and was born in St. John, thirty-six years ago. He was identified with the grocery business here for a number of years as chief clerk with James Collins and on leaving there accepted a position with the Lake-of-the-Woods Co. He was a young man of exemplary character and had hosts of friends wherever he was known. He leaves a wife, formerly Miss Ada B. Troop, and one son. The funeral was held on Aug. 12 and was very largely attended.

Much sympathy has been expressed for G. F. H. Buerhaus, manager of the Welcome Soap Company, on account of the death of his six-year-old son, Charles, which occurred August 7.

The death occurred at Centreville, Carleton County, last week, of George F. Simonson, for many years a merchant in St. John and latterly proprietor of the Apohaqui Mineral Springs.

David G. Smith, for several years fishery commissioner of New Brunswick, died in New York on Aug. 9 after a brief illness. He is survived by his wife. Burial was made in St. Stephen.

The Board of Health are enforcing the law recently made compelling all milk vendors in the city to wash their cans before sending them back to the country. Last week a number of dealers were before the court and arrangements were made to have the law complied with. The health authorities claimed that epidemics of disease had been traced to a polluted milk supply and for the protection of the public the vendors should be compelled to observe the law. The cases were allowed to stand pending an arrangement for washing the cans. The West India steamer, Dahome, which arrived from Bermuda on August 8, brought a large cargo of molasses and sugar. There were 2000 bags of sugar for Toronto merchants.

The general store of F. C. Taylor, at Blissville, Sunbury County, was entered by burglars on August 2 and goods to the value of $50 carried away.

The sardine war between Charlotte County fishermen and Eastport buyers remains unsettled and the outlook for a successful arrangement seems very remote at the present time.

The meetings of the Agricultural Commission adjourned during the haying season, will be resumed about August 15. Restigouche, Gloucester and Northumberland Counties will be visited.

The fishermen's and wiermen's picnic held at St. George on August 10 was largely attended and very successful.

GEORGETOWN, P. E. I.

August 15.—Business this week has been good. After the rain of last week, followed by hot weather, everybody is feeling good and things are going along with a swing.

Black raspberries and some late cherries are retailing at ten cents per basket; blueberries at six and seven cents. Oranges are high, but there are some very good ones on the market. Bananas are plentiful and in good demand. Butter has dropped to twenty cents per pound. Eggs are going up and are bringing eighteen cents. This is the highest price ever paid for eggs so early in the season and the prospects are that they will go even higher in a very short time.

Daniel Skinner has opened a grocery store in the building recently vacated by John Knight.

Fresh meats are very high and so scarce that carloads of cattle have to be imported from Ontario.

A few fresh mackerel are on the market and retail at fifteen cents each. Gaspereaux are fairly plentiful and bring ten cents per dozen.

Russel R. Maclean, of A. Maclean & Co., has just returned from a pleasant week's vacation in Halifax.

A neat little booklet has been published by Bovril which contains some interesting information on the many uses to which this fluid beef can be put. There are many recipes given which will be appreciated by the housewife. These booklets are being distributed among the trade and any grocer can secure a supply on writing to Bovril, Montreal, and mentioning the Canadian Grocer to show that he is in the business.

Trade Doings in Ontario

A "Midnight" Picnic at Guelph—Hamilton Grocers Planning Their "Hump" —Dear Pototoes in Ottawa— Observations From Kingston.

GUELPH.

August 17.—H. Walker, of H. Walker & Son, with his wife and Miss Walker, have returned from their tour of the old land. They had a very pleasant trip back from Glasgow on the Athenian and all came back in the best of health. Mr. Walker says he enjoyed the visit to old Scotland. The party spent the greater portion of the time in the land where Mr. Walker was brought up. Here they received a most hearty reception. They spent some time in London and also took a trip to Paris.

Rod Young, of Young's, Limited, Hamilton, and Chas. Zinker of McCormick's, London, were in town this week apologizing for not having been here during Old Home week, and incidentally doing some business.

The grocery business continues to be very quiet after the Old Home week, and because the farmers are all so busy harvesting.

Henry Waldman, of D. E. McDonald & Bros., has quite a novelty in the shape of a lemon tree, grown from an ordinary lemon seed. The tree stands about seven feet high and is twelve years old. Mr. Waldman certainly deserves credit for his patience and perseverance in looking after it. The tree at first came up in a sort of prong shape and had to be divided at the ring, which practically makes two trees. It makes a beautiful tree and it is worth any person's time who is a lover of vegetation to give it a trial.

Through eating sardines from a tin a family named Brandon, on Victoria St., were afflicted with ptomaine poisoning this week. They were so seriously poisoned that Dr. McLean had great difficulty in bringing them all around again. Happily all have recovered.

Boil the city water is the latest order from the medical health officer on account of typhoid germs. He might have added, put a little of some famous blend of tea in it to add to the flavor.

We have had some very heavy electric storms the past week, accompanied with a great deal of rain, which has done considerable damage to standing grain.

There was a good, lively market on Saturday, with a big supply of butter, eggs, and particularly vegetables and fruits. There was as well a good, fair demand, but hardly up to the supply, with the result that there was a continued falling off in prices. Eggs dropped to 18c and butter as low as 20c; chickens from 60c to 95c a pair, and potatoes to 60c a bushel. Tomatoes are a fine sample for the early variety, but only brought from 20c to 25c a basket. Peaches and plums are coming along fine also.

The city council have about decided to leave the electric lights that were put up on Wyndham Street for Old Home week to remain and to be used on special occasions and on Saturday nights. The latter will be a great boon to the merchants on the main street and to the public for shopping purposes.

The latest winter fair report is that Guelph, after voting $10,000 for an additi... will have to put up another $15,000, or, since now the election is over the Ontario Government cannot see their way clear to spend any more this year.

Necessity is the mother of invention and when on account of the lack of a universal Thursday half-holiday it looked as if the annual J. A. McCrea & Son staff picnic could not be held; It was decided to hold it in the evening and call it the above name. They did not start at midnight. Oh, no. The cariole left the front of the noted tea store just shortly after six and after a delightful drive through the rain-freshened country, arrived at the home of Harry Barton, on the Brock road. The girls had brought a bounteous supper, and soon the large dining room looked like a Board of Trade banquet. It was intended at first to have the supper in the orchard, but on account of the rain this had to be abandoned. After supper the hours slipped swiftly away in games, songs, dancing, etc., until midnight, when the crowd gathered around Mr. and Mrs. Barton, and after R. J. E. McCrea made a short speech, thanking the host and hostess for their most generous hospitality, the jolly crowd drove home. They all declare they had fully as good, if not a better time, than at last year's staff picnic at Puslinch Lake.

CHATHAM.

August 17.—The big picnic has been postponed. It is only for a week, however. Last week the local merchants held a conference with Supt. Fitch of the C.W. & L.E., when the latter asked for a week's postponement, to make sure that the Charing Cross subway would be completed in time. The completion of the subway will leave the road free to use their full complement of cars, and the handling of the crowds will be much facilitated. The extra week will give the merchants time, also, to still further boom the picnic. When it is finally pulled off on Aug. 27th, it will be all the bigger success for the short delay. The prize list continues to expand steadily.

Wilfred McCorvie, of John McCorvie & Son, has received word from his father and mother who are touring the Old Country. When last heard from Mr. and Mrs. McCorvie were near the Mull of Cantyre, whence came the original McCorvies. After completing their Scottish tour, they will visit Ireland.

Burnie & Co. are evidently permanent additions to the ranks of advertising grocers in the Maple City. They are running some attractive talks with the public at present.

John Edmondson has added a handsome window show case to the equipment of his meat shop on St. Clair street. Smoked meats, interspersed with cooling chunks of ice, make a tasty display. Incidentally, preparations are under way for laying a new granolithic walk on that side of St. Clair street, which numbers two meat shops and three groceries in the space of one short block.

P. B. McQueen, local manager of the Bradley Store, is in a jubilant mood. Providence, uncertain whether he desired a boy or a girl, sent both.

Ray H. King has been appointed a salesman for the Chatham Fruit Growers' Association. He left to-day for the Canadian West, where he will spend four months in pushing the association's goods.

The butter-dish and berry-box factory at Rodney is to be enlarged this fall, new machinery being added. It is intended to run all the year round.

The pickling and canning season is now on. The Bradley Store this week has a good pickling window. The window was carpeted with mixed spice in bulk. In the background a small show case contained two large glass jars of white wine vinegar, while the foreground had mustard, cloves and various other pickling essentials. The side window was devoted to rubbers. The display was a very comprehensive one, and naturally attractive to the housekeeper at the catsup and chili sauce season. Simultaneously, the store advertised the articles displayed.

Wm. Anderson, the hustling president of the local R.M.A., was holidaying last week at Erieau. He was to have taken a week, but Chatham's claims on him were so insistent that he got only four days out of the seven.

Fred Ward, of H. A. Andrew's grocery, has returned to his duties after a few days' holiday at Erieau.

Wm. Potter, J.P., is taking a spell as acting county magistrate in the absence of Magistrate Houston. The Queen street grocer sits very gracefully on the judicial bench and takes the title of "your honor" with becoming dignity.

Tobacco buyers, after a long period of dullness, are showing exceptional activity, both in this county and in Essex. In Leamington alone Gregory Bros. paid out about $10,000 last Thursday, though the samples are said to have been of only medium quality. Despite the extensive purchases, two-thirds of last year's crop remains to be marketed. Reports indicate that this year's crop, though the acreage is small, will be of unusually high quality. The Virginia leaf is being successfully grown this year in Colchester Township.

Jeff. J. Foster has bought out the Smith grocery at Leamington and is now in possession.

Richard Laird, London Road, has purchased the butcher business of D. McIntyre, Wyoming, who has been compelled by ill health to discontinue. Mr. Laird took possession last Monday.

The canning factories in this vicinity, which have been busy on beans for some time, are now canning tomatoes. The latter are reported plentiful.

A. J. Holland, who has been in the grocery business at Blenheim for some time past, left last week for Colorado, for the benefit of his health. He was accompanied by his brother, Orville.

John S. Gesner will open an up-to-date grocery in a week or ten days in Ridgetown, in the premises formerly occupied by M. Macfarlane.

The Ridgetown Canning Factory may yet materialize. The town authorities have received word from the promoters asking the town to delay action in the enforcement of their bond, coupled with the assurance that the factory would be well under way by August 1, 1909.

A conference will be held between the parties.

Harry W. Jacques, who has for several years conducted a grocery at the corner of Raleigh and Cross streets, today made an assignment to G. W. Sulman. The creditors' meeting takes place in this city on August 25, at 2 o'clock. September 15 is fixed as the date of distribution. It is a noteworthy fact that this is the first failure which has occurred in the grocery business in nearly a year, despite all the "hard times" talk of last winter. Mr. Jacques is a popular young man and seemed to be doing a good business. His friends hope that his affairs may be so arranged that he can continue.

Grocers the wide world over will read with keen delight of the tragedy which recently befell a Chathamite who whenever he enters a grocery store always makes it a point to grab a little bite to eat. The gentleman wears glasses and is a trifle near sighted. Saturday, on entering a King street store, he spied a barrel of crackers. While giving his order for five cents' worth of soap to be sent down on the delivery wagon, he walked across to the cracker barrel and helped himself. Simultaneously his mouth flew open and the handful of crackers vanished. The next instant the unfortunate was spluttering violently and tearfully over what turned out to be a mouthful of soap chips.

KINGSTON.

August 17.—Fred Vanluven, grocer, of Kingston, and his brother, Robert, grocer, of Smith's Falls, have been rusticating at the home of their mother at Battersea. They have some big fish tales to tell. They caught some fine bass on the famous Lougboro Lake.

Since Fred sold out he has gained in weight and looks. I tell you the best remedy when you are run down is to quit and run up. Fresh air and sunshine are better than bottled nostrums.

The Jell-O man has been telling the people of the superiority of his products. It is taking well. Quality counts, especially when they tell it through The Grocer. They are demonstrating at James Redden & Co.'s.

Some mean man out for mischief daubed paint all over A. E. Hirod's sign last week. Mr. Hirod feels indignant and offers $50 for information leading to the arrest of the offender.

Civic Holiday is over and next to the grocers' picnic it was the biggest event in years. Bert Robertson, traveler for Geo. Robertson & Son, was the leading spirit. The Comfort Soap race was, as usual, a taking part of the programme. There were at least 4,000 people on the grounds.

The city is fairly glutted with fruits, blueberries selling at $1.80 a box, 50c a pail. Tomatoes 50c a bushel and so on.

The merchants are, as usual, kicking about slow pay people, especially those who have lots of money out at interest, but who hate to draw a cent to pay the man who gives them nourishing food and drink and works hard for the little profit he makes. And these people are terribly indignant if you tell them you need what belongs to you. An example of what can be done by selling for cash only is evident at Gananoque. Go into Smith Bros.' store, who bought out Sam Wilson, and you will find them busy as bees. No books to bother them, no disputed accounts, no balances except to their credit in the bank. Yes, cash is king.

James Shearer, of Orkney, Scotland, and lately employed with Tyler & Co., London, Ont., is at present in the employ of J. Gilbert. He has been out since May, 1907, and is well pleased with Canada.

Occasionally a man comes up from Montreal and has a snap in lemons or oranges and it generally turns out a lot of spotted stock to help fill the refuse barrel. Kingston merchants, and I suppose other places, got a dose of such last week. It would be well to ship such stuff back at once. If a man tries to pass a counterfeit bill he is sent to the penitentiary to think over it, but he is no worse than the man who sells bad fruit. Yes, it's wonderful how some men can stand and lie.

Spices, spices! Look up your stock. Package spices are becoming popular. Saves time and worry, for nothing is so annoying when you are busy as to have a woman come in with a ketchup recipe, an ounce of this and a half-ounce of that and so on.

How about canned goods? Will they go up or will they come down? Well, yes, I guess it depends on the supply and demand. Buy as you go is a good rule. You may strike it once and miss it twice.

The cholocate and bon bon fiends are around already booking orders for Xmax. I set the dog on two to-day for I don't want to think or talk about frost and snow yet. It is preposterous.

Once in a while a scarcity occurs in fruit then everybody orders and on this account a glut was on Saturday. Blackberries sold for $1 a dozen, corn, 7c a dozen; apples, $1 a barrel. One farmer offered Jim, the grocer, five bushels of apples for nothing. Jim said he had no use for them.

Some clerks become very popular with customers by giving tips in the form of over-weight and measure. Any clerk who acts thus to make himself popular at his employer's expense is a thief and a robber. Clerks should do for their employers as they would for themselves. Such clerks are becoming rare. Why?

When you want a junior now and put your ad. in a local paper, you generally have a lot of applications from business college graduates. As a rule they want to begin at the top, while the merchant generally wants one to begin in the cellar and storehouse or take a turn on the wagon. These are the kind that make good clerks, the kind that takes an interest, the kind who do everything to bring trade to their master and the kind who succeed where others fail.

Geo. Thompson, ginger ale manufacturer, has installed new machinery in his factory. Geo. was a grocer. He believes that as good an article can be put up in Canada as in the Mother Country. His business is growing.

A new commission house is talked of. Two young business men are considering it. If they can secure some good agencies it will likely be established.

WOODSTOCK.

August 17.—H. P. Meyers, who for the past two years has conducted a grocery store in Norwich, has rented a store in Woodstock, and announces that he will open for business in about a week. "Everything for the table" is what he says will be his motto, and if he lives up to it as an up-to-date grocer should, his store should attract its due proportion of business, though there are already a large number of stores in the city. Mr. Meyers was a member of the Norwich Musical Society and his removal from that flourishing town was a distinct loss to musical circles.

An unique entertainment is to be held at old St. Paul's church this week. It is announced that Dr. A. B. Welford will give an address on "The Busy Bee," telling the methods by which they make honey, and showing how it is extracted from the comb. Fewer than one would think have any knowledge of these matters, and the entertainment will doubtless be one of much interest.

Oxford county farmers are busy harvesting good crops, and this is a pretty sure sign of better trade conditions. If the farmers have good crops it means more money in circulation, and a corresponding benefit to everybody.

LONDON.

August 17.—Wholesale business is good and payments are fair. Sugars and coffees are unchanged. Japan teas are very firm, prices keep high and the supply is short. In China teas not much is doing. Trade in Ceylon and India teas is improving and prices are easier on lower grades. California fruits are rising in price owing to the great drought and intense heat, the thermometer registering as high as 110 in the shade. Last week prices advanced three times.

Retail trade continues fair.

Retailers who should know better are said to be cutting prices of salmon, selling Maple Leaf for 18c a can. Other dealers threaten to cut in other goods unless the practice complained of is soon stopped.

Ex-President Harry Ranahan, of the Retail Grocers' Association, is more pronounced than ever in favor of interprovincial organization by the retail grocery trade. "If," said he, in course of conversation with your correspondent "we had had such organization we would have been in a position to talk to the wholesalers regarding their changes as to time and discounts in a way that they would have had to listen to us. As it was, they simply laughed at us." Mr. Ranahan, it will be remembered, strongly advocated the holding here this summer of a grand union grocers' picnic. By that means grocers from all over the country would have been brought to the city, and organization such as he advocates would have been made easy.

Complaint is still made by grocers of short measure on the market here, the Retail Grocers' Association finding it most difficult to watch offenders, It is not unlikely that a move will be made to induce the city council to enact a by-law compelling all dealers to sell by weight.

At the last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association it was decided to hold a big picnic at Springbank the last Wednesday of this month, the 26th. Last year a similar picnic was attended by one of the largest crowds that ever gathered at Springbank, and this year's outing, it is expected, will be equally successful.

A feature of the day will be a baseball game between the grocers of the north against those of the south end of the city, Dundas Street being the dividing line. A cup has been donated for this game by S. Screaton, manager of the Lee Pickling and Preserving Company. The cup will have to be won three times to become the property of either side. Cyril Hayes will captain the north side team, and J. T. May the southern team. The following committees were appointed: Sports, E. E. Linnell, C. Young, F. Paull, T. Vincent, J. Wyckoff, J. Henderson, T. Shaw and C. Hayes; refreshments, F. Travers and H. S. Marshall; transportation, E. J. Ryan, J. Diprose, G. McCormick and T. Shaw. The judges will be picked from the members of the different wholesale firms and the city travelers who are in attendance. Market Clerk C. Maker will act as starter.

BARRIE.

August 18.—On Saturday last the local market was not very brisk, owing to the fine weather, and the farmer taking advantage of the "make hay while the sun shines" problem did not make his appearance in large numbers. Butter was firm and sold at 20 to 22c a pound. Eggs were easier and sold at 17c to 18c a dozen. Spring chickens sold by the pair at 60c to 75c, or from 12½c to 15c a pound, and fowl at 8c a pound. The first appearance of spring ducks brought $1.00 a pair. Potatoes went away off and sold as low as 50c a bag, while 60c and 75c were paid. A large amount of green corn sold at 8c and 10c a dozen. Apples were very plentiful and sold at from 50c to $1.00 a barrel for early harvest varieties.

R. R. Bothwell returned last week from a week's holidays up on the Muskoka Lakes.

Our local "grip men" are again busy after their two weeks' vacation, and look greatly improved after it.

J. J. Brown has just about finished his fine two-storey double store building, having built these stores for renting, and judging from the situation and sizes they should not lay idle.

One of our largest local millers has this week notified his customers of a raise of twenty-five cents a barrel on all grades of flour.

John Milne, of Eby-Blain Co., Toronto, is again on the road and was in this week to see your correspondent.

On Wednesday night last week thieves entered a window in the rear of J. Emmes' grocery. The parties, however, got little for their trouble as the proprietor missed nothing but two dollars' worth of coppers, the contents of the till, and a few tins of sardines.

This week fruit was very plentiful along the street and never before at this time of year was there such an abundance of basket fruit such as tomatoes, plums, peaches, etc. Tomatoes are now selling at 25c to 35c a basket. Plums sold at 50c to 60c; peaches, 60c to 75c. Canadian lopes are now plentiful and are fine and large, selling at 10c to 25c each. Lawton berries are about done and are selling at 10c to 12½c a box. Huckleberries are also about over and are selling at $1.25 a basket or 12½c a quart. Table plums are selling at 10c a quart. Canadian peaches 10c and 15c a dozen; Californias from 20c to 50c a dozen; pears, 20c to 40c a dozen; watermelons, 35c and 40c.

Wm. Loan was in town last week representing the Horton Cato Co., of Detroit. Billie is an old Barrie boy, having learned all about groceries with J. M. Bothwell, whom he was with for about fifteen years. We wish him all kinds of success in his new field.

ST. THOMAS.

August 18.—General regret was expressed on all sides at the Civic holiday Oddfellows' demonstration at Pinafore park being stopped by the heavy rain, which fell that afternoon. The grocers had a very busy week and are well pleased with results. Come again, boys.

The mayor has not signed the new market fee by-law, and stated that he did not know when he would, so it may be some time before the same is enforced, if ever. It certainly would be a step backward.

Only two more Wednesday half-holidays this year. On Civic holiday, Wednesday forenoon, all the grocers in the west end, with but one exception, were closed, while in the east end mostly all were open. It is regrettable that a more loyal observance of the holidays does not exist, and this could easily be remedied if the offenders were properly looked after.

The ten-cent drop in the price of sugar has not affected the retail price, and the demand from now on, owing to the heavy local supply of plums, pears, etc., will be greatly stimulated and thus benefit the trade. Dairy butter took quite a jump in price on Saturday last, from 25c to 28c, possibly owing to the advent of the M.C.R. pay car. Creamery prints still retail at 29c, with ample supplies and good demand.

The places of the four or five striking C.P.R. mechanics who reside here have been already filled by outsiders, and they are at present out of their positions. As the grocers who do a credit business are usually the heaviest losers by such strikes it is to be hoped that this one will soon be amicably settled.

HAMILTON.

August 18.—These hot days people are again aroused at the dog nuisance. Respectable grocers are put to a very serious inconvenience by the depredations of not only the ill-bred and ill-mannered cur, but the aristocratic pup which follows the fashionable lady in her shopping expeditions. Why this nuisance is allowed by the law is a question that remains unanswered. I notice by the Toronto papers that the council of that city have passed a law that no dogs shall be allowed on the streets unless muzzled or led. It would be a great boon to law-abiding citizens if the police would collect the whole bunch and take them to the crematory. They are a perfect terror to all cleanly people, and why the majority should suffer for the whim of a few persons who think it necessary to keep a dog is a conundrum that the average grocer is not prepared to answer.

I see the Beekeepers have held their annual convention, and among other business transacted was fixing the price of honey to the trade. Now this looks to me very much like breaking the law. According to a Dominion Act, they are liable to fine and imprisonment for forming a combine to fix prices. Probably the law was made for grocers and plumbers, and is not intended to reach the horney-handed farmer who seems in this age to be very much on top.

The Retail Grocers' Association, always doing things no one else ever thinks of, are now making preparations for another unique event, the annual "Hump," which will take place on Wednesday, August 26, the last half-holiday of the year. The party will leave Hamilton by steamer and proceed via the canal to Oaklands, where a series of games will be run off. Returning, a lunch will be served on the boat, and a sail taken through the canal. A party of Brantford grocers is expected to be along, and a really bully time will certainly be enjoyed.

BERLIN.

August 18.—Despite the arguments advanced by a deputation from the Retail Merchants' Association, the City Council has reduced the transient traders' fee from $200 to $50. The merchants contended that $50 was too low to prevent protection from fakirs and outsiders, prone to come in and stay only a few months, carrying off the cream of the trade, while the merchant who is here helping to build up the town has to pay a higher rate of taxation. The aldermen, however, took the view that $50 was a large enough fee to accomplish the end in view.

Notwithstanding the advent of about half a dozen Italian and Greek fruit dealers, local grocers report very successful business in this line thus far this season. There is considerable feeling against these foreigners who seldom become valuable citizens, but that this attitude is not universal, is evidenced by the fact that all are evidently doing a flourishing business.

EASTERN FRUIT FOR B. C.

That there is room for decided improvement in the methods of shipping fruit to Western Canada from the eastern markets, and that such business is well worth developing, is conclusively demonstrated in the following letter which was received this week from a gentleman in Vancouver who is quite well conversant with market conditions not only in that city, but on the coast as well. The matters cited deserve the attention of fruit shippers in Eastern Canada:

"Canadian fruit growers seem to be neglecting their opportunity of developing a market here. At present all the small fruits are coming in via Duluth, with probably just as long a haul from the producing centre as the Canadian fruit would have. One of our leading grocers stated that every season he had got in a trial shipment of eastern fruit, strawberries, raspberries and cherries, and other small fruits. Almost without exception every shipment was spoiled, with the exception of cherries. For this he blames the eastern shippers, partly for not packing so carefully as the American growers and partly for shipping the fruit when it is too ripe. Each year he has been expecting that there might be an improvement, but the experience of this season has only been a repetition of former years. He believes that if the trade were carefully fostered and shipments were sent in good condition, business would soon be done by the carload to these points.

PURE FOOD LAWS.

Another interesting special on the pure food question—which as has been pointed out in these columns will before long have to be seriously dealt with in Canada—will be found in another column. It describes the practical experiments that have been carried out in the United States with various foods and preservatives. That country is dealing with the matter in a most effective way. Canada has just begun to do something practical, but there can be no doubt that before long the professional politicians here will begin to dabble in the question and much will be heard of it. It is important that something should be done but the trade must watch developments closely to prevent stupid but serious interference with business. Grocers should favor any just laws in the interests of pure food, but the experience in every State across the border is that proposed laws tend towards hampering retail trade rather than purer food. Even in Canada our inadequate law has been enforced against the innocent merchant while the guilty manufacturer has gone unpunished.

The Dominion Grocers' Exchange and local retail associations and food manufacturers ought to initiate the campaign in Canada, instead of being put on the defensive by the professional agitators when the time seems auspicious to them.

DO GROCERS BUY INFERIOR CHEESE.

J. A. Ruddick, Chief Dairy Commissioner for Canada, says two-thirds of the country's dairy product is used in Canada. This includes mostly milk and butter. The best cheese is exported the Canadian grocers buying the culls, which are either inferior or green cheese. Hence the ordinary householder scarcely knows the taste of really good cheese. Mr. Ruddick seems to blame the grocers. If they were particular in buying only first grade cheese the people would be educated into refusing inferior qualities. The difference between good cheese and bad is the same as in any other article. Canadians, Mr. Ruddick says, should have the best quality cheese as one means of building up a larger home trade.

GET ACQUAINTED.

Your competitor does not wear horns. A great many gray hairs are brought out on the heads of business men because of worrying about what competition will do, and especially some one particular competitor. It seems there is always one competitor who is more to be dreaded than all the rest. One who tries to sell his goods at cost, or is especially obnoxious in some other way.

Probably you have been getting all your information about this competitor from certain customers, and if that is the case you can bet that it has been colored up to make your competitor appear much worse than he really is, and about nine times out of ten you can also bet the same customer is telling like stories about you to that same competitor.

Just contract the habit of paying no attention to such information, but get acquainted with "the animal," so you can base your judgment on something more than rumor of the worst kind. Tell him that you have heard so many unreasonable reports about him that you would like to know about what he really was and was not doing. He will more than likely meet you at least halfway in friendliness and then you can talk over trade abuses and get together generally.

PATRONIZE YOUR LOCAL PRINTER

Retail merchants, particularly in the smaller towns, are more than any one else interested in the matter of home patronage. With this in view isn't it rather peculiar that they are often the first persons to go out of their town for printing, or rather, allow their work to be gobbled up by the smooth solicitor of some out of town concern? This is no imaginative affair, either. Such a thing happens almost every day in nearly every Canadian town.

Along about November, for instance, along comes a solicitor with a gaily-gotten-up calendar, which he offers at bargain prices for hundred lots for Christmas gifts for your customers. In a good many cases the offer is accepted.

At another time another man from a similar firm offers special prices on letter heads, statements, or advertising circulars.

These are things which ought to go to the local printer. The merchant should practice the policy of home patronage to the last notch, and he will find, too, that it will usually pay in the end. Ten chances to one, if you get him to figure closely, the local printer can pretty nearly meet the prices on the calendars, particularly if you buy them in quantity. He'll get you just as good a line of samples, too, if he's up-to-date, and he surely ought to be.

Your letter heads and statements, too, ought to be printed at home. It means a mighty heavy knock to a merchant's home patronage talk if his stationery goes out to his customers bearing the imprint of a city or out-of-town printing firm.

So far as counter pads, checking books and the like are concerned, the large houses which specialize in these have facilities and can quote prices with which the local printer cannot readily compete, but so far as general work is concerned he should be given a chance at least to figure on it.

HOW THE TRADE PAPER EXCELS.

A little item which appeared in several of the Toronto dailies on Wednesday of this week illustrates very forcibly the superiority of the trade paper over the general newspaper in reporting the news of its special field.

The item in question spoke of the keen competition among the "consolidated" and independent canners this season, and gave the supposedly new news that prices on corn and tomatoes are 30 cents a dozen less than last year.

This information was nothing new to readers of The Grocer. The prices the item refers to were announced some eight weeks ago, at that time were quoted in detail in this paper, and the whole situation summarized more comprehensively and definitely than the dailies have done in the present instance. This illustration only shows how much more thoroughly the trade paper covers its field and how valuable it is to the members of the trade it represents.

ADOPTING CASH BUSINESS.

If a merchant feels that he is in a position to change from credit to cash; if he is assured that he is located in the right kind of a community; if he feels that his customers can and will pay cash, it would seem advisable for him to change to a strictly cash basis. But he shouldn't make the change until he has looked carefully into the matter. He shouldn't do so, anyway, until he has mapped out a plan of procedure and knows just how he is going about it and just what he is going to do, and the reasons he is going to give, for selling for cash in future. Hasty action is most inadvisable, for such a change in method of selling groceries or other merchandise is very important and every step should therefore, be very carefully considered.

Perhaps the most important step to be taken is the making of the announcement. This should be very carefully prepared, after mature thought. The reasons for the change should be fully stated; the value of the customer's patronage should be dwelt upon at length; your ability to sell at lower prices should be pointed out and impressed on the housewife's mind. Then, after the issuance of the proper sort of an announcement, there is the matter of advertising, for to make a big success of a strictly cash business the merchant will find it necessary to advertise as generously as his means will permit.

The cash grocer profits by making his ads. his salesmen; by making them talk quality and prices. Persistent advertising will be necessary—in these days he who gets the largest share of the trade is the one who goes after it the hardest.

There is one thing to be always borne in mind by the grocer selling for cash, and that is that no matter if he is selling cheaper than before he commenced selling on a strictly cash basis, no matter how good an article he has to offer his public, if he doesn't let them know about it through advertising, he can never attain the full measure of success in the cash business.

THEY DID NOT ADVERTISE.

The statement that advertising pays is now generally accepted without a doubt. As a proof of it, however, it may be pointed out that non-advertising produces failure. The following item from the Buffalo News clearly shows that notwithstanding the fact that a firm may have the most modern stores, without newspaper advertising the business cannot succeed and will, sooner or later, result in absolute failure:

"The William L. Davies Company, which operated a chain of meat markets in Buffalo, has quit business here. The Davies Company embarked in business in Buffalo three or four years ago and opened up meat markets with a little more marble and nickle than is ordinary and endeavored to give a tone to its stores. Lately it has had stores at 1374 Main street, 79 Grant street, 1315 Jefferson street and 314 Connecticut street.

"It is stated that the company found its business unprofitable and decided to give up the fight. The men in the Davies Company for the most part are Canadians. The only local stockholder is Loran L. Lewis, Jr., attorney for the company, who held a small block of stock to qualify as a resident director. Mr. Lewis is out of town. Mr. Porter, the managing officer of the company, has been in and out of Buffalo the past few days closing its affairs. He is in Toronto to-day.

"One of the policies of the Davies Company was not to use newspaper advertising. Its other ideas were good, clean stores and attractive dish displays."

The lesson is obvious. Business men should advertise steadily, systematically and persistently. Of course it is necessary to use space in papers having large circulations and covering the entire district in which they are published. These facts being observed, the increase of business is certain.—St. Catharines Standard.

TOMATO COMBINE IN NOVA SCOTIA.

A combine is said to have been formed in Nova Scotia this season, to control the price and shipments of tomatoes. The deal, it is stated, was put through by the head of a canning factory in the Province, and there promise to be some interesting developments before the season is over. All the large tomato growers have entered the pact and it is stated that the promoter has agreed to take off their hands and use in his factory all the tomatoes that those in the combine are not able to handle. The main object of the organization is said to be to keep the price up, and it will probably be from fifty to one hundred per cent. higher than other seasons.

All the small dealers in Halifax have been squeezed out, and shipments will only be made to four of the large produce dealers in the city, who were taken into the combine. They were unwillingly forced into it, as otherwise they would not have been able to procure sufficient tomatoes to supply their customers. The growers, however, are not going to have things all their own way. Some of the dealers in Halifax outside of the combine, who have handled large quantities of tomatoes in the past, have notified the growers that unless they send them tomatoes as usual, they will not handle their apples. What effect this will have remains to be seen. The class of apples these growers send in can only be handled profitably by the firms not in the combine.

The development of this peculiar situation will be watched with interest in all parts of the country.

Any grocer visiting Toronto during the Exhibition, or at any other time, will be made most welcome if he calls at the warehouse of the "Salada" Tea Co., and if he can spare a quarter of an hour it will be made most interesting by a walk through the different departments. He will see the most modern way of handling tea, the nearly human electric weighing machines, the packing machines (one of which, with two men working it, packs over one million pounds of tea yearly), the labeling machines, the nailing machines, and the cleanliness and tidiness of everything will please him.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Fruits—Declined.
Sugar—Steady.
Dried Fruits—Slight advance.
Cheese—Advanced.

Montreal, August 20, 1908,

The past week has been a fairly good one generally in business circles. August has never been looked upon as a very lively time, so taking this fact into consideration the present conditions are rather good. Remittances are reported good, which is a good indication. There have not been many changes in the market during the past week, things in general preserving a preety even tone. Perhaps the one exception to this statement is cheese, which has been soaring considerably lately. Sugar is steady and unchanged in price. Everyone is looking forward to the harvest in the Canadian west, which will, if expectations come true, have to go to many quarters of the globe where it has not been before, on account of the shortage in some of the other wheat-producing countries. An apparent case of "shipping coals to Newcastle" seems to be involved in the shipment of wheat to Russia, which is a great wheat-growing country itself. Lately it has been discovered that Canada grows wheat admirably suited to the manufacture of macaroni; therefore the shortage of wheat in Europe, and increase in the consumption of macaroni has led to Canadian shipment being made to the continent in larger quantity than heretofore.

SUGAR—This market has presented no new features during the week and trade is slow for this time of the year. The market is steady and unchanged as to prices.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—There is not much activity being shown in this market. Canned salmon is fairly brisk, the scarcity and high price influencing buyers, while meats are neglected. Canned fruits, which have had a good sale up to now, are much quieter this week, owing to the fresh stock now on the market. Vegetables are very much neglected. Deliveries of early lines of new pack goods continue to be made.

TORONTO—Business is more active than for several weeks, particularly in fruits and vegetables. Jobbers are buying somewhat heavily and retailers who have been holding off somewhat, are sending in good-sized orders for future and immediate delivery. Local sellers are receiving large orders from the West, some of these being occasioned by the Fernie disaster.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Easier.
California Fruits—Firmer.
Canned Goods—More interest displayed
Collections—Better.

Toronto, August 20, 1908.

Though business generally continues on the quiet side, a few lines are showing more activity and are helping to keep things bright. Some firms, indeed, report an exceedingly good week and in some quarters matters do seem to be brightening up to an appreciable extent. This is noticeable too from travelers' reports. The assurance of the magnificent western crop is already seeming to have some little effect and there is a good undertone to trade conditions that promises well for fall business.

Staple grocery markets have been very quiet during the week and beyond an easier feeling in sugar, and active business in canned goods, and a firmer feel-in California dried fruits there is little to write about.

Collections are improving to some small extent and what business is being done is assuredly on a pretty satisfactory basis.

SUGAR—The amount of business passing is very disappointing and things are reported very slow by all jobbers. The recent decline seems to have been a damper rather than a stimulator, and the markets which were expected to be strong at the lower price, are somewhat surprisingly weaker. While another decline in Canadian refined does not seem at all likely it is within possibilities, considering the present state of the markets. One large interest in New York declined five cents yesterday, and the others will likely follow suit. What Canadian refiners will do is hard to estimate, but the market is a waiting one.

Willett & Gray in their weekly report say of the situation in raws :

"European markets, receiving no support from America, declined 1½d to 10s ¾d for old crop (August) beet, the parity of 4.12c for centrifugals, and to 9s 7½d for new crop (October-December) beet, the parity of 4.01c, leaving the premium on old crop still about ⅛c per lb. The close in London was steadier. Refiners have ample supplies for present needs and have provided for their wants well ahead, having secured practically all of the Javas shipped in July and a large proportion of the 140 to 150,000 tons which will be shipped in August, due to arrive before the end of October. Further large supplies will not be required until new crop sugars will be available. Weather conditions in Europe and Cuba continue to favor the growing crops. Our cable advices from Cuba report the total production of the closing season to August 1st as being 934,711 tons sugar, and the stock of sugar in the island on that date as 94,242 tons. Part of this stock will be required for local consumption for the remainder of the year. Indications are that the harvesting of the new Cuban crop will be well under way about the third week in December, or two weeks earlier than last year, but not as early as the year before. The Louisiana crop is progressing well, with prospects of a large outturn. The condition of the American beet crop is quite irregular, but taken as a whole it is fair, and with suitable weather during the next two months, a crop equal to the last is assured."

TEA—Business continues very quiet locally with very little buying by jobbers. Regarding the general situation, Kearley & Tonge, Limited, Colombo, Ceylon, in their July report write: "Large supplies continued during June and although there was considerable improvement in quality from up-country estates, most of the low-country teas were so inferior that many were almost unusable. This large quantity of very inferior stuff depressed the market for common grades, and quotations for lowest teas are ½d. per lb. below those at the beginning of June. The demand for medium and fine teas has been very strong throughout the month, and a firm to dearer market for these grades has resulted.

"In common teas, owing to very large quantities of extremely inferior quality tea, there has been a considerable fall in prices. Low brokens, if carefully selected, show very good value.

"Regarding mediums, all teas with any sign of quality have been in strong demand. Those with tip being firmer, many tippy brokens selling at a rise of ½. to ¾d. per lb. Orange Pekoes were strongly competed for, especially those with quality.

"Fine tea: there were a few fine teas offered during June, all of which were in very strong demand, and sold at extreme prices."

DRIED FRUITS—Business is only fair with interest centred in new crop goods. California dried fruits are becoming very firm, particularly prunes and seeded raisins. What the situation is in prunes may be learned from the following letter from a Portland, Oregon, packer, under date, August 8:

"We have canvassed nearly the entire field and beg to report that the crop is very short, a great deal lighter than was figured. Clarke County, which usually produces 250 to 300 cars, will not have 30 cars this year. In many valley districts the crop is a total failure. After a thorough investigation, we estimate that there will not be over 500 cars of prunes in the Northwest, or about a third of last year's crop. It will take only a short time to clean these up, as a considerable portion has been sold for European shipment already."

According to cable advices received by the Hills Brothers Company, New York, the first shipment of new crop currants will be made on the Martha Washington, leaving Patras on the 29th and due in New York about the middle of September. As this steamer is a passenger boat it is probable that she will carry only about 300 tons of the new fruit. The first cargo steamer of the season is expected to be the Erny, which will be due in New York the end of September or early in October. Prices ruling at present are as follows:

COFFEE—Business continues surprisingly good, and is directly in contrast to the tea trade.

Willett & Gray, reporting on the situation in the primary markets, say:

"The San Paulo Government sent an official cable to the effect that the President had sent to Congress a message requesting permission to issue a loan of £15,000,000, to increase the surtax from 3 to 5 francs per bag and to guarantee the maximum exports from Santos this year not to exceed 9,000,000 bags, next year 9,500,000 bags and thereafter 10,000,000 bags a year during the life of the loan. The loan will not be an increase on their present indebtedness, but it is intended to combine the previous issues as well as all the advances on their coffee. The loan will probably be for 15 years and it will dispel the fears of the trade that any of the government consignments has to be sold. The new laws are likely to go into effect about the 1st of September, and it may be mentioned that the increase of taxes will be confined to Santos and no doubt the Rio holders hope to benefit thereby. It is expected that the current crop is larger than that of either of 1904 or 1905 years, and the opinion is held that Rio and Santos together will furnish about 11,500,000 bags. But even then, the total exports from Brazil during the season are likely to be less than those of last year, as in addition to the crop of 10¼ millions, there were about three million bags in stock in the seaports of Rio and Santos, so the available quantity was 13¼ millions. But, at the beginning of the crop this season the seaport stocks there were less than a million bags, and therefore the available quantity will be only about 12½ millions as compared with 13¼ millions last year. The supplies in this country also are about 600,000 bags less than last year as notwithstanding the largest holders here have been receiving coffee on the exchange for the past sixteen months they have meantime decreased their holdings by some 600,000 bags. The weather continues very cold in Brazil, which is not favorable for the coming crop. If it should turn into real frost it would be very damaging at this time of the year. Consuming markets have bought very little of the new crop so far. Values in Santos are higher than they were a week ago, while in Rio the market is very steady."

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE.

August 19.—The meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, which ordinarily would have been held on Monday evening of this week, was, owing to the absence from the city of a number of the members, postponed till next month. Someone has been busy during the summer working for a larger membership and it is likely that at the next meeting, September 21, quite a number of new members will be received. Several old members who have allowed their interest to wane for some time have been reawakened and are evincing the purpose of taking a fresh hold. Taken altogether, the association should have a pretty good showing at its meetings this fall and winter.

The sub-committee appointed by the Toronto Grocers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association to interview the wholesale grocers and discuss the "discounts" question, met representatives of the wholesalers in one of the committee rooms of the Board of Trade, on Thursday, August 13. The result of the meeting is not yet known. The subcommittee will present its report to the Grocers' Section at the monthly meeting on Monday next, August 24.

The regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocer Clerks' Benefit Association will be held on Tuesday, August 25, at their rooms, Odd Fellows' Hall, 1338 West Queen Street. A number of matters of importance will be dealt with, and the officers request the attendance of all grocery clerks, whether members of the association or not.

W. J. Campbell, of the Perkins, Ince Co., of Toronto, has secured an interest in the Best Stove Co., of Peterboro, and will be connected with that company after the first of September.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, August 20, 1908.)

Orders for supplies of groceries to fill the generous orders from the farming community during harvest, helped to keep the wholesale houses busy during the dog days. Business is showing a considerable increase in activity, and the outlook is particularly bright.

New canned strawberries, lawtonberries, beans and peas are now on the market. There is considerable competition among the various brands of corn, tomatoes and peas, and the situation is being watched with interest by the grocery trade.

CANNED GOODS—As noted above, the new season pack of strawberries, lawtonberries, beans and peas, are now on the market. New packs are being put on every few days, and prices quoted below are now for the 1908 pack. In some lines delivery cannot yet be made. We quote:

EGGS—Supplies are falling off and there has been a sharp advance in the local market. Local produce houses are paying 18c to 18½c per dozen for candled eggs delivered in Winnipeg.

BUTTER—Supplies of dairy butter are not so liberal as they were, owing to the hot weather and the fact that farmers are busy with their preparations for harvest. For round lots the local produce houses are paying 17c per lb., f.o.b., Winnipeg.

WILL DISCUSS LARGE PROBLEMS.

The Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association will hold its annual meeting at the Toronto offices of the association on September 9 and 10, when the various resolutions sent on by the provincial associations at their annual meetings will be dealt with. Among the questions to be discussed are: An amendment to the criminal code; amendment to Division Court Act by cheapening court costs so as to give merchants and manufacturers the same privileges as those enjoyed by organized labor; a plan of campaign against co-operative societies; bad pay reporting lists, and an amendment to the Peddlars' and Transient Traders' Act, as well as some matters of minor importance. It is also the intention of the board to request the Government to appoint a commission from the Department of Trade and Commerce to deal with trade relations between manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers on lines similar to the constitution of the present Railway Commission.

Another important matter to be taken up will be the reorganization of the financial side of the association. The sub-committee of the special committee appointed by the Provincial Board at the recent convention at Galt, has met and investigated the books and is ready to report to the committee, which meets in Toronto at the same time as the Dominion Board.

"Men Who Sell Things"

One Traveler's Story of Failure Throu gh Lack of Persistency—How to Take Advantage of the So-called "Quiet" Periods—Comprehensive Hints Regarding Letter Writing to Customers.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

As a man he was prepossessing in appearance, of pleasing personality, honest, and clean-cut. As a salesman he possessed marked ability and adaptability. He had the best approach and the finest tact, put up the best argument, and closed a deal at the psychological moment, in the neatest manner I have ever witnessed.

In relating to me his experiences one day he said: "I began life without any chance for an education. There was no one to tell me how to begin or what to do to make the most of myself. I know that I am fitted for something better than the work I am doing. I know that I have real ability in my way, but no one has ever told me how to use it to the best permanent advantage. I'm tired of this changing from one thing to another, even though I manage to derive an income better than the average of men engaged in the work of selling things."

He wound up by adding: "Couldn't your firm give me permanent employment on the road? I know I could sell your goods successfully. I have never seen anything that I couldn't sell. If you could make room for me I would commence at three thousand a year and take my chances on advancement with something permanent in view."

A Man Who Made and Lost.

That is the story of a man who made one hundred thousand dollars, made it honestly, and lost it because of the lack of such discipline as would have taught him to focus his mind on some set plan in his life's work.

It is the story of a man eminently talented, and who might have managed a prosperous enterprise of his own, or at least earned a big salary in an executive position or at the head of a large sales organization, but for the fact that he lacked singleness of purpose, oneness in business aspirations, concentration, or whatever you choose to call it that enables a man to stick to a thing until he gets there.

There is another feature in specializing efforts in sales-making that enables the salesman to make a ten-strike, and that is in guiding his customers in the matter of selection. In order to do that successfully, a careful study must be made of general conditions surrounding the line which he is selling, as well as the requirements of those to whom he wishes to sell.

A Recipe for Dull Times.

For instance, some salesmen selling line goods seem to feel that if general conditions are not up to par, there is no chance for immediate sales. Nothing is so far from the facts. This is particularly demonstrated on advance trips where no goods are in immediate demand, and where desire must be created out of whole cloth. I have known bright salesmen to start out with a general line representing their business, only to find a decided apathy on the part of buyers toward their proposition as a whole at that particular time. Did they lie down in despair and write the house that business was dull it was too early, some one else had been out before them, and a host of other lame excuses?

No! They sharpened their wits, and likewise their selling-talk, took a careful survey of things, and then selected a particularly good value or two in some specific pattern or style from their general line; then they pinned their selling-talk down to that until they aroused interest, created desire, and captured resolve, and at the end of the trip they were more than satisfied with results in the aggregate.

In our line I have known it to be so during a "filling-in" season that there was absolutely no desire on the part of the trade for anything in particular, when some bright salesman in the line-up would single out some one thing that had not been especially strong, from among the hundreds in the various departments, and specialize his efforts on that article in every town on the trip, and thus roll up figures on the monthly sales sheet that were even larger than might have been the case in taking orders more widely distributed under more promising circumstances. The customers, too, were satisfied because a new idea had been advanced, and they had something new to talk about to their trade.

After all, the average dealer in the rank-and-file town takes his selling-talk pretty much from his favorite salesman. Did you ever think of that?

The Adversary Time .

Salesmanship is a profession, but it is also a game. Every salesman must play it either poorly or well, and always with the same opponent in the game—Time.

Your opponent waits for nothing—relentlessly he watches the game progress. He clutches his scythe, ready to cut you down. All around you and your adversary Time, there is Success. If your mind is distracted from your work, Time gains a vantage-point.

Thousands of salesmen are saying every day, "If I had my life to live over again I would do thus and so."

The most profitless occupation in the world is to sit idly thinking of what you would do if you had another chance. Forget what is behind. Press forward to the future, which is every man's, to do with as he will!

The game will last as long as you do. Thinking of the foolish plays you have made will not help you to win, unless the experience has taught you how to avoid them and to concentrate your mind on better ones, brushing aside all obstacles. Young salesmen especially need to think much about singleness of purpose, for their temptations are on every hand.

Many young salesmen, and old ones, too, for that matter, act like men lost in the woods, trying to get out without the aid of a compass. They turn to the right and to the left, then go round in a circle, stumbling over logs and entangled underbrush, finally giving up in despair. The road before every salesman is perfectly clear: walk straight ahead to the end of it, and you will come out into the clearing.

Boring for Bed-Rock.

Suppose you were to engage a man to bore a well for you. What would you think of him if he bored a few inches here and a few inches there, and kept on boring down just a little way all over a ten-acre field, never going deep enough to strike water? You would think he ought to have a guardian appointed over him. Well, that is exactly what a great many salesmen are doing. Just boring down through the sub-soil, never striking bed-rock and through and beneath it the sparkling water, Success.

Try one way, but be sure it's a good way, and keep at it, Brother Salesman, until you strike the bed-rock of efficient salesmanship.

Don't let your grim old opponent, Father Time, get there ahead of you and block up the way with his impenetrable chain of lost opportunities.

CHAPTER XV.

Letters to the Trade.

You cannot personally shake hands and jolly up your customers every few days; so the next best thing is to write them personal letters, just as you would talk to them if you were to meet them on the street or in their places of business. Now, isn't that so?

Such letters bring new business and hold old customers.

The Value of a Personal Interest.

Naturally, the more personal talks you can have with your customers, the better; but in between trips write them a heart-to-heart letter now and then, just to make them feel that you are keeping them in mind. It will show that you have a strong personal interest in them, and the results, if watched, will both please and surprise you. Make your letters talk to your customers. Make them believe in your letters just as you want them to believe in you.

Galileo taught that the earth moves around the sun, but was compelled by the Inquisition to renounce the theory. Perhaps you feel a little that way about what your customers might think of your letters; that is because you have not discovered the right way to go about it.

Hints About Letter-Writing.

Letter-writing, like advertising, is the written method of salesmanship. You can make bad salesmanship of it, the same as of personal interviews, if you do not understand and rightly apply the science.

What would you think of a kid-gloved salesman who approached his customers in the manner that he would approach his hostess at an afternoon reception? Well, that is precisely the way in which more than two-thirds of the business letter-writing is done. Such letters often begin with:

"I beg to acknowledge yours of——"

"Replying to your esteemed favor of even date, permit me to say——"

"Your letter of—— is at hand and contents carefully noted."

And they often end with:

"I beg to remain——"

"I am yours——"

These shop-worn types of the customary style should have been relegated to the waste-basket a decade ago. Begin your letters in an easy, natural, conversational way. Have something to write about, and think hard about the best way to write it to attract the sympathy of your customer to your proposition.

Watch Your Style.

Be original in your style. Don't write as a dozen other salesmen that cover your territory are in the habit of doing, in a pointless, stereotyped fashion. Think about your customer; think about what you are going to write, and then write it in a manner that you feel certain will please and interest him.

If you are in the habit of scratching off any old thing the quickest and easiest way, stop to figure out the effect such letters are going to have, if any. Try to realize the great value that it is possible to secure with a little care and study in presenting your subject.

Some salesmen go on the plan that letter-writing is of no avail in helping to increase their sales anyway, and as it is laborious, they let it alone. Ignorance or mental laziness is the foundation of such ideas, aided, perhaps, by a desire to enjoy a game of billiards, or an idle chat with the clerk when the last customer has been called upon and packing is finished. Recreation is necessary and proper, but the salesman in any line who hopes to get on in the world will play only when the last tap of work is finished at the close of each day.

A decade ago commercial letter-writing was deprecated by most business houses as a medium to attract and hold trade. Its use was mainly to cover immediate necessity that could not be adjusted by personal interview. All that has changed with the changing times, and to-day every business institution of any note has a correspondence department in charge of a high-salaried head, who is especially versed in the art of writing the kind of letters calculated to aid in strengthening its connection with its customers, and to assist its sales force in building new business.

It is as necessary to hold as to build. The salesman who fails to get in touch with the head of the correspondence of his house and seek his aid at times is a poor prop for any house to lean upon.

Various Letters and Their Uses.

The most efficient salesman values the backing the house can give him through this department, realizing that his position with his trade is mainly one of aggression, and at times is apt to be misconstrued, no matter how securely he may be intrenched in the confidence of his customers.

A general promotion letter now and then to his trade, bearing the authority of his house, stamps the salesman's efforts, methods and assertions with added power of persuasion.

While a sincere letter of appreciation of favors received, eliminating entirely any flavor of bid for business, at the end of each season, promotes a feeling of good will conducive to the interests of all concerned, and effectually paves the way for stronger and better trade relations.

Although salesmen of more than ordinary success are to be found in many houses, who put their hands up in a know-it-all, self-satisfied sort of way, deprecating support of this kind as unnecessary, if not actually interfering with what they term "their interests," yet he is a wise salesman who encourages it and seeks every opportunity to make free use of it.

"Fixing" the Customer.

The best managed house in the world makes mistakes at times, and mistakes make disgruntled customers. Something goes wrong in the billing department; a piece of goods fails to come up to par; a certain pattern, through the fault of no one, does not turn out exactly as represented; a customer in the house is not given the attention he thinks he should receive; in fact, a dozen things of similar nature are liable to occur in the best regulated establishments, which tend to disquiet this or that customer for the time being. Do what you can to straighten out the kinks, and make sure that there remains no cause of complaint in which your customer may find a reasonable pretext for giving business to a competitor that otherwise might have gone to you. Tell the correspondence man about it, that's what he is there for.

It's your business to sell goods, and you are supposed to know your business. You'd get mad if some one told you you didn't know it, wouldn't you? Well, then, leave the matter of "fixing" the customers in the hands of the man whose business it is to look after that part of the work. Put the same degree of confidence in him that you demand and expect to receive yourself, and see how quickly and nicely all these things will be adjusted.

The Salesman and the House.

"But," says Mr. Salesman of inquiring mind, "if I tell my troubles to the house I may get a letter telling me that the house has troubles of its own, and that I am paid to fix these things for myself."

Do all you can for yourself in fixing the business of your house, no matter how you may be called upon, but when all is said and done to the best of your ability, seek help from headquarters. If your house has a manager that would send you that kind of a reply, and you do not get the sort of help you require, the best thing for that house is to discharge him and get a manager who understands that a fine piece of machinery needs oiling to make it run without friction.

Not only energy is needed in salesmanship, but method, system, and a readiness to adapt oneself to the conditions required to accomplish results. There are many salesmen eager to sell a bill of goods, but careless about other things pertaining to the fulfilment of the contract to the minutest detail. There are many who seem to think that if they have made a customer, it is immaterial whether they keep him or not.

The business letter of the average salesman is of a very low standard—has little if any pulling power. It is meaningless, because it contains nothing of personal interest to the recipient. If you write every customer in exactly the same way and as you have been writing all your life, it is no wonder that you do not believe in letter-writing.

He who rests at the foot of the mountain knows of the glories of yonder peak only from other travelers who have completed the arduous journey.

A Result-Bringing Style.

There is a certain style in drawing up a letter on any question so as to make it produce desired results. The key to the mastery of this style is of so great value as to make it worth months of effort and hundreds of dollars to any salesman to discover it. It is not undiscoverable, by any means.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

A Summary of the Wheat Situation—Western Farmer Learning to Cultivate—Lessons From the Election.

Oat Crop Poor and Prices Likely to Soar

Regina, August 18.—Your correspondent has been traveling all week on western wheat fields and has to say that from personal observation added to reliable reports from other sources the West is now reaping a good average crop of very good wheat. There has been frost over some considerable areas, but not sufficient to damage the aggregate of the crop at all materially, and it is rare when frost has occurred round the full of the August moon, as it did the other night, for it to occur again before the end of harvest. Though a large part of the crop in Manitoba is ripe and a considerable percentage in Southern Manitoba cut and in stook, there are many thousand acres of wheat that still require from 10 days to two weeks to ripen. So that there is still room for anxiety.

Oats Likely to Soar.

The oat crop of the West, speaking generally, is poor, with very short straw and not too well filed heads. The present indications are that it will not be very much above home requirements, so that oats are liable to be a price before spring. Barley is also rather an indifferent crop, short almost invariably. The hay crop, both native and cultivated, is generally abundant. In some of the sections in Manitoba where they have taken to raising alfalfa, the third crop of the season will be ready to cut before the wheat harvest is garnered.

Results of Thorough Farming.

This has been a year to separate the chaff from the wheat among western farmers, for invariably where wheat was planted on well worked, breaking or good summer fallow, there is a fine stand, with long, well-filled heads, which seem to have suffered no damage whatever from drought or hot winds, while wheat put in on stubble, with the disks, is short, thin, with small, badly-filled heads. In the Indian Head district, for example, where the farmers for the past 20 years have had the example of the Dominion Experimental Farm it is the practice to fallow one third of the land every year. Fallowing here consists of ploughing as soon as the seed is on, harrowing a couple of times, ploughing again towards the end of July or beginning of August, then working with spring tooth cultivators once or twice and finally harrowing until many a 100-acre-field looks like a garden. If time permits it will receive a final harrowing just before frost comes, if not it will be worked with the cultivators and harrowed in the spring before the seed goes in. On land worked in this way is found to-day magnificent stands of wheat that do not seem to have been aware of a very dry period in July. Slowly, but surely the western farmer is learning that if he wants good crops and wishes to be able to defy the seasons, he must cultivate, cultivate, cultivate and then try rotation of crops.

A Lesson From the Election.

This is written from Regina and as I write the drums are beating, torches are blazing and crowds cheering to celebrate the return of the Scott Government in Saskatchewan. This, is no place for politics, but the election has one startling lesson on the ingratitude and shortsightedness of farmers. Hon. W. R. Motherwell, first Minister of Agriculture for Saskatchewan, has been defeated by a large majority. During the two and a half years he has held office Hon. Mr. Motherwell has probably done more practical work for the advancement of agriculture than any man holding a similar position in the Dominion of Canada. His staff is a marvel to have been gotten together in so short a time, for every one of his subordinates has had both practical and theoretical training in some branch of agriculture and the whole department has been organized on a basis of making Saskatchewan, in the shortest time possible, a province noted for its mixed farming.

The main factor in his defeat was the active campaign against him by prominent members of the Grain Growers' Association of which he was formerly president and their grievance was that he had favored and furthered every revolutionary piece of legislation they had sought to bring before the House.

As the Scott Government is sustained no doubt a seat on some other constituency will be found for Mr. Motherwell, but that will not do away with the sting of being defeated by the deeds and votes of the very men he has striven so conscientiously to serve in the best manner possible. It is just such incidents that make it so difficult to persuade really efficient and desirable men to enter the Legislature.—H.

PRESERVING FISH IN PAPER.

A recent item in one of the Paris newspapers calls attention to some interesting experiments in connection with the carriage of fish recently made by M. Alfred Goldes, president of the fishery section of the Brussels Chamber of Commerce. Soles caught by Ostend boats off the Portuguese coast which were packed in a special vegetable paper and turned out after sixteen days in much better condition, both as regards freshness and flavor, than those packed in ice. This paper was recommended at the Ostend Fishery Congress of 1907 by Herr Solling, inspector of Danish fisheries. It costs little and takes up but small space.

EXHIBITS FROM THE PROVINCES.

One of the most attractive features at the Canadian National Exhibition, to be held in Toronto from Aug. 29 to Sept. 14, will be the exhibits from various parts of Canada. Every province of the Dominion, except only British Columbia, will have a distinctive exhibit, and British Columbia will find its products displayed in the Railway Exhibits building. The other provinces will have their separate exhibits in the Agricultural and Provinces building. Especially the new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan propose to send a collection of their products. In addition, several of the larger towns af Northwestern Canada will have distinctive exhibits. Thus, altogether, the Canadian National Exhibition of 1908 will be more truly national than any of its predecessors.

These exhibits will give merchants and business men generally an excellent idea of Canada's resources, an idea which cannot be so readily gained in any other way.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY IN NATAL.

More money is invested in cane sugar than in any other industry except coal mining in Natal Colony, British South Africa, and it is only $500,000 short of the coal mining investment. The sugar investment is $7,300,000. The 1906 production was 23,497 short tons, valued at $2,123,000, and the 1907 production is estimated at 40,000 tons, worth $63 a ton, or about 10 per cent. of Louisiana's output. American sugar mills imported are more expensive than those made in England, says Consul Edwin S. Cunningham, of Durban, Natal.

AFTER THE PICNIC.

A certain merchant prided himself upon the exactness with which he regulated all his duties, both in social and business life. One day he attended a commercial picnic.

"Don't wait for me," he said to his better half. "I may be rather late, but it can't be helped."

The next morning the man of method was far from either looking or feeling well. At breakfast he sat toying listlessly with his toast and coffee, while his spouse sat stonily silent behind the coffee pot. The breakfast room clock was equally silent.

"Maria, my dear, there must be something wrong with that clock. I am sure I wound it up last night," remarked the husband.

"No," answered his wife, "you wound up Freddy's music box, instead, and it played 'Home, Sweet Home' until 3 o'clock in the morning! The hall clock has also stopped and you have screwed your corkscrew right into the barometer!"

A PROGRESSIVE B.C. STORE

A Merchant Mayor and His Busin ess in Cranbrook—Something About the Firm's History and Present Status.

The engravings on this page illustrate the store front and interior of the grocery department of the Fink Mercantile Co., of Cranbrook, B.C., one of the most progressive and successful firms in the great western province.

Fine Store Front of the Fink Mercantile Co., Cranbrook, B.C.

The business was established in 1897 as the Fort Steel Mercantile Co., at Fort Steel and Wardner, B.C., by J. P. Fink. On the advent of the railroad to Cranbrook the business was moved there in 1898. In 1902 the present company was incorporated.

The premises occupied by the company are 52x100, of two storeys and basement. They are modern in every respect, and are fireproof. The store contains 220 lineal feet of the best hardwood fixtures.

The engravings will give a good idea of how the business is conducted.

J. P. Fink, the head of the firm, is not only a successful business man, but has also taken a great deal of interest in municipal affairs. His ability and popularity in these matters are evidenced in the fact that he has occupied the mayor's chair in Cranbrook ever since the town's incorporation. He is also a prime mover in fraternal circles.

CANADA'S IMPORTS DECREASING

Returns for Four Months of 1908 Show Heavy Decline.

Trade returns for the first four months of the present fiscal year show considerable decline in the volume of Canadian imports. The decrease in exports is more encouraging in that it is not so evident and in one item, that of manufactured articles, the exports show an increase.

During the first four months of the fiscal year ending with July the imports amounted to $91,888,201, a decrease of $39,915,809. Dutiable goods were imported to the amount of $52,218,053, a decrease of $25,549,008; free goods to the amount of $37,196,488, a decrease of $14,534,337; coin and bullion was imported to the amount of $2,473,660, an increase of $167,536.

The duty collected amounted to fourteen and a quarter millions, a decrease of a little over six millions compared with the first four months of last year. During July alone the imports amounted to $22,967,094, or a decrease of $11,590,904, and there was a falling off of $1,914,257 in the customs revenue for the month.

Our exports for the four months ending with July totalled $67,205,010, a decrease of $5,485,364, compared with the same period the year before. The exports of the products of the mines fell off about a half million dollars in value, while exports of fish increased by about the same amount. There was a decline of a million and a quarter in the exports of lumber. Half a million dollars' worth of animals and their produce were exported. In agricultural exports there was a decline of four and three-quarter millions. Manufacturers increased their exports by three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. During the month of July only the exports totalled $23,116,234, which is four and a half millions less than during the same month of last year.

TRADE NOTES.

The Blue Ribbon Tea Co. has removed from their Toronto office at 16 Adelaide St. west and in future the company's business will be carried on entirely from the head office in Montreal. The same traveling staff will look after the company's interests in Ontario.

Formulating a Pure Food Law

Experiments Carried on With View to Arrangement of Enactment Recently Made in the United States—A Matter Which Must Shortly Be Faced in Canada — The Results of Operations on Dr. Wiley's "Poison Squad."

The following article, from a recent issue of the New York Herald, is particularly interesting from the fact that it describes a series of practical experiments carried on with a view to the arrangement of the Pure Food Law recently enacted in the United States, and because these will have an important bearing on the question when it comes to be considered in Canada, something which will certainly come before long.—Editor.

"Honorably discharged" ought to be, if it isn't, the formula of dismissal for the "poison squad" which for seven years has served faithfully Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry at Washington.

During this time the young men in question, nearly all employed in the Department of Agriculture, hape been regularly and systematically fed with adulterated or "doped" food, in order that Dr. Wiley might settle once for all the question, "Are the drugs which manufacturers have been in the habit of using for preservative and other reasons really harmful?"

That the question has been answered affirmatively the United States Pure Food Law of June 30, 1906, conclusively proves. Not in one single instance have the criminal sections of this law failed in operation. It seems to accomplish perfectly its double object of seeing that purchasers get what they pay for and that harmful substances are kept out of foods.

Four of the chemicals coming within its provisions were discriminated against on the basis of work done by Dr. Wiley's "poison squad." The first drug they tested was borax, of "'embalmed beef" memory, but by no means restricted in its use to meat given to the soldiers in the Spanish-American War. It was formerly a common preservative for all sorts of meat, and also for butter, cream and milk.

Another so-called "preservative" condemned by the experiences of the "poison squad," was salicylic acid, considered until recently absolutely necessary for keeping almost any alcoholic drinks, or even unfermented fruit juices. Sulphuric acid, which turns dried fruits a rich yellow and increases their weight, can no longer be employed by manufacturers. The dairymen are hit on their formaldehyde, for Dr. Wiley decided that a substance in daily use in the Post Office Department as a disinfectant for mail from the yellow fever district is not quite the thing to "preserve" babies' milk and cream.

Another chemical tested by those in the "poison squad," benzoate of soda, has yet to prove its status as a safe article for manufacturers.

Manufacturers Raise Protest.

Thereby hangs a tale. When the manufacturers of the condiments and pie fillings heard it was likely to come under the ban, they appealed clamorously to President Roosevelt. They said they needed benzoate in their business. They said there wouldn't be any more of the "hot stuff" for Boston baked beans, or any more of the mince pies such as mother used to make.

In short, they contended that condiments and pie fillings simply could not be produced without the addition of some preservative that would keep the stuff from moulding within a short time after the cork was pulled out of the bottle or the cover twisted off the can.

That is, most of the manufacturers said this. Unfortunately, the motion was not unanimous. Two lone firms kept out of the union by declaring that preservatives were not necessary, since they didn't have to use such things. They talked wisely of the effect of sterilization of goods after bottling.

"Bluff" was what the rest of the manufacturers said—unless it was something stronger—when they heard this ingenious defence. And yet the fact is that no trace of a preservative can be discovered in any of the goods produced by the two firms who declare preservatives are not necessary. Needless to say, the rest of the trade have made sufficiently careful examination of those two particular firms. Also the chemists of the Department of Agriculture have been trying for more than a year to can goods without a preservative and have failed as signally as all the canned goods manufacturers—except the two.

Notwithstanding the fact that the protest condemning benzoate of soda wasn't quite unanimous, it was sufficiently strong to make President Roosevelt stop and listen. More than that, he decided that he wasn't competent to decide. So he turned the whole matter over to a board of five of the most eminent chemists in the country.

Plan Careful Experiment.

Dr. Ira Remsen, the man who has written all the chemistries, is the president of the board. Another of the five, Dr. Taylor, of Leland Stanford University, is at present in Europe collecting data for experiments and conferring with eminent French and German chemists. A third member of the board, Professor R. H. Chittenden, of Yale, is organizing another food testing squad, expenses to be defrayed from the public treasury, to discover practically the effect of benzoate of soda on the human stomach. In the course of sixteen or eighteen months they hope to be able to give a decision, but such tremendous financial interests are involved that they feel that their experiments must be long and careful.

Sulphate of copper, which makes canned peas "green" and is used in general to give a fresh vegetable color to canned vegetables, will be prohibited for commercial use after January 1 next. The "poison squad" proved that it had evil effects. If Dr. Wiley's investigations are not published in full the reason will be that Dr. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, disagrees with the chief chemist. Dr. Galloway spends his time devising ways for increasing the quantity of peas, and unless they can be presented to the public in an attractive color the production, it is figured, must fall off.

In regard to only two of the chemicals tested were the conclusions of the "poison squad" at all inadequate. These are salt-petre, which makes canned corned beef red, and caffeine, the essential principal in tea and coffee, much used in the preparation of soda fountain drinks and headache medicines. The data having to do with these two substances are now formulated in such a manner as to be available for practical purposes.

Even without final determination as to these chemicals, it is evident that the "poison squad" have done immensely valuable work. The methods of procedure employed with them are rather interesting. Though in offering to be subjects for experiments they admitted themselves willing to sacrifice their health, Dr. Wiley declares that they were not at any time in real danger, and that they are now in as good physical condition as when they started on their venture seven years ago.

Carefully Watched Over.

Results obtained from experimenting with them show that this is not because the adulterated foods were found to be harmless. The reason is simply that just as soon as they were discovered to be seriously suffering they were treated by the physicians watching them, temporarily taken from the squad and kept away until they were in perfect condition. Then before they were permitted to subject themselves again to the tests they were thoroughly quizzed as to whether they really felt as well as the doctors thought they were. In no case wherein the least doubt existed was one of them permitted to return to the test table.

Absolutely natural conditions of life were adhered to in the experimenting. In general, the drugs were presented to the testers in their regular food, just as if they were being fed on ordinary adulterated food with which the market had supplied their boarding houses. Occasionally, indeed, blank capsules were employed, that the effect of the imagination might be tested. In general, however, Dr. Wiley preferred to use people without any imagination to speak of, "healthy, phlegmatic, young human animals," he said, and he thinks that among his experimenters were some of the finest specimens of physical health in the Agricultural Department.

Besides being served such food as they were accustomed to in their boarding-houses, the young men were served at hours to which they were accustomed.

Breakfast was at eight o'clock, lunch at noon and dinner at half past five. They did their regular work, too, for Dr. Wiley's idea was to test the effect of his treated foods on men engaged in their regular affairs, not on those who simply sat around to be experimented on and consequently were not eating under natural conditions.

During the special periods of experiment, lasting from thirty to seventy days, the subjects declared under oath that they had eaten nothing except what was served to them on Dr. Wiley's table and had drunk nothing except water when they were away from his laboratory. For the first five years of his experimenting he himself supervised the diet. During the last two years his assistant, Dr. Webber, took charge.

Member of Squad Dies.

As an interesting sidelight, it may be noted that during the trial one of the young men contracted tuberculosis and died. His friends declared that his sickness was due to the tests to which he had subjected himself. His mother even threatened to sue Dr. Wiley for damages, but the case has not been brought to trial.

It was proved that the presence of the drugs in the food almost invariably affected the digestive tract. Frequently, also, there was loss of weight. Headache, heartburn and dizziness were common symptoms and palpitation of the heart was by no means unknown.

All this physical discomfort, even if it wasn't actual physical peril, which the twelve young experimenters underwent has had its glorious reward in the form of the Pure Food Law, which James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, considers to be one of the best and most successful laws in point of operation ever passed by Congress.

"The Pure Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906," he says, "has accomplished what Congress intended it should. It has almost entirely stopped the adulteration and misbranding of food and drugs by American manufacturers. They have discovered that violations of it do not pay."

That they "do not pay" the history of the courts concerning the application of the law since its passage shows plainly enough. In the very first case decision was rendered against a millionaire manufacturer and seller of acetanilid and alcohol headache "cure" and "brain" food. He was fined $700 for misleading people as to his wares. This he effected by calling his medicine a "cure" for what is merely a symptom of other trouble, and also by announcing it to be of special value for the development of the brain.

False pretence is really the mark against which the law chiefly directs itself. When eighty-four bags of glazed coffee were seized down in Nashville they were confiscated not because of the coating of chrome yellow, but because that coating covered so many defects in the actual coffee berry that its price would have been brought down four or five cents on the pound had the "gilding" not been administered.

Held for Misbranding.

Seizures for misbranding were made on a like basis. In the case of 40,000 barrels of wine held at New Orleans the owners gave bond to re-label the stuff honestly and it was returned to them.

When, likewise, at New Orleans, thirty barrels of molasses were confiscated because they were marked as containing "open kettle molasses" it was not even assured that the molasses were unwholesome. It simply was some other kind—was not what it said it was. Misbranded flour was seized at Minneapolis for a like reason—not that the barrels did not contain good flour, but that they did not contain the kind of flour described on the labels.

Permission to sell this flour would imply permission to do any one of the following things without fear of punishment by the national government:—

Take corn syrup, the chemical name for which is glucose, color it a strawberry pink with coal tar dye, add a few timothy seeds, some pumpkin and then sell the mess for "pure strawberry jam."

Take sucrose (chemical name for cane sugar), add a bit of maple sugar and water, and sell the mixture as pure maple syrup.

Hire one's self a French scholar from Peru, Ind., or Cincinnati, to write a grandiose label, stick that literary production on a little round box filled with a smeary cheese and sell it as Camembert.

Stick a label on a pot of beef extract telling how good and nourishing it is for convalescents and charge anywhere from thirty-five to ninety cents for a big tablespoonful of it and make the friends of the sick person believe they were feeding him with the quintessence of all that was good in the beef.

"We have not come within 1,000 miles of losing a case," said Dr. Wiley himself, speaking with reference to the practical application of the Pure Food Law.

CANADA'S GREAT EXHIBITION.

The Canadian National Exhibition, which is to be held in Toronto from August 29 to September 14, offers special attractions to hardwaremen in all parts of Canada. From a business standpoint the exhibition furnishes an excellent opportunity for picking up new ideas, getting lines on new and special articles and studying methods of display and arrangement of goods. Again, because of the large numbers of the trade who come in every year at the time of the fair there are prospects of meeting other men from different parts of the country, getting better acquainted, and of talking over business matters with them. The exhibits of hardware and special lines are expected to be even more complete this year than usual another point of interest.

From the standpoint of pleasure the exhibition offers an opportunity for a holiday which cannot well be surpassed. The special musical attractions, the entertainment furnished before the grand stand, and the various novelties included in the exhibition grounds provide for the satisfying of the lighter side of the heart's content.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted at 10 cents per agate line.

Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, who have for years been handling "Soleil" brand canned goods, have this year nearly doubled their import order, which speaks well for the popularity of this brand in the trade. Orders for "Soleil" brand, as well as for domestic canned goods, are now being booked. Interesting prices on canned salmon, which is scarce, are now being quoted by this firm, and wise buyers will find it to their advantage to communicate with Laporte, Martin & Co.—Advt.

BISCUIT FIRM PROGRESSING.

A reorganization of the old Caledonia Biscuit Company has just taken place and a new charter has been granted to a body of Montreal business men who have formed a new company and put new life into the concern, which will in future be known as the Caledonian Biscuit and Confectionery Company, Limited. A large new factory has been acquired at 102 St. Christopher Street, where modern machinery will be installed and full advantage taken of the 6,000 square feet of floor space which will be at the disposal of the firm. The new officers of the company are: President, Ald. J. G. Duquette; vice-president, Ald. N. Sequin, who conducts a flourishing retail grocery business; secretary-treasurer, L. A. Taillon; manager, J. B. D'Lagare. The company expects to occupy the new premises before the end of September.

TRADE NOTES.

S. D. Stewart, with Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, is away on his holidays.

R. E. Holyoke, Woodstock, N.B., has added a candy factory and ice cream booth to his grocery business.

The general stores of A. G. Gleiser and J. S. Leslie, at Gainsboro, Sask., were destroyed by fire last week.

Claassen Brothers, who recently sold out their grocery business at Penticton, B.C., have gone to their former home in Edmonton. They expect to be back next spring. Their father, P. O. Claassen, who is now in Edmonton, will probably return to Penticton in the fall.

W. N. Warburton, Chatham, Ont., formerly manager of the C. W. & L. E., and more recently manager of the W. E. & L. S., has purchased the grocery business of Huth & Laffrey, Hamilton. The new firm will be known as Warburton & Son.

A number of grocers of Smith's Falls have petitioned the town council asking that the early closing by-law be abolished or amended so that they could keep open their places of business.

The Magee & Thompson Co., Wolseley, Sask., composed of A. G. Thompson, Richard Magee, John Bradley, R. A. Magee and H. J. Hunt, has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000, and has taken over the Star Grocery and Confectionery Co., and the grocery businesses of Tidey & Co. and Magee & Thompson.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, August 20, 1908.

It is rather gratifying to Canadian exporters to know that Englishmen have enough confidence in the market to buy and store in Canada in preference to the other side. This has been happening lately in the face of a high market on this side, and while there is no way of determining their motive, it looks as though the Englishmen were getting ready for a shortage. Although the English methods of storage are quite as good as our own, it has been proven that cheese in storage is better preserved on this side of the Atlantic. There has been circulated in England for a long time a rumor to the effect that the home production was going to be very large this year, but when buyers throughout the country asked for estimates, so they could form some idea of just what they could depend upon, the figures have been very largely reduced, and now the English buyers are looking to Canada. Although some improvements have been made in Siberian transportation facilities these have not as yet been sufficient to allow Siberian products to flow in an uninterrupted stream into the English markets. It will be remembered that last year when Canada was beginning to obtain top prices for her cheese, New Zealand stepped into the market and proved to be an able competitor. Exporters and makers look forward to a good make from now forward, on account of the favorable weather which will likely prevail. This condition of cooler atmosphere will also improve the quality, and the product will keep much better.

Shipments of cheese from Montreal last week amounted to 65,493 boxes, as against 60,216 boxes for the previous week, and 82,437 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. Total shipments from Montreal since May 1, 886,712 boxes, as compared with 1,046,124 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total shipments from Quebec since May 1, 27,320 boxes, as compared with 37,903 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total exports since May 1, 914,032 boxes, as compared with 1,084,027 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. The local market is strong, in sympathy with the tone of the country boards. Holders are asking 12½c to 12⅝c for Westerns; 12½c to 12⅝c for Easterns. At the boat for export, 12¼c was obtained. The butter market is rather quiet, owing to the fact that export demand has fallen off and holders here are waiting rather than sell below cost. The lack of export demand is all the more wonderful in view of the fact that there is very little Australian butter to be had in England. There is an impression among holders on this side that the home demand will soon brighten up to such an extent as to absorb what stocks they have on hand at figures which will be profitable. Some firms, however, do not entertain this impression, and they have conceded a point in several instances, to facilitate business. The change in the temperature has had its usual effect, and the quality of butter arriving has improved, as is the case with cheese. Exports of butter last week amounted to 4,768 packages, as against 3,869 packages for the previous week, and 3,751 packages for the corresponding week of last year. Total exports since May 1, 63,860 packages, as compared with 44,001 packages for the corresponding period of last year. The local market is unchanged, regardless of the higher range in prices in the country. Finest creamery is quoted around 23½c in round lots, and 24c to 24½c in a jobbing way. At the boat 24c was paid.

Toronto, August 19, 1908.

Very good demand at home is the only feature that is comforting Canadian packers at the present time. Were it not for large consumption and exceedingly good business here, the situation would be somewhat serious. The British market, which still continues at the 48 to 50 shilling basis, is not at all on a favorable basis for Canadian shipments and very little pork products, indeed, are going forward. This is such a change from the strong demand evident for the past couple of months that it is all the more notable. Those who are informed attribute the situation across the water to the prevalence of a wave of exceedingly warm weather, when the appetites of the general public were turned from meats to fruit, and to the fact that those systematic packers the Danes, have kept on shipping from 38,000 to 40,000 or more weekly and have kept the market well supplied. Such a situation, however, especially at this time of the year, when demand from Great Britain usually is, and is expected to be active, the time of the packers' harvest, in fact, is very disappointing. No relief is in sight this week, but it is hoped that something may affect conditions for the better shortly.

Under these conditions, packers are not overly anxious for large supplies of hogs, though the local business, of course, demands somewhat free deliveries. Prices offered remain the same as last week, viz., $6.40 f.o.b., and this is bringing in just about as many hogs as the packers can profitably handle. The harvest operations are interfering, of course, to some extent, but at this price farmers would not be exceedingly anxious anyway to send the hogs in freely.

United States packers seem to be affected in a somewhat similar manner, though their local trade is apparently not so good as in Canada, as is evidenced in the following review of conditions from the New York Journal of Commerce :

"The past week has been one of liquidation in hog products as well as grain, and in cottonseed oil as well. Continued increase in stocks of the farmer in face of late light receipts has been followed by a decrease in consumption due to hard times and high prices, at the same time while the receipts of hogs increased 90,000 for the week at the west, though said to be due to the exhaustion of the old corn crop. Whatever the reasons, the tired longs concluded to get out after taking the bull talk of the packers at par as well as some of the load off their hands, as Europe is unexpectedly independent of our products, due to worse times in the great industrial centres there than in this country, according to dealers lately returning from both northern and southern, as well as central Europe, England, France, Germany and Italy. Packers have filled those markets up with consigned goods and drawn against them and are unable to sell them even at the lower parity than Chicago, at which they are offering them there. The high price of corn, which has been the cornerstone of the bulls' argument all this season, has lost its force since the good rains of the week have relieved the drought in the corn belt of the Ohio Valley and promise to save a fair crop if we have a late fall, or even an average one, after the long spell of hot weather since the late planting and cold, wet spring gave the crop a bad start. With the ground soaked as the corn belt was last spring and early summer a drought could not do the damage it could in a dry season, as the roots, after once started, strike deep enough into the ground to draw sufficient moisture from the subsoil to keep the plant alive, and the late rains will now mature it with favorable weather for a month more. This is probably the last straw to cause the break in hog products the past week, and it is probable the packers were the ones who started to liquidate and forced the smaller and weaker ones to follow. The full effect of the times on consumption has not been realized till now, and the drummers' "prosperity Congress" will fool nobody in the provision trade into the belief that they are good. Neither has the loss of fresh meat trade, due to still higher prices than cured meats or hog products, helped the latter as expected, and everybody in the trade is disgusted and discouraged. This is what ails provisions."

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—In hams and bacon a good trade has been passing during the past week, and prices have been maintained in these lines. Other lines are unchanged, but there is a weaker undertone to the market, due to decline in live hogs. The demand during the week was fair.

BUTTER—Butter has taken another flight upwards, which has shut off the export demand considerably. Local requests, although good, are not sufficient to take care of all that is arriving; therefore much butter is going into storage.

CHEESE—The cheese market is very buoyant, and while the rise in price has checked the export demand slightly, some is being stored here on English account. The large number of foreign inquiries seems to show that they want the cheese across the water, even if it is purchased at a fancy price. Locally, the demand is good.

PROVISIONS—Smoked and cooked meats are the seasonable lines this week as they have been all summer. Business in all lines is good and prices are about the same as those prevailing for the past several weeks.

BUTTER—Supplies continue free and the demand keeps fully abreast of whatever comes to the market. Quite a lot of butter is now being packed by commission men, so the supplies next winter should be fair in view of the fact that dealers also have been packing on their own account. Prices remain unchanged from a week ago.

EGGS—Great quantities of eggs are coming in to the market and the demand keeps up fairly well. Though quotations are the same as last week there is an easier tone to the market, due, no doubt, to the fact that the shrinkage just now is very great. A great many of the eggs go bad during these hot days and the buyer wants a guarantee when he pays a high price for them. Eggs are now selling from 21c to 22c.

CHEESE—Very little of this line is moving, and practically no old cheese at all. Prices remain as last week.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour Firm With Good Local Business —Oats Scarce With Strong Probabilities of Advanced Prices.

The feature of the cereal markets is the strong probability of an advance in rolled oats and oatmeal.

"Yes," said the manager of one of the largest manufactories of cereals in Ontario, this week, "we expect to have to advance our prices to the retailer very shortly. There are practically no oats to be secured now, the eastern crop is a mere bagatelle on the market and the bad reports from the west recently practically assure dear oats this fall. On the 31st of August last year rolled oats were $1.90 per bag in car lots. Fifteen days later they had jumped to $2.75 and a month later were worth over $3. With the present outlook it would seem as if these conditions were to be duplicated this year."

The oat market is certainly strong and considering present conditions the best advice that can be given to retailers is to lay in a fairly generous stock now.

The flour market continues strong with slightly more activity evident in some sections, but no notably new features.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—The flour market is slightly more active than last week, but the buyers are still holding off. Orders coming in are fairly large in number but small in size, sufficient only to supply immediate wants. Prices remain the same.

FLOUR—The market continues strong but no changes are reported. Local business has been and is remarkably good, with heavy demand. Local firms have this week received inquiries from Great Britain, Europe and Egypt, but on the present basis of prices no business can be done.

CEREALS — Business continues remarkably good with prices unchanged. The outlook at present is for a strong oat market, or rather, panicky reports from the west, and higher prices shortly seem almost certain. The retailer will make no mistake to lay in his supplies of oats and oatmeal now. Old oats are practically off the market. Present prices are as quoted.

NEW USES FOR LEMONS NEEDED.

"In my opinion," said a prominent lemon factor the other day in discussing the question, "the time has come for the trade to enter into a systematic campaign of education with the public, in the hope of reviving and increasing the consumption of lemons—Sicily lemons. It is well known that there is no lemon possessing so much of the true lemon virtue as the Sicily fruit. California lemons may have more juice, but for true 'lemonosity'—if I may use the word—for flavor and acidity and richness of texture, keeping quality and purity of oil—they cannot compare with the Italian fruit.

"In my opinion, there is room for a great deal of booming in the world of lemons. The American people have too long confined the use of lemons to the one purpose of making lemonade. For flavoring, they have passed the direct employment along to the 'extract' manufacturers, and we all know with what results. Mighty little of the real lemon juice gets into extract. The peel forms the greater part of that, and barrels of acid of an artificial nature are employed to 'fortify' that before it gets to the consumer. Then there is the soda fountain, where it is almost impossible to buy a lemonade and have the real fruit squeezed in your presence. We have done a good deal through the co-operation of the pure food officials, but there is room for a lot of education on top of that.

"First of all, we want to impress on the cooks of the country, the beverage servers and the housewives, the importance of using pure and true lemon. Then, there are uses for lemons which very few Americans understand. Take the matter of lemons as a complexion food on my lady's toilet table. Sicilian women have always been famed for their olive complexions, yet it appears to hape escaped the attention of the society beauty of America that it comes from the free employment of lemon juice in the toilet water. I have known wonderful results to come from the use of half a lemon squeezed into a basin of water for the toilet. A dozen lemons judiciously used would work miracles as against bottles and boxes of expensive and artificial cosmetics.

"Then, take lemons for removing ink stains from the skin or from fabrics. The mild acid is perfectly harmless, yet it is more effective than quarts of benzine, naptha, cleaning fluids, pumice, soaps and more powerful applications usually resorted to. If half the typewriters and stenographers would use lemons to remove stains from their hands the aggregate effect on the lemon trade would be astonishing. As a healer, lemons possess a power unequalled by any disinfectant I know of. Cut your finger, if you chance to. Stick it into a fresh-cut lemon. It will smart for a few minutes, but the mild acid will make the wound absolutely clean and antiseptic, absolutely safe from blood poisoning, with the tissues clean, so that healing will progress faster than by the application of any amount of lotions and bandages.

"These are only a few of the uses for lemons with which the average people are unacquainted. I believe if we started a campaign of education and coaxed the people around to a sane use of a simple remedy, we wouldn't have to complain long about lack of demand. It is true that of late there have been many competitors of the lemon as a flavoring agent and it is not surprising that, in the aggregate, they have injured the demand for lemons. But it is for us to get busy and I, for one, would like to see something done."—New York Journal of Commerce.

QUEBEC FRUIT CROP LIGHT.

The Pomological Society of the Province of Quebec held its summer meeting at Hummingford, on August 12. The aim of this society is to encourage fruit-growing throughout the Province. The secretary read a letter from former President Dupuis. This report stated that the crop of apples and plums along the Lower St. Lawrence was very small. From all parts of the Province reports of light crops were received. In the Eastern Townships, and especially those along the United States border, a slightly better crop is expected than from other parts; but notwithstanding this the crop is very short generally. In the vicinity of Hummingford, which has long been famous for its apple crop, a fairly good yield is expected. Some years ago the apple maggot, or railroad worm, found its way into Canada from the United States. So far its operations have been confined chiefly to Huntingdon and Como. This insect is a serious menace to the apple crop, and it is especially regrettable that it should so far have established its habitat at these great apple centres. Mr. Sheppard, of Como, who is famous for the excellence of his Fameuse apples, has been able to cope with the pest by destroying the fallen apples. It is to be hoped that with the probability of a small export business this year the inspectors will be able to prevent the abuses which have crept into the apple export business, such as raising the grade, and false heading. These practices in the past in this line of business have not added to the lustre of Canadian business principles in the European markets.

NEW COPYING SYSTEM.

The new "Plic" books, manufactured by the Carter-Crume Company, Toronto, are arousing considerable interest among merchants who have seen them.

The new book is a duplicating letter book, and the letter-paper, printed with the firm's name in regular letter-head style, and the sheet, upon which the copy is made, being bound in book form, the former perforated and easily torn out for mailing, leaving the copy still bound in the book. Each duplicate sheet is numbered, and an index in the front makes it an easy matter to refer to any letter that has been written. Either pen or pencil may be used in writing.

These books will prove decidedly useful to many firms whose correspondence under the system now employed is not easily referred to. The fact that a copy of every letter sent is bound in a book for reference and that without resorting to the letter press, is a strong recommendation for the new system.—Advt.

HE STUDIED HIS CUSTOMER.

"Every salesman should study the peculiarities and fads of his customers," remarked a well-known manufacturer to The Canadian Grocer. "Ten years ago there was a department store in New York, which my salesmen had been unable to interest. They had been turned down every time. In fact, they could scarcely get an interview. One day when I was visiting my New York branch I decided to call upon this firm. In spite of the cold water thrown upon my proposition by my local manager, the two of us finally called upon him. I simply could not get him to talk. He would bow his head when he indicated Yes, and shake it when he indicated No. and that was practically all I could get out of him. Finally I left him, remarking as I went out, 'Well, Mr. Blank, you are busy to-day. I will try to see you again before I leave the city.'

"Shortly after leaving his office I was speaking to a salesman of a well-known proprietary article and asked him if he knew anything about the manager of this particular department store. 'Yes,' he said, 'but I never go near him. I can never get him to talk, and I have given him up.'

"'Well,' said I, 'what fad or peculiarity has he?'

"'Don't know,' he replied.

"I then turned to my local manager and asked him the same question. He said that he had no fad or peculiarity. Finally, however, after scratching his head for a moment he said, 'Well, I believe he is fond of fishing.'

"'That will do', said I, and a day or two afterwards I called upon the department store manager again and remarked as I entered, 'I have just come in to say good-by,' and held out my hand. 'By the way,' I continued, as I turned to the door, 'when you are in Canada again and near our city, if you are fond of fishing I could take you to a spot about sixty miles from where I live where there is excellent bass fishing. But perhaps you are not fond of fishing?'

"'Oh, yes, I am,' he replied, as his countenance loosened up a little, 'and I will be very glad to call and see you. Say, before you go, can't you do a little better on your line of goods if I bought a large quantity?'

"I told him I could not, but that one thing I would do, and that was pay the expenses of a demonstrator. Well, the long and short of it is this, that he gave me an order on this basis, and I have since taken him on many fishing trips. This was ten years ago, and he is still buying our goods, and going fishing with me occasionally. I 'fished' for his business and now he fishes with me."

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Berries Disappearing—Peaches Expected to be Plentiful—Seasonable Imported Lines Good Sellers—Potato Supplies Free—Fall and Winter Fish.

The berry season is passing and peaches appear to be the coming active line. With the exception of blueberries all berry lines are off in the Western markets, though Eastern Canada has still some blackberries to show.

The peach crop will be large, if present indications count for much. The early varieties being shipped to country points by the commission men are sent only at the purchaser's risk. All early lines are coming in freely and will be a full crop. St. John's and early Crawfords will be light, but late peaches will be a medium crop. All, however, will be ahead of last year.

Imported lines — pears, peaches, bananas and watermelons—are still arriving by carlots, and an occasional car of oranges and lemons is not unusual.

Native potatoes are shutting out the imported variety, and New Brunswick is beginning to send to the Western Canadian markets some excellent specimens spuds. Some second-growth green corn is seen, and, as well, some late celery and lettuce is going.

Fall and winter lines of fish are arriving at the larger centres and this year's smoked herrings are already on sale. Dealers are asking grocers and country merchants to prepare for the oyster season, which this year is expected to be a good one.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Apples in 11-quart baskets are now being quoted at 30c to 40c. Blueberries are some easier, being obtainable for 25c less than at our last quotation. Blackberries are now on the market, and are quoted at 8c to 12c per quart. Peaches can now be had in small baskets at 60c, and plums in baskets at 40c. Bananas have weakened slightly. The same stock, which was quoted at $2 last week, can now be had for $1.75. Other lines rule about the same in price. The demand has been good during the week.

VEGETABLES—The demand during the week has been a fairly good one, prices on the whole being somewhat easier. Trading is confined pretty generally to Canadian lines, which are, in many cases, a little late in coming onto the market. California and hothouse tomatoes are pretty well off the market now.

FISH—Haddock and cod are more plentiful this week, and prices have eased off a little. British Columbia salmon is now arriving in small lots. Fresh Gaspe, or Eastern salmon, is out of the market. Halibut is arriving fairly freely. Lake trout and whitefish are in fair supply, but fresh dore and pike are scarce. Brook trout are scarce, but a better supply is expected after September 1. The demand for smoked and prepared fish has been slow, owing to the hot weather. The pickled and salted market is quiet, with no new lines offering. American lobsters are now offering, but price is high, owing to customs tariff. Demand for them is slow.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—With the exception of blueberries all berry lines are off the market. True, there may be an occasional crate of blackberries offering, but there were days this week when a buyer could not obtain even a single small basket. Native fruits are easing off in price and in some cases are driving imported lines off the market. There are some splendid California peaches and pears offering, but plums from that State are about done.

The Canadian plum is here in great form and the peaches now arriving look strong competitors of the imported variety. Bananas and watermelons still hold a high place in popular favor, and a number of green bananas are sent out in small lots to the smaller centres in the country, saving crating charges to the country dealer. Oranges and lemons are still in evidence, though declining in quantity, but the quality of these goods is first-class.

Grapes from California are a new line, but they are arriving in small quantities only. They are a little early and commission men are not guaranteeing the lasting qualities of the fruit. Canadian melons have injured to some extent the business of imported cantaloupes, and only the best qualities of California melons are now being offered. Those arriving in such comparatively small lots have firmed up in price.

VEGETABLES — Canadian potatoes are ousting the imported Delawares. The early Ontarios gave promise of a great crop of first-class stock, though some later arrivals are not quite so good. They are not so scabby as those offering a year ago, but the Ontario farmer can still do something to improve his potatoes. The first car of New Brunswick Delawares came in this week, and though the quotation is placed five cents higher than Ontario's, this price is purely fictitious, because as yet no sales have been made to justify any price being placed on them. Arrivals are free and demand is good. The potato crop all over the country is reported very large and if large quantities are placed on the markets they will surely decline in price.

FISH—The first sign of winter makes its appearance in a lot of Canadian smoked herring offered on the local market. Dealers, too, are asking their country customers to prepare for the oyster season, which will open on September 1. Prices on all fish lines are stationary, and supplies seem to be more plentiful than a week ago, in spite of a big demand. Pacific Coast fish, apparently, is taking business away from Atlantic lines, and is even invading territory supposed to belong exclusively to Atlantic sea fish. Both Montreal and Boston are now taking good quantities of Pacific Coast lines.

SOCKEYE PACK LARGER THAN EXPECTED.

Reports From Different Districts on the Coast Show Better Results Than Last Year.

(Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer

Vancouver, August 15.—The sockeye salmon pack of this season may not exactly be termed a surprise, but it is larger than expected and will exceed that of last year. At the first of the week, the pack on the Fraser River was 58,000 cases, equal to the whole of last season, with fourteen more days to run. The fish coming in are not particularly plentiful, but there is a fair number. Last Saturday at noon it was reported from the Sound that 130,000 cases had been put up, which is considerably better than last year. The Skeena River figure is placed at 100,000 cases; Naas River, 15,000; Rivers Inlet, 60,000, and outlying districts, 36,000.

The International Fishery Commission, composed of S. T. Bastedo, of Ottawa, and Dr. David Starr Jordan, of California, are expected in Vancouver this week, to start their work in accordance with the treaty passed April 11th last. Since the fisheries in the United States are under the jurisdiction of the separate states, the wonder is how federal legislation can be passed to be made to apply, say in the State of Washington. On the other hand, the officials at Washington are able men and may be trusted to know what they are about.

NEW IDEA IN SAMPLE ROOMS.

Chester McClure and C. L. Grant, of the C. Leonard Grant Co., Charlottetown, P.E.I., were in Montreal for a few days in the interests of their firm.

These gentlemen, instead of carrying samples in trunks in the ordinary way, have a special car bearing the firm name on the outside and fitted up inside with counters, running the entire length of the car, on which they display their samples, which cover a range of general merchandise. They tour the entire island.

PERSONAL NOTES.

C. H. Chausse spent a few days' vacation away from Montreal.

Arthur P. Tippet, Montreal, has returned from a short vacation.

Stephen Wingrove, managing director of Spratts, Limited, London, is in Montreal.

C. W. King, the Montreal apple exporter, spent a few days in the country this week.

R. J. Thomas, general merchant, of Hartford, Ont., was in Toronto last week on a business trip and made a pleasant call on The Grocer.

A. P. Murray, sales manager of the Edwardsburg Starch Co., is away from his office in Montreal for a couple of weeks on a well-earned holiday trip.

Walter Ashton Prichard, representative of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, and at one time a grocer in St. John, died at that city on August 10.

O. E. Roberts, of the Edwardsburg Starch Co., Montreal, has gone to Prince Rupert on a business trip. Mr. Roberts is remembering his friends with post cards illustrative of the rapidly-growing new city.

HIGHER FREIGHT RATES.

James J. Hill, the Canadian, who is head of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railroad Companies, on his return from his annual fishing trip to Labrador, gave an important interview to the New York Herald, in which he emphasized the urgent need for higher freight rates, which, he said, would not only enable the railways to rehabilitate themselves but would stimulate the great manufacturing industries.

"Railroads," said Mr. Hill, "are the main arteries of this country's industrial life. The money they expend affects all branches of trade, but especially the lumber and steel industries, which are called upon for the material used in new construction and equipment.

"Freight rates must be advanced, otherwise the railway corporations will not be in a position to expend the millions they place in circulation every year through purchasing rolling stock, needs for terminal facilities, or in new construction and improvements.

"This sum annually expended is often as high as $1,000,000,000. But let us estimate at the minimum amount of $600,000,000. That sum represents about one-fourth of the value of the country's yearly manufactures. It means keeping the lumber and steel industries going. Now all that railroad work has stopped.

"Some short-sighted manufacturers say this is no time for an increase in rates. That means in effect that this is no time for them to improve their own business. They don't seem to realize that one-fourth of their business is provided by the railway companies. This $600,000,000 is lost to the manufacturers and the wage earners. It is felt by the producer of raw material, the farmer who supplies products, the lumberman, the mechanic, the laborer.

Danger in Cutting Wages.

"It is a question of either advance in rates or of cutting wages. The latter is a dangerous expedient. The cost of living is high and the prices of commodities are very high. Workmen need good wages to live. If you cut them the roads would break up their organizations and lose valuable men. But we need skilled men, experienced men, and we would have to break contracts with the unions.

"No, I can't tell whether rates will be advanced or when they will be advanced. I haven't the slightest idea of what will be done. But I am aware of the necessity for taking that step.

"Railroad rates are too low. That is seen in the fact that the railroad companies pay only five per cent. on their securities. The manufacturer gets fifteen per cent. on his capital invested. And yet the railroads are the best customers of the manufacturers. See what they lose when the railroads stop purchasing supplies.

Work of Railroads.

"The railroads in this country are called upon to do impossibilities. The American systems are created at a cost of one-half to one-fifth as much as systems of other countries, and yet they charge rates only one-half to one-third as great, while they transport nearly twice the amount of business per mile and pay double the rate of wages. Their returns are so small in comparison with the railroads abroad that the latter could not live under similar conditions.

"Yet where are the railroads going to get the money for carrying on the work that is necessary? Their credit has been impaired and still they must be assured of an adequate return on their capital investment. Until the public is assured that the returns will be satisfactory investors will continue timid about placing their money in railroad securities.

"The curtailment in business is directly due to the stoppage in the buying power of the railroads. And look at the further results. See the thousands of immigrants going abroad. Look at the people out of employment. These are the results of the predicament in which the railroad corporations are placed. Freight rates must be increased."

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Interesting Information for Clerks and Grocers About the Goods They Hand Over the Counter.

Tapioca.

Tapioca, or white sago, as it is sometimes called, is a farinaceous substance derived from the large knotty roots or tubers of two species of South American manioc plants, the bitter cassava and the sweet cassava, known respectively as Manihot utilissima and Manihot aipi, both of the Euphorbimu tribe, which perhaps includes the most venomous botanical growths in nature. Tapioca is raised chiefly in Brazil, but also extensively in the eastern Straits Settlements, in Penang, Singapore, and in the Mascarine Islands. The roots resemble large parsnips, and grow to perfection within six months. When washed, peeled of their dark rinds, they are grated into a pulp, which is subjected to pressure in a screw press under water and in a kind of bag made of rushes. The crude juice which is forced out contains a poisonous amount of prussic acid, and this is commonly employed by the Indians to poison the barbs of their murderous arrows and spears. When all the juice or starchy matter has settled to the bottom of the water, it is removed, roasted and stirred well with an iron rod, and finally dried on hot plates, where it separates into a sort of white powder, called tapioca flour, or Brazilian arrowroot, and by the French moussache. It consists of small irregular transparent granules, some of which burst and agglomerate into lumps. The fecula or pearls thus formed are afterwards sifted into several grades of sizes known as small, medium, bullet and flake tapioca. The pulpy mass left in the rush bag, being dried, is called Conaque. This is made into Manioc flour or Cassava bread. Pearl or Bullet tapioca is often imitated or adulterated with pellets made of potato starch. Tapioca itself consists largely of starch; it is not very nutritious; but potato starch is a much cheaper and inferior article.

Tapioca is used in the same way as sago, but requires to be previously steeped for some hours, or to be simmered for a long time. For soups and broth the small crushed tapioca is much better suited than either the bullet, pearl or flake varieties, and should only be added a short time before serving, so as not to spoil its transparency.

WHERE WE GET MARMALADE.

The word "marmalade" is apparently derived from the Portuguese marmelo, a "quince," which, again, is from Mid Latin malomellum, Greek melinelon, "honeyapple," or "sweet apple." The word is at least as old as the reign of Henry VIII. The following sentence occurs in a letter from that monarch : "He most heartily thanketh her good ladyship for her marmarlo," which, by a comparison of other letters, was apparently made of quinces. Anne Basset, Lady Lisle's daughter, gives the name "codiniac" to her mother's dainty. Her letters, giving the account of the presentation of the said marmalade to the King, and relating how he desired a repetition of the same as soon as might be, have been printed more than once.

AN ENGLISH VISITOR.

Bertram Carr, director of Carr & Co., Carlisle, Eng., who is touring Canada in the interests of his company, was a caller upon the Toronto grocery trade last week, and talked in an interesting way to a representative of The Grocer at the offices of W. H. Dunn, representative for Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Carr realizes that there is a good market in Canada for the high-class biscuits manufactured by his company. A special feature in connection with Carr's biscuits is the great improvement in the packing and sealing of the tins, making the goods of better keeping qualities, and overseas shipments are landed and delivered in perfect order. During his call on the trade here, Mr. Carr was introduced by E. W. Pyke, representative for Mr. Dunn. Mr. Carr left for Winnipeg on Saturday last, and purposes taking in the larger centres through to the Coast.

Any Boy who has One Cent can Turn it Into Ten Dollars

One cent invested in a post card to us will bring you information about how we start you in business, so that you can earn money for yourself. You can make plenty of pocket money all the time—money you will enjoy more because you made it in business for yourself. Hundreds of boys are doing this. SO CAN YOU.

No money required. We furnish capital.

We also give prizes. There is a prize for every boy, whether he lives in a large city or a little village. Very fine prizes have gone to fellows in small places. Don't delay a minute. Write us to-day. A post card will do.

THE IDEAL STORE FIXTURE

"WALKER BINS"

There is a personal satisfaction in having a store equipped with Walker Bin Fixtures.

The beauty of their design and their elegant appearance are unsurpassed, and for this, as well as for the peculiar attractiveness of their display, they impress the customer and offer a continued and irresistible temptation to buy. Their compactness and convenience are appreciated by the clerk, who finds everything he wants, when and where he wants it. They are a joy forever to the proprietor, for he sees his sales increasing, his losses, from waste, dirt, insects and samplers, diminishing and his store service prompt and effective.

Toledo Cylinder Computing Scale

The only springless, automatic, cylinder Computing Scale in the world.

It Protects both Merchant and Customer

BECAUSE

It has no springs; therefore is always reliable, as it is not affected by changes in temperature. It is automatic; therefore it positively stops downweight and avoids errors due to hand operations. It saves you time, labor and money, no weights to lift, poises to move, no cylinder to turn, nothing to do but place the goods on the scale and then read the answer given automatically for cash value, and accurate weight value. The Toledo Scale pays for itself.

WORLD'S GOLD MEDAL

The Toledo Computing Scale Co. received the Gold Medal, the Highest Award, for computing scales. The points of superiority which gained for Toledo scales this grand distinction were as follows: Springless, automatic, computing, simplicity, accuracy and rapidity in weighing and computing, superior construction, durability and extreme sensitiveness.

Don't fail to see our exhibit at The Canadian National Exhibition, August 29th to Sept. 14th, or at any time when considering the purchase of a Computing Scale.

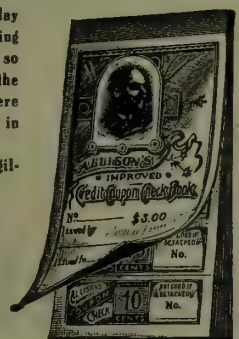
Install the Allison Coupon System and Take a Vacation

You can take a day off and go fishing whenever you are so inclined, secure in the knowledge that there will be no leaks in your absence.

No matter how vigilant you may be, the Allison Coupon System is a better safeguard against errors and petty losses than your own presence and watchfulness.



Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

& SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

WOOD'S PURE PACKAGE TEA

MAY QUEEN PRIMROSE
FLEUR-DE-LIS
THOMAS WOOD & CO., Importers
BOSTON AND MONTREAL

"IT IS IN THE AIR"

How often one hears that phrase applied to some condition of the public mind! A good many things get into the air, thus wasting the best parts of the originals. You may take the finest Tea in the world, for instance, handle it loosely and carelessly, leaving it open to the light of day and the dust and much of its fragrance and rich flavor disappears, while impurities creep in. In

we have a "sealed book," an air-tight guard against all foreign substances, while the captivating flavors are retained—imprisoned for the consumer.

WOOD'S Packages are all TEA—the purest and the best.

TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

BRADSTREET'S

Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000. Offices Throughout the Civilized World
Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence invited.

Handle Canned Goods That Are Recognized Leaders.

A modern philosopher has discovered that "The more aims you have in life the less likely you are to hit anything." Concentration is one of the secrets of success. There is a wealth of wisdom in this for the merchant. Concentrate your efforts on selling well-known lines and you'll be ahead at the end of the year. Don't load your shelves with a dozen brands of uncertain Canned Goods and keep your customers forever experimenting.

Canadian Canners' Peas Have Created A Big Trade for us

And they will do the same for you. We particularly recommend our Grade No. 2 SWEET WRINKLE PEAS. They are deliciously sweet and tender, and rapidly win new friends wherever introduced. They have a constant and ready sale all the year round. They are genuine business builders and can be sold at a good margin of profit.

Our Peas are packed in four grades as follows:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

Success Awaits the Man who specializes on quality. Did you ever figure out that every time a grocer sells a customer poor quality eatables he is administering a sound "knock" at his reputation? It's a fact! Nothing succeeds like quality goods, and the very success of

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

is therefore the best proof of their sound quality. Our aim has always been and is now to succeed through giving the trade an article on which they can absolutely rely. The best goods canned in the best way, retaining all the delicious natural flavor of pure fruits and vegetables—that's OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND.

COMPETITION

Shall it be in price or in quality ?

The interests of the consumer and dealer lie in sound trade, in the sale of first-class goods at a fair price. There is nothing more demoralizing in business than price-cutting. The merchant who strives to offer goods at bargain prices not only of necessity must sell poor goods, giving poor satisfaction, but he seldom secures permanent customers. Bargain hunters invariably go to the store that sells cheapest and then find fault with the goods.

"SALADA" never competes with any firm in price, but, in the matter of quality—always—Could anything benefit you more than to compete with your opposition in the quality of the tea you sell ?

Make "SALADA" the leader in your tea department, and you will realize the value of this suggestion.

2 "Pushers" of St. George's Baking Powder

First—Is the St. George Quality. St. George's is not only a pure Cream of Tartar Baking Powder, but every ingredient in it tests absolutely pure. The food laws of Canada are not half as stringent as our regulations as to the purity of everything that goes into St. George's.

Second—Is St. George Advertising. We are constantly talking St. George's in the newspapers and magazines. We are reminding people of St. George's by huge posters on the billboards and attractive cards in the street cars. We sell St. George's for you—all the year round.

Take advantage of St. George's reputation for quality and our good work in publicity.

Stock St. George's, the baking powder that sells.

Canned Goods FROM A MODEL FACTORY.

THE NIAGARA FALLS CANNING CO., with the newest, most modern, and most sanitary factory in Canada, have now on hand a full pack of which are of finest quality, and are sure to win and hold customers for every grocer who stocks them.

Refugee Wax Beans, Select Hand Packed Tomatoes, Crawford Peaches, Bartlett Pears, and Gallon Apples

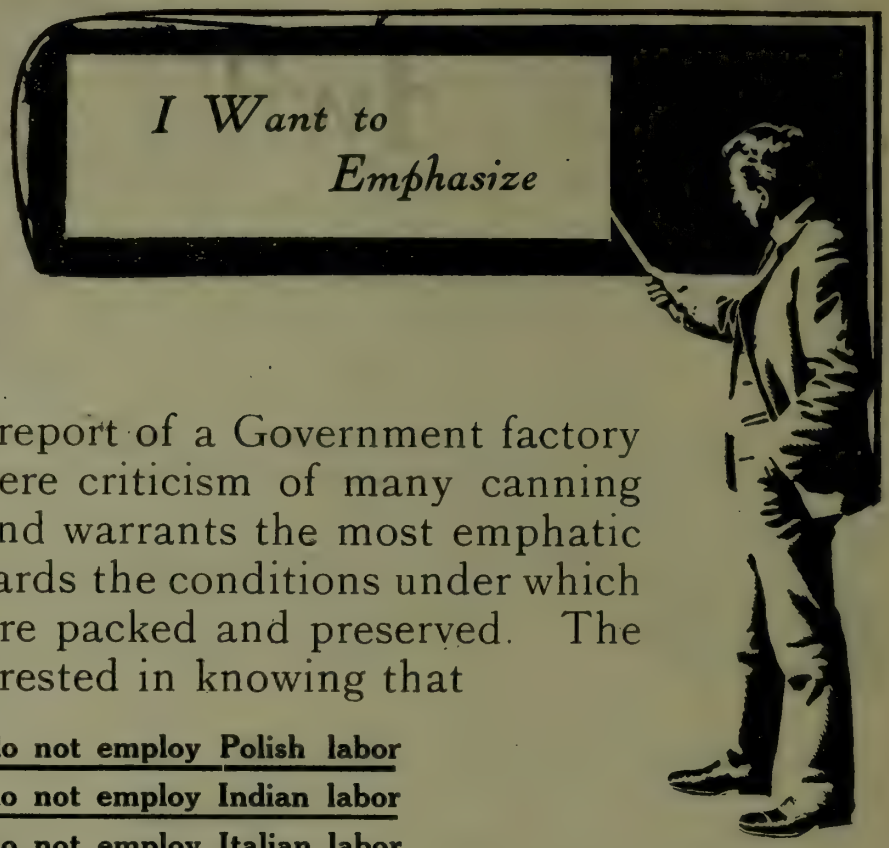
We invite comparison with other goods, which will convince at once that we are in a class by ourselves. Our factory is a model from mechanical and sanitary standpoints.

We pack all goods in SANITARY ENAMEL-LINED CANS, which preserves the natural flavor and color of fruits and vegetables. No cheap stuff – all high-grade goods, and guaranteed to be as represented.

The Niagara Falls Canning Company

Essex Cleanliness



The recent report of a Government factory inspector is a severe criticism of many canning establishments, and warrants the most emphatic statements as regards the conditions under which all Essex goods are packed and preserved. The trade will be interested in knowing that —We do not employ Polish labor

—We do not employ Indian labor
—We do not employ Italian labor

but confine all our employees to resident families of Essex, with their old-fashioned ideas of cleanliness in the preparation of any food-product. The factory itself is modern and up-to-date, fitted throughout with every facility for doing things right, and supplied with every convenience for keeping everything clean. We could say more, but anything more ought not to be necessary. It is enough that we guarantee all Essex products to be of highest possible quality, conforming rigidly with all Pure Food laws, and absolutely clean and wholesome in every possible detail.

If you want the best be sure of your factory.
Our kitchens are open for public inspection at all times.

Maritime Board of Trade Convention

Representatives of the Busy Towns in the Provinces by the Sea Meet in Halifax to Discuss Business and Commercial Problems—Shall the C.P.R. Be Given Running Rights Over the Intercolonial?—Developing Trade With the West Indies—The P. E. I. Tunnel and the All Red Route Again to the Fore.

The annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade, one of the most important factors in the development of the general commercial activity of the Maritime Provinces, was held in Halifax on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, August 19, 20 and 21. A fine attendance of delegates, eloquent speeches and the evidences of a keen interest in the progress of the provinces, in St. Paul's Hall, one of the finest to be found anywhere in Canada, marked this, the 14th convention of the organization.

The convention opened on Wednesday morning with President A. M. Bell in the chair. On the platform were Vice-President Hon. Geo. E. Hughes and W. B. Snowball, Mayor Crosby, of Halifax and Geo. E. Faulkner, President of the Halifax Board of Trade. Most notable was the presence of Lieut.-Governor D. C. Fraser, who delivered an address of welcome. It was stirring and cordial referring at length to the anniversary and unveiling of a tablet in commemoration of the establishment of responsible government in Nova Scotia. It was, he said, the meeting of the Maritime Board which had really caused the choosing of the date for the celebration. He credited the board with being an important factor in upbuilding the industries and commerce of the Maritime Provinces.

Mayor Crosby, of Halifax, then extended a welcome on behalf of the city. He had thought, he said, of extending the freedom of the city but he would do better. He would extend to all the delegates all the privileges that as Mayor he was capable of doing.

G. E. Faulkner, president of the Halifax Board of Trade then added his welcome, going into some reminiscences of other meetings held years ago in Halifax. He trusted that great benefits would result from the meeting. All these addresses of welcome were heartily applauded.

The venerable secretary, C. M. Creed, then called the roll, being received with applause.

Secretary Creed then read his annual report as follows:

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

To the President and Members of the Maritime Board of Trade:

Gentlemen:

Your Secretary-Treasurer begs herewith to hand you his report for the year:

All the recommendations and resolutions passed at the last annual meeting were forwarded to the Ministers of the various departments of the Federal Government; those concerning the Provincial Governments were forwarded to the Premiers of same, with the Canadian Grocer containing report of the proceedings of the annual meeting. All resolutions passed, with copies of the Canadian Grocer, were forwarded to all Boards of Trade, and copies of the Canadian Grocer were forwarded to all the delegates to the annual meeting, and also to the Chambers of Commerce and Agricultural Societies in the British West Indies and British Guiana.

On October 21 all resolutions, with copies of the Grocer, were forwarded to the following Maritime Province members in advance of the opening of Federal Parliament: W. S. Loggie and Dr. J. W. Daniel, New Brunswick; J. J. Hughes, P.E. Island; Dr. J. B. Black, H. J. Logan, B. B. Law and A. K. McLean, Nova Scotia; in order that they could become familiar with them.

On December 3, shortly after the opening of the Federal Parliament, copies of the Grocer, also all resolutions, were forwarded to members of the Cabinet, and to all Senators and members from the Maritime Provinces.

Annual Meeting at St. John.

The annual meeting at St. John was very successful; the subjects were well debated; the attendance large, and a number of the resolutions passed were brought forward and discussed at the Federal Parliament and doubtless good results will be attained thereby.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The Canadian Grocer published the proceedings of the annual meeting this year very neatly in pamphlet form. It was a credit to them, and was much appreciated by the members of the Board.

New Boards.

Boards have been formed at Inverness, Port Hood and Springhill, and have affiliated. One has also been formed at Riverport, N.S. It has not yet affiliated but we hope it may do so during the coming year.

Unaffiliated Boards.

The Boards of Trade not yet affiliated have had every attention paid them during the year, and I am pleased to report the Boards of Middleton and Shelburne have affiliated; all the unaffiliated Boards have been invited to be represented at the annual meeting.

Correspondence With Boards.

This has been strictly attended to during the year; has never been allowed to lag, and am pleased to report good results have followed.

Notice of Annual Meetings.

On August 3 railway arrangements for delegates, place and date of meeting, also programmes of entertainment were mailed to all Boards. On August 10 the subjects for discussion were also mailed.

In conclusion, during the past year everything requisite has been done by me for the improvement and enlargement of the Board, at the same time doing all possible to assist your worthy President, in which I have had the valuable assistance of Rev. A. E. Burke, of Alberton, P.E.I., M. G. DeWolf, Esq., of Kentville, and also of E. A. Saunders, Esq., Corresponding Secretary of Halifax, and trust all will meet your approval.

Accounts for the Year.

The accounts for the year are all prepared, but as several Boards will pay their per capita tax before the close of this day's meeting they will be presented to-morrow for your approval and audit.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CHARLES A. CREED,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Letters of regret at inability to attend were read from a number of prominent business men, including the Montreal Board of Trade, the Boards of Toronto, Winnipeg, and others, also from the Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, John Bayne MacLean, President MacLean Pub. Co., the Monetary Times, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and a number of western daily newspapers.

Reports From 1907 Committees.

While waiting for a report of the Agenda Committee the time was taken up by the hearing of reports from committees on different subjects, appointed last year.

In the matter of technical schools, the President, A. M. Bell, reported for his committee, appointed last year. They had only to thank the Government for the splendid work on technical schools, instead of having to ask for any favors.

Mr. Bell also expressed great regret that Rev. Father Burke, of Summerside, was unable to be present at the convention. He would be much missed, his enthusiasm and geniality for years having been such a power at the meetings.

The Agenda Committee comprised M. G. DeWolfe, W. B. Snowball, Hon. George E. Hughes, G. E. Faulkner, A. C. Pyke.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

President A. M. Bell then delivered his address as follows:

"It gives me very great pleasure to add a word of welcome to the addresses which have already been given. It is certainly highly gratifying to have such a large representation, and I wish to voice the hope of every citizen of Halifax, that you will carry away with you very pleasant memories of this occasion, and that this may be in all respects the best annual meeting that the Maritime Board of Trade has held.

"I wish again to thank you for the honor you have done me in electing me as your President. I bespeak your support in the discharge of the duties of the office, and your kindness in overlooking any defects.

HON. GEO. E. HUGHES,

Of Charlottetown, P. E. I., the Board's New President.

"As I have endeavored to prepare the address with which these gatherings are usually opened, I have been deeply impressed with the great natural advantages with which a kind Providence has endowed these Maritime Provinces, and I wish so to impress this thought upon the mind of all present as to inspire an enthusiastic confidence in this part of the Dominion in which our lot is happily cast.

"It has been said as a Board we cannot legislate; we can, however, suggest, and it is encouraging to note that our legislators are turning more and more to these annual meetings for information as to the attitude taken by the commercial men of the Provinces in matters affecting trade interests.

Agriculture.

"Within the last few years much improvement has been made in our Provinces in agricultural methods. The influence of the Agricultural College at Truro, of the Experimental Farms in different parts of our Provinces, of the lectures by Professors Sears, Cumming and others, the Winter Fair at Amherst, these and other influences have had their effect in developing our agricultural resources along modern lines. Much, however, remains to be done to make farm life sufficiently profitable and attractive, particularly to the young people, who too often leave the farm for city life. We need better roads and it certainly seems unfortunate that while we have an abundance of good grazing lands, we should have to depend so largely on Ontario for our supplies of beef and other farm products. Since our last meeting vigorous action has been taken by the Governments of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to induce suitable immigrants to settle on the farms in these Provinces. Information regarding our advantages is being judiciously distributed, and departments have been opened for information, etc. These steps are already producing good results and the outlook in this respect is hopeful.

Mining.

"In this important industry our coal mines are being vigorously prosecuted. Our collieries are producing increasing quantities year by year; new seams are being opened. and this particular industry is in a flourishing condition. Though large deposits of iron ore are known to exist in various parts of our Provinces, our iron mines are as yet in their infancy, and the supplies of iron ore for the steel works of our Provinces are being largely drawn from Newfoundland. It is to be regretted that gold mining, which formerly gave employment to large numbers of men, and created a demand for a great deal of material, is at present in a very depressed state. It is to be hoped that one result of the technical education which is going on in our Provinces, will be to put this once valuable industry on a paying basis.

Fisheries.

"The action taken by the Maritime Board at its last annual meeting in St. John in endorsing the resolution for the appointment of a Fishery Board for these Provinces has been vigorously followed up by a deputation which visited Ottawa to impress this important matter on the Government. So far no action has been taken in this direction, and I regret to note that there seems to be some hostility to this measure by the Fishermen's Unions and others. The inception of new methods for catching fish and the desirability of improving the methods of curing, would seem to show the necessity for an organization on which those who catch fish, those who cure them and those who handle them would all be represented. The fishing business, while remunerative to the fishermen, has for some time past been unsatisfactory to the exporters, the high prices curtailed consumption and resulted in the accumulation of stocks and the general demoralization of the trade. During the present season there has been a marked decline in prices of all kinds of fish stuffs. Fortunately for the fishermen, this drop in prices has been offset by a catch of all kinds of fish much larger than the average. This will mean a more general distribution of the income from this branch of industry, and the returns to the toilers will probably be as large as when prices were higher. The subject of the better administration of the fisheries is again to come before this Board, and it is earnestly to be hoped that this can be so impressed upon those in authority that better methods will obtain, and that we will be able to look with pride on this great natural industry. A new feature has recently been inaugurated in connection with our fisheries by the introduction of steam trawling, which has been so successfully carried on in Great Britain and elsewhere. The Pioneer Steam Trawling Co., Limited, is now operating a trawler. This vessel will be used for the salted and the fresh fish business. The undertaking is necessarily in an experimental state. Enough, however, has already been demonstrated to warrant the prediction that in a few years' time our provinces will have a fleet of steam trawlers and will be fully supplying the growing Canadian markets, instead of having a large part of this business done by Gloucester as at present. It should also mean a development of the dry fish industry, which will keep our fishermen at home, and thus help to upbuild this end of our great Dominion.

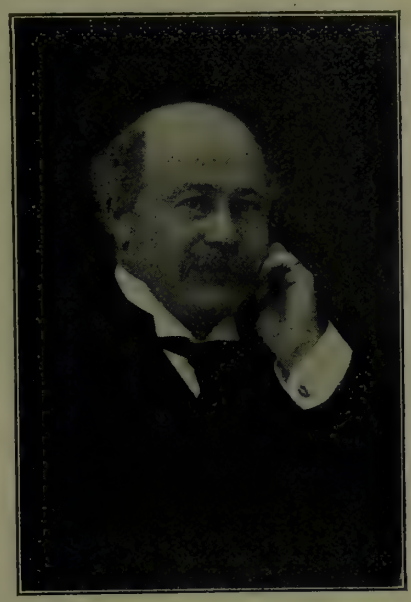
Technical Education.

"The Province of Nova Scotia is the first one in the Dominion of Canada to adopt a comprehensive system of technical education. Schools in the industrial centres of the province have enjoyed a successful session during the six winter months of 1907-08. There are eighteen schools for coal miners, twelve for steam and mechanical engineering, and four for workmen in general industrial pursuits. All these aim to instruct the workingmen in the general scientific principles underlying their vocations and to increase their industrial intelligence and working efficiency. There was a grand total of over 1,300 students in the schools last winter who were receiving all kinds of technical instruction practically free. While we are assembled in this annual meeting, the corner stone of the first purely Technical College in these provinces, if not in the Dominion, will be laid in our city. Action on somewhat similar lines had been taken by the Province of New Brunswick, where in the Provincial University at Fredericton, there will be courses of study of forestry and civil engineering. Prince Edward Island has also taken steps to add technical training to its public school system. To the greatest possible extent this technical tuition in our provinces is being given free of charge; this will be a great boon to our people, and should give an impetus to all branches of engineering, mining and other industrial work. It will now no longer be necessary for our sons to leave home to fit themselves for their life work along any of these lines, and it is further to be hoped that another result will be the development of such improved conditions that there will be employment for them in our industries.

Steel Ship Building.

"The advantages and facilities for establishing a steel ship building plant in the Maritime Provinces have been repeatedly before the previous conferences of the Maritime Board. So far the Dominion Government has not seen its way clear to assist this industry with the subsidy asked for. It is worthy of note that the first steel ship constructed in the Atlantic Provinces was recently launched at New Glasgow. This venture will be watched with much interest and much will depend on the success of this experiment in encouraging or discouraging further developments of this industry.



W. B. SNOWBALL,

Of Chatham, N.B., 1st Vice-President Elect.

Transportation.

"The subject of transportation must still occupy a foremost place in the commercial prosperity of the Maritime Provinces. One drawback to the development of our provinces to-day is that, with the exception of the southern part of New Brunswick, which is served by the Canadian Pacific Railway, there is only one line of railroad connecting us with the West, and the overwhelming vote by which the present Government was sustained in Nova Scotia at the last general election, shows most unmistakably the attitude of desire and expectancy with which the people of these provinces are looking for increased railway communication with the rest of the continent. From all quarters of these provinces eyes are beting turned to the progress of the new line, and the expectations that are being formed are shown in the preparations that are being made for double tracking that part of the I.C. Railway from Moncton to Halifax and St. John. The idea of having the branch lines in the provinces, which are now owned by other corporations taken over by the Government as feeders to the Intercolonial, which was indorsed by this board at the last session, has been brought to the notice of the Provincial and Federal Governments. As a means of a much more thorough and satisfactory transit between the Atlantic Provinces and other parts of Canada, the urgent need of making unbroken communications between Prince Edward Island and the mainland, by a tunnel, is worthy of serious consideration. Until this is accomplished, I would suggest that this Maritime Board urge that the Governments take such steps as may be necessary to make the transportation to and from Prince Edward Island at the rates of one long haul instead of three short hauls as at present.

Fast Atlantic Service.

"The subject of fast steamship communication with Great Britain is closely connected with the transportation problem. The recent trip of His Majesty's ship, "Indomitable," was an object lesson to the world on this important matter and showed as no amount of argument could do, the possibility of a fast ferry between Great Britain and Canada. Since the last Colonial Conference this subject has assumed a somewhat different aspect, inasmuch as it is now thought of as a part of a more comprehensive whole, which will embrace a service from the Mother Country to Australia, via Canada. The success of this project depends on the cooperation and financial support of Great Britain, Canada, New Zealand and Australia. The importance of this matter to the Maritime Provinces cannot be over estimated. A port in the Maritime Provinces must, of necessity, be used as the ocean terminus for such a line during six months of the year, and with improved railway facilities it is to be hoped that the same port will be used the year round. Few things would make these provinces better known to the world than the passenger travel which would be developed by such a scheme, and it is to be hoped that within the near future we may see our hopes realized in this respect.

Tourist Travel.

"One important asset of these Maritime Provinces is the cool and invigorating climate in the summer time. Attention has recently been drawn by the press to the immense value of tourist trade in the State of Maine, where it is estimated the stream of travel is worth to that State from 15 to 20 million dollars per year. This is a business that must in the near future develop very greatly, and it behooves us to advertise our advantages and to make preparation for the influx which is bound to come. We have in these provinces points of interest of a historic character, which are not found in any other part of the Continent. The conflict between the French and English for the possession of America was carried on for many years within our borders, and the forts at Annapolis, Windsor, Louisburg and Forts Cumberland and Lawrence should be preserved by the Government. It is perhaps putting this matter on a low level to endeavor thus to commercialize history, but we are here as a commercial body, and while there are higher grounds for preserving these relics of the past, our commercial instincts should prompt us also in this direction.

"Representing, as we do, different parts of these provinces, it must be that there are some here, who from close contact with the conditions affecting the forests, the mines, the sea, or the great transportation interests with which our welfare is so closely identified, can speak with authority on improvements or developments which will be desirable.

"What our Maritime Provinces need is to be discovered; to be appreciated; to be populated; we are not sufficiently well known by our fellow Canadians in the provinces to the west of us, and our provinces are not sufficiently appreciated by our own people.

"If we turn to the last census of 1901, we will find that the value of the annual products of these three provinces are:

From agriculture	$ 36,809,822
From forests	6,692,604
From mines	9,708,417
From fisheries	11,242,878
From manufactures	56,559,891
	$121,013,612

"Taking the population at 894,000, this is equal to an income of $675 per annum to every family of five of the population.

Forests.

"The lumber industry is one of the industries of our provinces which, at present, is suffering from low prices ruling in foreign markets. We need to preserve our forest wealth from the ravages of fire. This is recognized by careful regulations in the Provinces of New Brunswick, and I am pleased to note that largely through the efforts of the Lumbermen's Association, formed a few years ago in Nova Scotia, steps have been taken in this direction. The importance of preserving for our own people the benefits of the manufacture of our lumber, instead of exporting it in its crudest state will be brought before you, and it is to be regretted that Mr. Evans, who is an expert in this department, is unable to be present.

Manufactures.

"Our vast deposits of coal and iron, in close proximity to an abundant supply of lumber, put us in a position to become a large manufacturing centre, while the ocean at our doors forms a great highway on which we may transport our products to every part of the world. The output of our factories as will be seen by the statistics already quoted, forms a very large part of our annual income, and the number of these factories must be expected to increase more rapidly in the future, as it is a well known fact that every industrial institution has a tendency to attract to itself kindred industries. The principle is exemplified in Sydney, Amherst, Truro and other places which are rapidly becoming manufacturing centres. While we have an abundant supply of raw material, particularly in coal, iron and lumber, one of our great needs, if we are to successfully compete with other manufacturing centres, is cheap power. I am pleased to note the steps which have been taken at Amherst to utilize waste coal for generating electric power.

"The possibility of harnessing the tides of the Bay of Fundy for this purpose have also been discussed and have reached an experimental stage. It is much to be regretted that with such an abundance of coal, the price of this essential commodity is so high as to be a serious hindrance to the development of our industries. This is a matter which will have to be vigorously grappled with, and I commend it to the careful consideration of this board.

West India Trade.

"The importance of the West India trade to the Maritime Provinces, and more particularly to the port of Halifax and St. John, has too long been recognized to necessitate my dilating upon it at great length. The West Indies, unless barricaded by high tariff walls must always be one of our natural markets, because they need our products of the sea farm and forest, products to some extent which they cannot obtain as well elsewhere. We have a keen personal interest, in the industrial and commercial welfare of the British West Indies, as every merchant should have in a good customer, and we rejoice that through the beneficence of a kind Government these Southern Colonies have been able, during the past few years, to become prosperous, and to demonstrate to the rest of the Empire that freed from the handicap of the bounties paid by continental nations to domestic beet growers, they are able to produce cane sugar at a profit.

"Recently several of these Colonies have shown their appreciation of Canada's effort by intimating to the Imperial Government that they are disposed to reciprocate the help we have rendered. The Legislatures of Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands a few months ago sanctioned this suggestion by a vote of their members, and the Board of Trade of Trinidad is on record that it favors the idea of a preference to Canada. A slight tariff advantage in the British West Indies will help Canada to secure a larger share of the 750,000 barrels of flour which are now consumed in the different British Islands. It will help the export trade of Halifax and St. John, and incidentally our railways and steamship lines will secure an increased business.

The effort to bring about this most desirable increase of trade between Canada and the British West Indies may, to some extent, be credited to members of this Board. You will remember that two years ago Mr. Jones, Mr. Schofield and Mr. Allan were sent out to enquire how Canadian trade might be increased, and that later, when the conference of the Colonies was held at Barbadoes, Mr. Jones was sent out as a representative of the Canadian Government. I think this Board of Trade can take credit of itself for having initiated the first delegation, and I refer to it here because so many people have a habit of saying that Boards of Trade talk a lot, but never accomplish anything of very practical use.

"As I have already intimated, the interests of the Maritime Provinces are very closely allied with those of our friends in the West Indies, and anything that will assist in making our business relationship more intimate than at present is a step in the right direction. I understand that one of the subjects which this Board will have to consider during its present session is the extension of the present cable system from Bermuda to Barbadoes, Trinidad and Demerara. I am not familiar with the details of the project which has been, or will be submitted to our Government, but I would venture the opinion that whatever will make it easier for us to communicate quickly and cheaply with the Colonies referred to must be of great advantage to these provinces by the sea. I repeat there is no more important question to the business men of the Maritime Provinces than that of better trade relations with the British West Indies.

Business Conditions Encouraging.

"A careful analysis of the present business conditions of the Maritime Provinces does not reveal anything that need occasion us worry. Rather may we congratulate ourselves that while the rest of this continent has felt the general trade depression quite keenly, we have thus far managed to escape acute distress. True, we have been forced to take in sail, and proceed cautiously, and some of our enterprising merchants and manufacturers have naturally rebelled at being restricted; but the effect of this restraint will unquestionably be beneficial. The past twelve months with the merchants of these provinces have been characterized by carefulness in trading and by systematic effort to turn stocks into cash. Undoubtedly this has not been helpful to the volume of the jobbers' or manufacturers' sales, but it has accomplished a most desirable purpose in that to-day the bills payable of the average merchant are smaller, and his stock in better shape than for many years.

"Shortly we may look for a better condition of the lumber markets and the foreign fish markets. The immense crops of the West, too, will be bringing in money that must eventually assist our manufacturing industries, and I think we can claim without danger of being charged with too great a measure of self-confidence that the provinces as a whole are as financially vigorous and healthy as they have been at any time in the past twenty-five years. The little rest we have had, like all good tonics, has helped to brace us up—and with an improvement in the general condition, we shall find ourselves ready to become more aggressive and enterprising than ever."

Compliments for the President.

M. G. DeWolfe, on moving the adoption of the address, said it was full of material for thought and was bound to do good. He referred especially to the work done by the Board, which he felt had grown so important that this body had won the ear of the Federal Government, after 14 years of hard work. He complimented the President upon an able address and upon his work this year, and moved a hearty vote of thanks. It was seconded by Senator Ross, who also spoke flatteringly of Mr. Bell's address, as well as of the Board.

Shortening the I.C.R.

The Board then called upon the Dartmouth delegates to present their resolutions. Mr. Johnston then took up the question of shortening of the I.C.R. between Moncton and Halifax. He dwelt at some length upon the need of this improvement. He knew the Government was now taking some action in this connection. The Dartmouth Board thought it was in the interest of the Dominion to ask the Government to shorten this railway. He presented the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Weeks:

"Whereas—An effort is about to be made to shorten the line of the Intercolonial Railway between Moncton and the Port of Halifax, and whereas, it is understood that the Dominion Government is about to make a survey for the purpose of finding out if it is possible to shorten said line, and whereas, it is reported that a line from Grand Lake to Dartmouth can be obtained, which would shorten the distance between these points about nine miles, therefore resolved, the Secretary write the Minister of Railways, calling his attention to this fact, and asking him to have such route surveyed."

Senator Ross and W. B. Snowball also spoke on the subject of shortening the railway. Mr. Snowball said he had a plan to show, a new route to Liverpool from Chatham, N.B., which would give them a route 350 miles shorter than to any other port. Further, they were working so that the water would be deepened so that no matter what happened with other ports Chatham was going ahead, and he hoped for the co-operation of the Maritime Board.

G. M. Campbell, of Halifax, also spoke re the matter, supporting the Dartmouth Board resolution.

The Pulpwood Question.

W. B. Snowball reported that he had been asked by the Manufacturers' Association to tell the Board that that body was in full accord with them regarding memorializing the Government re the prohibition of the exportation of pulp and pulp wood from Canada. He pointed out how he had interviewed Sir Wilfrid Laurier on this subject, and efforts were being made to bring about some legislation to prevent the continued depletion of our pulp and pulp wood. Sir Wilfrid had spoken of a commission, but he did not think a commission was needed. It was a case of the Government acting promptly. Pulp lumber was being stored in Maine with the cute idea of providing against a day when Canada would legislate against them and they could not get wood from New Brunswick or Nova Scotia. The subject should commend itself to every Board of Trade, and each one should keep after this legislation until it was obtained.

C. E. Crosby, of Berwick, also spoke on the pulp question, supporting the statements already made.

The resolution re this matter, passed last year, was reaffirmed, making it read "pulp wood" instead of using the word "pulp," as in the resolution on the paper.

A. M. BELL,

Of Halifax, the Retiring President, Whose Yeoman Service for the Board Was Highly Spoken of.

THURSDAY MORNING'S SESSION.

Alberton delegates opened the session by a resolution presented by Mr. McNeil, of O'Leary, P.E.I., regarding the inspection of butter in the Provinces. He dwelt at some length upon the fallacy of the small dairy farmers' methods. Two-thirds of the dairy produce, he said, was unfit to go on a working man's table. He blamed the Legislature for not taking steps to improve the dairy methods by putting into force inspection of butter. He referred, of course, to Prince Edward Island. He did not say that good butter was not made on the Island. The truth was that the small farmer who never patronized factories was at fault. He wanted to see some steps taken to establish a dairy inspector. Butter should be sold by grade, the same as cheese. Inspection of butter would then be enforced.

Dairy Inspection Needed.

Prof. Andrews, of Sackville, seconded this resolution and said that he spoke from a national standpoint. In the Old Country the complaint against our butter was the lack of grading. Danish butter held its own against the world because of its high standard uniformly maintained. Fruit of the Provinces had gained in marketing by inspection. This would apply to butter. The cost of inspection would not be great and he recommended it. The professor quoted a poetic gem parodying "Full many a gem of purest ray serene," but ending with a line describing butter that contained "yellow hair" rhyming with "bear."

Senator Ross thought Mr. McNeil was a little too hard on the Provincial Government. He supported the idea of inspection.

The following resolution in regard to the matter was brought forward:

"Whereas, the making of dairy butter as now practised on the farms of the Maritime Provinces tends to lower the price of their butter in the markets, and by their keeping of milk home for that purpose tends to the closing of our cheese and butter factories, to the detriment of our agriculture in general, and of the factory business in particular, therefore, resolved that we believe that a system of inspection would soon drive out of the market all poor butter and would induce the farmers to patronize the factories, which would put them all on a paying basis and would be the means of building up a dairy industry second to none in the Dominion. And we strongly urge upon the Federal Government the necessity of suitable legislation to that end."

The P.E.I. Tunnel.

The transportation and tunnel was again brought up amid many regrets at the absence of Rev. Father Burke. Mr. Birch, of Alberton, said the Board might be tired of hearing from the Island regarding the tunnel. He did not think it was right to have the splendid people of the Island separated from the mainland and the civilization of "Chatham" and other places of note for so many months of the year. They should have a tunnel under the Northumberland Straits. He hoped the Government of the Dominion would not turn a deaf ear to the appeal.

Mr. Stewart, of Summerside, seconded the resolution, and it was adopted.

J. G. Fielding spoke on the question of improvement of freight rates.

Senator Ross pointed out the drawback of narrow gauge railway on the Island. The more that was done for P.E.I. by the Government, the more members they seemed to send in opposition. He did not like to mention politics, but this was a point anyway.

G. E. Faulkner, of Halifax, thought that the tunnel alone was not the only thing that would benefit the Island, and he thought the resolution might be changed so as to be more reasonable.

Mr. Birch, who made the resolution, said it was exactly the same as last year. He was willing to expand or modify it as long as a strong resolution was put through. No matter how strong a steamer was built, none could go through the ice. It was floating ice, sometimes 25 feet thick and varying to 18 inches. It was a big loss to the farmers to be unable to ship their products at the right time.

Hon. G. E. Hughes, of Charlottetown, remarked that one line of the resolution, "to complete federation," should be omitted. The question was entirely one of cost. It was questioned whether the Island was worth the large amount involved in the building of a tunnel.

Mr. Birch then agreed to withdraw his resolution, and moved that the Board reaffirm the resolution made by Father Burke, two years previously. This was carried unanimously.

Regarding Transportation.

Mr. Purdy, of St. John, proposed a resolution, seconded by W. F. Burdett, regarding transportation as follows, speaking at length upon the subject:

"Recognizing the vital relation which facilities for transportation bear to the development of trade and commerce, and believing that during the era of railway construction the value and importance of the common highways as feeders to the railways has been overlooked, and their improvement neglected, so that in respect to the character and condition of these necessary means of transportation our country is now far behind the age; it is, therefore Resolved, that in the opinion of this board the time has now arrived when a portion at least of the heavy expenditure made for the extension of the railway systems might, with advantage, be diverted to the improvement of the principal highways of the country, according to the most approved methods, under the supervision of competent engineers. And, while noting with satisfaction the steps which have already been taken in this direction by our Provincial Governments, it is the desire of this board to urge upon them the importance of the highway problem, and to suggest that an earnest enquiry be made into the working of our present highway laws, the expenditure of available funds in highway construction and repair, the methods in use, and results obtained; also, that information be obtained with regard to recent legislation and methods in use in other countries where the best results have been obtained, with a view to ascertaining whether and in what manner any improvement may be effected in the system of expenditure and control, and methods of work now in use in the Maritime Provinces.

"Also, Resolved, that in the opinion of this board, any expenditure of provincial revenue upon highways, should, so far as possible, be devoted to work of a permanent character in the improvement, more especially, of the main avenues of travel and the approaches to the principal commercial centres. That such permanent improvements should preferably be undertaken by the municipalities, aided by the Government, the work being carried on according to the advice and specifications of a trained highway engineer employed by the Government. And, further, Resolved that the secretary of this board be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to the Provincial Secretary (or the Chief of the Department of Public Works) of each province."

Road Improvements.

Mr. Black, of Sackville, concurred in this resolution. He dwelt at some length upon the breadth and importance of the question of transportation and urged the need of good roads as a notable force in increasing earning power of industries, especially in the country districts.

The New President.

Hon. George E. Hughes was born in Charlottetown on April 5th, 1853. After receiving an education in the Public Schools and in Prince of Wales and St. Dunstan's Colleges, he entered the office of Dr. Frank D. Beer, of Charlottetown, where he received that grounding in the knowledge of drugs that has made him one of the most successful druggists in the Province. In 1872 he entered the drug business. In addition to this business, Mr. Hughes manages a farm and tannery, and his shrewdness and ability have won for him success in all three. He has always taken an active part in civic matters, and was for eight years a member of the City Council. In 1901, he was elected a member of the Legislative Assembly as a representative of Charlottetown and Royalty. On March 31st, 1904, he became a member of the Executive, in the place of Mr. John F. Whear, who resigned to take the position of Postmaster. Mr. Hughes was re-elected by a big majority in the general elections of that year, and on re-organization of the Arthur Peters' administration, he retained a seat in the Executive without portfolio. He is one of the hardest working members of the Executive, and his business training has made his counsel valued in the discussions around the Board.

He is also a member of the important committee appointed by the Government prior to the meeting of the House to draw up a statement of Prince Edward Island's claims against the Dominion Government. He is a trustee of the Provincial Hospital for the Insane, and of the Provincial Poor House.

He was one of the founders and the first president of the Prince Edward Island Development and Tourist Association, a position he still holds. He is a director in the Provincial Exhibition Association, and President of the Board of Trade, also President of the Provincial Pharmaceutical Association.

G. E. Faulkner pointed out what efforts had been made by Nova Scotia in the direction of roads improvement. He believed renewed, honest efforts were being made to improve the roads.

W. B. Snowball, of Chatham, N.B., supported the resolution, referring to the good roads policy, being one by which the New Brunswick Government went into power. He hoped they would spend a million on road improvements

Senator Ross also spoke in support of perfect roads.

M. G. DeWolfe, of Kentville, urged that farmers should use wider tires for their heavy loads and then the roads would not be so cut up.

The resolution was carried. P. E. Bentley, of Truro, moved, seconded by Mr. Yuill, a special resolution regarding insurance, as follows:

"Whereas, The importance of fire insurance on retail stocks of merchandise is not by any means as fully realized as it should be; therefore, Resolved, That in the opinion of this Maritime Board of Trade some united effort should be made by the wholesale houses to bring this matter before all their customers.

"Further Resolved, That this board believes that if a copy of this resolution was mailed by every wholesale firm to its customers, with a letter stating its importance from a credit standpoint, it would stimulate them to procure better protection in case of fire; and further, Resolved, That the mercantile agencies be requested to make this information a special feature in their reports." Carried.

Uniform Rates on Apples.

Mr. Innis, of the Kentville Board, then brought up the question of putting shippers of apples all on the same footing as regards freight rates. They were not complaining of the rates but merely wanted uniformity.

The resolution in this connection passed last year was reaffirmed.

J. DeWolfe, of Halifax, said he was in the shipping business and it was well known that large shippers always received preference over small ones.

Geo. E. Hughes, of Charlottetown, suggested a change in the resolution to make it read "local" as well as "foreign" ports. In Prince Edward Island they were much bothered with absence of uniformity of rates. The resolution was reaffirmed by having the words "foreign ports" cut out.

J. L. Stewart, of Chatham, N.B., also spoke on the resolution. He felt that the part referring to transportation companies which received subsidies from the Government should be eliminated. All transportation companies should be included.

To Reduce Telephone Rates.

Mr. Tanner, of Pictou, advanced a resolution regarding the reduction of telephone rates in the provinces. He spoke at some length on the exorbitant character of the price of 'phones and the toll rates. The rural rate of 25 cents for a farmer to telephone was far too much. The Nova Scotia Telephone Co. was piling up money and he believed that the public were forced to pay prohibitive rates.

Mr. Innis, of Kentville, seconded the resolution and pointed out that in their district they had a telephone at $10 a year.

Mr. Black, of Sackville, spoke as a member of The Telephone Co., of New Brunswick, and said that he knew that the provincial companies were at work upon a uniform system of rates equitable to all. In New Brunswick the claim of unjust rates was being discussed all the time and it was a live issue.

D. A. Morrison, of Amherst, supported the idea of getting a specific resolution from the board, as it would tend towards improving rates on all the companies.

For Uniform Freight Rates.

Mr. Roach, of Windsor, N.S., brought up the difficulty experienced by having only one express company on the line of the Dominion Atlantic Railway. The rates were lacking in uniformity and in some cases excessive. Parcels should have one through rate for certain distances. Kentville had a similar subject before its board.

Mr. Whitman, of Annapolis, spoke in support of this idea and sympathized with Mr. Roach. He said the Maritime Express Company had complete control of Western Nova Scotia and were unreasonable about pro rating with any other company.

Mr. Innis said there must be fair play to the Dominion Atlantic, as it was not a question of their pro rating, but it was a question of the bigger companies not being willing to pro rate. He knew that the rates of the Dominion Atlantic Express Co., known as the Maritime Express Co., were lower than any other in Canada.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

The board resumed promptly at 2.30 p.m. The express rate proposal from Kentville was not ready so Halifax offered their own resolutions voiced by A. H. Jones, of the city Board of Trade.

The trade with the West Indies had, he thought, been neglected. The exports, about six millions, and imports three millions, showed a decided want of energy in that direction. He compared Canadian trade and that of the United States with the Indies.

The question of cable rates was a vital one. The rates were very high. He quoted the rate of 48 cents a word to Jamaica and others that were too high. He compared the rate of $1.16 to Australia and that of $1.44 to Demerara. This, in contrast, seemed ridiculous.

Mr. Jones moved a resolution, seconded by J. DeWolfe, of Halifax, as follows.

"Whereas, The Halifax & Bermuda Cable Company have intimated to this board that they desire to extend their cable system to the West Indies by the laying of a cable from Bermuda to Barbadoes and thence to Trinidad and British Guiana; and whereas, they have made application to the Governments of Great Britain, Canada and the various West Indian colonies interested for the grant of a yearly subsidy to assist such extension. And whereas, this board recognizing the beneficial effect that the establishment of the present cable between Halifax and Jamaica via Bermuda with consequent decreased charges has had on the Canadian trade with the West Indies, and believing that the further extension to British Guiana by the route previously mentioned would facilitate and improve the business relations between the respective countries.

"Resolved, That the Government of Canada be asked to give the most favorable possible consideration to the request of the Halifax & Bermuda Cable Co. for monetary assistance, provided that the Governments of Great Britain and the Governments of the various West India Islands and British Guiana are prepared to grant subsidies also." Carried.

Mr. Armstrong, of Yarmouth, then took up the question left over from last year re the Federal Government taking over a number of branch lines in Western Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. He moved that the resolution of last year should be reaffirmed. It was seconded by Mr. Eakin.

Mr. Armstrong spoke upon the value of consolidation of the railway services of the Maritime Provinces. Business was suffering generally owing to the diversity of freight rates and the inadequacy of service. He believed the board should urge consolidation upon the Federal House as soon as possible. He especially referred as an example to certain feeders for the I.C.R. Other big railways were continually doing this and this seemed a good business proposition.

H. Logan, M.P., of Amherst, said that he thought this was a most important resolution. He believed unless the Government adopted the policy of buying feeders and of building feeders for the I.C.R. it would never meet the needs of developing the amazing resources of the Maritime Provinces. The Government, he thought, should at least investigate the terms upon which certain branch lines could be either leased or purchased. In Nova Scotia he believed the local branch lines were better feeders to the C.P.R. than to the I.C.R.

He explained that a government railway official was not allowed the leeway of an independent railway man, hence, large quantities of freight went west by C.P.R. and G.T.R.. (Applause.)

Hon. H. R. Emerson, late Minister of Railways, then spoke. He expatiated upon the complexity of the transportation problem in the East. He suggested that this resolution might be broadened to cover every province in which the I.C.R. was operated. He could recommend a connection of some kind with Prince Edward Island. If the policy of expansion of the I.C.R. would not be carried out within 18 months.. then within five years the I.C.R. would cease to be, and would be absorbed by some other system that was sufficiently progressive to meet the wants of the people. That resolution must needs be recognized or decay would set in at an early date. He pictured great possibilities in the progressive policy outlined on the resolution. Great applause greeted the speaker. The resolution was, of course, reaffirmed.

W. B. Snowball greatly approved Mr. Logan's proposal to build new branch lines. He cited an example along both South Shore and North Shore in his own neighborhood of Chatham, where no other service but the I.C.R. could build new lines with profit.

Mr. McNeil said, "Would you include the tunnel on that resolution?"

Mr. Snowball said that the tunnel had been already passed, and any way the isolation of the Prince Edward Islanders had developed a brainy and remarkable people. If they were to get a tunnel and abolish their isolation it might interfere with their mental development. He, however, proposed that Mr. Armstrong might add to his reaffirmation of the resolution, the words referring to the building of new lines.

Mr. Armstrong thought at the present time he would hesitate to lay down a policy different from the one mentioned in the former resolution.

The former resolution was reaffirmed unanimously.

Freight Rates to the Island.

Hon. G. E. Hughes then moved the reaffirmation of the resolution passed last year and proposed by himself re the disproportion of freight rates prevailing to and from Prince Edward Island, when compared with those prevailing from Montreal eastward, and the further resolution regarding the inadequacy of transportation on the steamboat service to and from Prince Edward Island.

Mr. McNeil, of O'Leary, seconded Mr. Hughes and in a vigorous speech pointed out how poor much of the railway service was all over the Island.

"Is it a government railway?" a voice queried. "There isn't anything else there," said Mr. McNeil. He then went on to tell how dairy produce was sometimes delayed, and other products suffered in transit by these slow railroads. He said everything was in the hands of a monopoly except the farmers' products.

T. G. Fielding, of the Island, also spoke in support of the motion.

The motion was reaffirmed unanimously.

Advertising the Provinces.

Mr. Whitman, of Annapolis Royal, then took up the matter of advertising the beauties of the Province of Nova Scotia. He offered the following resolution, making it apply to all the provinces:

"Resolved, the subject of advertising these Provinces by issuing a sporting guide to Nova Scotia so as to induce a larger number of tourists and sportsmen to visit the Provinces be endorsed by the Maritime Board of Trade, and it is recommended that all Boards of Trade furnish necessary information from their respective counties. And further resolved, that a special committee be appointed to devise ways and means to print a guide so as to furnish books at the lowest cost for distribution and sale."

Dr. Breck, of Annapolis Royal, then supported the resolution by reading a splendid paper elaborating upon the beauties of Nova Scotia. He dwelt cleverly upon the attractions of the provinces in natural beauty and the need of advertising. His paper was well received, and the resolution passed unanimously.

Senator Ross supported the resolution by a practical speech.

Mr. Evans, fishery expert, from Ontario, who had spent years in the work of fishery protection, spoke. He pointed out by facts and figures how Maine had made money by advertising its resources for the sportsmen and the money-spending tourist. He referred to the need of preserving their fish and game, mentioning deep sea fishing particularly. He then compared some of the work in a similar way done in Ontario, and showed how extraordinary conditions existed in lakes depleted of their fish by neglect of the property, such, for instance, as Lake Ontario. He referred to the shad fishery commission, now sitting in Halifax.

Tidal Power Scheme.

Mr. Starr, of Wolfville, N.S. then dealt with the following questions:

"Resolved, that the Dominion Government be requested to offer a prize or other sufficient inducement to bring out a practicable and workable scheme to use the tidal rivers of the Bay of Fundy and its branches for the development of continuous power for manufacturing and electrical purposes; also resolved, that the Governments of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick be urged to co-operate and do all in their power to encourage the working out of this scheme."—Carried.

Mr. Beckwith, of Canning, seconded the resolution, and said he believed that the harnessing of these tides was very important.

Prof. Andrews, of Sackville, spoke of the great power of the tides of the Bay of Fundy for manufacturing purposes. If they ever were harnessed, it would have to be done in a large way, and when it was done, it would simply transform the industries of the Maritime Provinces.

The Inverness Railway.

Mr. McDougall, of Inverness, presented a strong resolution, which was adopted, regarding the Inverness Railway, as follows:

"Whereas the Inverness and Richmond Railway Company, now the Inverness Railway and Coal Company, entered into a contract with the Government of Nova Scotia for the construction of a line of railway from a point on the Intercolonial Railway near Point Tupper, on the Strait of Canso, to Broad Cove, now known as Inverness, a distance of 61 miles; and whereas said line of railway was so built, the company receiving a Federal Government subsidy of $6,400 per mile, a local Government subsidy of $4,000 per mile, a subsidy from the municipality of the County of Inverness of $1,000 per mile, together with a free right-of-way; and whereas the provisions of the contract entered into by the said company with the Nova Scotia Government in this matter have not been satisfactorily carried out on the part of the said company; and whereas the non-observance of those provisions causes much inconvenience to passengers traveling over said road, while the high freight and parcel rates seriously affect the commercial interests of the patrons of said road throughout the Maritime Provinces and elsewhere; and whereas the grievances herein referred to have been set before the Government of Nova Scotia by petition in March last, resolved, that, in the opinion of this board, the Government of Nova Scotia should give careful consideration to the matters set forth in said petition, a copy of which is hereto attached, more particularly the providing by said company of sufficient rolling stock, the adjustment of freight rates, and the providing of sufficient accommodation for passengers at Point Tupper Junction; further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Government of Nova Scotia."—Carried.

"To the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council of the Province of Nova Scotia: The petition of the Inverness Board of Trade of the Town of Inverness, in the County of Inverness, humbly sheweth: That, the Inverness and Richmond Railway Company, Limited, a body corporate, entered into a contract, dated the 23rd day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, with the Government of Nova Scotia for certain considerations therein mentioned to build and complete a line of railway from a point on the Intercolonial Railway to Broad Cove, now the town of Inverness; and on and after completion of the said line of railway, the said company was in and by the said contract required to truly and faithfully keep the same and the rolling stock necessary therefor in good sufficient working and running order, and to continuously and faithfully maintain and work the traffic of the said railway, and to run at least one passenger train each way daily (Sunday excepted) at a moderate rate of speed; that in and by the said contract it is also provided that the tariff and passenger traffic on the said railway shall be subject to the approval and revision by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council; that the specifications annexed to the said contract which are by its terms embodied therein and made a part thereof require the said company to provide first and second-class cars; that the said company was by statute subsequently amalgamated with the Inverness-Richmond Collieries Company, Limited, and is now operating under the name of 'The Inverness Railway and Coal Company' by virtue of the provisions of Chapter 162 of the Statutes of the Province of Nova Scotia for the year 1902; that the said line of railway was completed and the said company received its subsidies from the Provincial and Federal Governments and the said County of Inverness, several years ago, but to this date it has never run a passenger train either way thereon. The only one by which passengers could ever travel was a mixed train, and it is now a coal train with frequently eight or nine large cars laden with coal with one passenger and one mail and baggage car attached thereto; the passenger car cannot truthfully be classified as a first-class one; this train, owing doubtless to its being chiefly a coal train, leaves the town of Inverness twenty minutes earlier than the advertised time, in order to enable it to make connections with the Intercolonial Railway at the junction near Point Tupper Station, thus occasioning much inconvenience and some loss of time to the traveling public; and in several instances causing intending passengers to miss the train; that the said company exacts a first-class fare each way from the passengers and refuses to issue return tickets at other than a first-class fare each way. There has not been nor is there now any second-class car provided nor has there been nor is there now any second-class tickets issued as required by the said contract; that the freight rates upon the said railway are exorbitant and renders business in the said town almost impossible, and recently the minimum freight rate has been increased to 35 cents per hundred pounds; that this town is not alone in complaining of the foregoing grievances, the people of the county outside of this town having any business with the said company are just as emphatic in their disapproval in relation to the said grievances; that no station or platform is provided by the said company at the southern terminus of the said line where it makes connection with the Intercolonial Railway and in consequence passengers are subjected to the inconvenience and hardships attending cold weather, and rain and snow storms, as well as the alighting from, and entrance into, the said company's cars and those of the Intercolonial Railway; wherefore your petitioners pray that your honorable body adopt such means at once as are necessary to compel the said company to properly comply with the provisions of their said contract and to redress the grievances herein set forth, as well as others that, on investigation, can be ascertained; and your petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray, etc."

Inverness, C.B., March, 1908.

Privileges for Coasting Schooners.

T. G. Fielding, of Alberton, spoke on the question of equal rights for their sailing schooners with steamers at coasting piers or stations, and Charlottetown, P.E.I. It was moved and seconded that the resolution of last year on this question should be reaffirmed. The resolution is as follows:

"That this convention of the Maritime Board of Trade, believing that the time has fully arrived when our coasting schooners should have equal rights with steamers at coasting piers, while seeking cargoes of coal, and each should be loaded in their proper turn, as the present discrimination against sailing vessels in favor of steamers has largely increased the price of coal to the consumers and driven our merchant marine from the trade; therefore, resolved, that the Federal Government be requested to pass such legislation as would remedy grievance and place our coasting schooners on the same footing as steamers; and, further resolved, that foreign shipping and sailors be excluded from coasting in our coastwise waters, and placed on the same footing as United States bottoms that are not allowed to carry a passenger or a pound of freight in Canadian coastwise trade." Carried.

Mr. Fielding especially mentioned in this connection that the Dominion Coal Co. had not been at fault.

J. L. Stewart spoke as a newspaperman in Chatham, N.B., and said that there was a grievance from this standpoint.

Excessive Express Rates.

The matter of excessive express rates was taken up by the Kentville Board of Trade, on a motion by Mr. Innis, seconded by H. M. De Wolfe, as follows: "That this Board considers the express charges on all lines of railways in Canada to be excessive, that the same should be reduced to a fair basis, and that the Federal Government be asked to have the Railway Commission investigate and remedy this wrong." Carried unanimously.

Extending the C. P. R.

G. E. Faulkner, of Halifax, then proposed the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, that the general interests of the transportation business of the Dominion, and especially of the Province of Nova Scotia, demand that the advantages of the Canadian Pacific Railway system be extended to Nova Scotia, and the Maritime Board of Trade requests the Department of Railways and Canals of Canada to negotiate an agreement between the Intercolonial Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, whereby the latter shall be granted running and haulage rights, on fair and equitable terms, over the rails of the Intercolonial Railway from the city of St. John, N.B., to one or more terminals of the I.C.R. in Nova Scotia. Further resolved, that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Prime Minister of Canada, the Minister of Railways and Canals, and the Ministers representing the Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick in the Dominion Government."

Mr. Faulkner made an able speech in defense of his resolution. It was seconded by Mr. Mitchell, vice-president of the Halifax Board.

W. F. Sumner, of Moncton, was on his feet at once to defend his town, and said the resolution should read G.T.P., not C.P.R. He thought the C.P.R. had about all they should get. He believed it was the thin edge of the wedge for the C.P.R. to get hold of the I.C.R. Praising Nova Scotia's resources and beauty, he said the C.P.R. should build a line of railway if they wanted, but they should not be given the I.C.R. (Applause.)

Mr. Innes, of Kentville, defended Mr. Faulkner's resolution by citing Scottish railways which used one another's lines. The C.P.R., he thought, should be given full running rights, and they should pay handsomely for it. It could be made a great asset to the I.C.R. (Applause.)

Senator Ross questioned whether the C.P.R. were thinking so much of public good as they were of selfish interests. If good terms were made the question would be, could the C.P.R. be held to them? He saw danger ahead, as the C.P.R. was the enemy of the Dominion Government.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson said he could see much importance in the resolution. It meant either the survival of the I.C.R. or its demise. He disputed the advisability of the resolution. It was too strong a privilege to give to any road. There was no parallel in the world. The I.C.R. did not pay now, how much less would it pay if the C.P.R. got their running rights? The C.P.R. had made offers of $130,000 for such rights, which he sarcastically called a "princely sum." In two years the I.C.R. would practically cease to be, except as a local accommodation railway. He pointed out dire results to the men of the I.C.R. and to the whole equipment. He hoped the Board would not go on record as wishing to disembowel the I.C.R.

"Not at all," cried voices.

Mr. Emmerson said it was all very well to say "not at all," but he knew what the C.P.R. would do. They would promptly get a monopoly of all the best trade in the East and kill the I.C.R. He declared the business of Halifax, St. John and Sydney would all suffer.

Mr. Emmerson was stopped by the time-bell in the midst of a great peroration against the resolution. (Loud applause).

H. Logan, M.P., tried to point out that Mr. Emmerson's bogey was largely imaginary. He would oppose any resolution which meant what Mr. Emmerson had outlined, but no Government would do any such thing. "Thou shalt not touch the I.C.R." seemed to be the slogan, but if the resolution meant improvement of business for the whole Dominion, then vote for it. The C.P.R., he knew, were after all they could get, but what they wanted and what they would get were different things. He would encourage the C.P.R. to build magnificent hotels in Halifax and Sydney, and other places. Mr. Sumner thought the G.T.P. should be given the running rights. Why, that road would take away all the trade of the I.C.R. just the same as the C.P.R. He was opposed to anything that would hurt the I.C.R., but the idea involved in the resolution would put new blood into Nova Scotia and would be the making of the Provinces.

Mr. Sumner said the Great Northern were after the I.C.R., and he moved that the G.T.P., the Great Northern and the C.P.R. should all be given running rights. It ought to be made open to them all. He felt that the Board would rue the day that they passed such a resolution.

Mr. Stevens, of Halifax, defended the resolution, because, he said, the speakers had misunderstood the whole question. The whole bogey was absurd.

Senator Ross said that when the C.P.R. did have running rights over the I.C.R. it nearly ruined the road, and it would happen again.

Mr. Edgerton, of Moncton, suggested that a committee should get together and make a new resolution.

Mr. Faulkner thought all the misunderstanding was absurd.

D. A. Morrison, of Amherst, thought there was no need for alarm. He was sure the Government would look after the best interests of the people and the I.C.R. Competition was always good, and he felt the resolution should be supported.

FRIDAY MORNING SESSION.

At nine o'clock Friday morning the board convened and the president spoke of the immense number of subjects and incidentally how members had not turned up on time. He went over several resolutions on the agenda paper and several were cut out owing to absence of delegates.

St. John Board, represented by Mr. Anderson, stated that all their resolutions were wiped out. Mr. Foster, president of the St. John Board, was compelled to return home and so everything was left over.

Further Debate re C.P.R.

W. B. Snowball took up the debate on the question of the C.P.R. being given running rights over the I.C.R. He felt that these subjects were contentious and were not advisable to bring up in the Maritime Board of Trade. He felt that the Halifax Board should have withdrawn their resolution as soon as the contention began. St. John had shown wisdom in withdrawing their subject, which also would cause contention.

As a New Brunswick delegate he would like to know what the C.P.R. meant by the running rights. If it meant that the C.P.R. were to pick up freight and passengers with the same aggression as they do elsewhere, the resolution is the most dangerous that could be passed. He thought the C.P.R. had far too much control now. They were a wealthy corporation and could easily build a road down through the Mine Basin and give work to the men down east. He hoped the resolution would be withdrawn.

J. DeWolfe, of Halifax, said a C.P.R. line would be a fine thing for the whole section of country through which the road passed. He cited Quebec as having benefitted by the C.P.R. He would like to ask those who were opposed to the resolution, if they would be so inclined if they were residents of Nova Scotia. He could not see how any resident of Moncton could oppose the C.P.R. when they wanted the G.T.P.

Lieut.-Governor McKinnon, of Prince Edward Island, at this point, happened to arrive and the chairman called him to the platform.

Mr. Lodge, of Moncton, then continued the debate on the resolution, claiming that it was unwise to pass it. The I.C.R.'s chief benefit was from local freight and passengers. He also thought the C.P.R. would not do as much for the people as the I.C.R. Halifax would not get the benefit they expected.

Mr. Campbell, of Halifax, said he would like to dismiss all irrelevant matter and stick to the original resolution. The entrance of the C.P.R. to Nova Scotia was the question. St. John was panicky about the C.P.R. entering Halifax; they were not panicky when it entered St. John. He did not say the I.C.R. was a grinding monopoly, but nevertheless, it was a monopoly and it was the only line entering Halifax from the west. It would make all railways "sit up" to have competition. Surely this spectre about running the I.C.R. was exaggerated. All Halifax wanted was competition.

Mr. Harvey, of St. John, said he was amused at some of the remarks of Mr. Campbell. It was not competition for a business man to hand over a portion of his business to another for the sake of getting competition. These matters of contentious nature should be withdrawn. He recalled how some years ago when he lived in Moncton, the C.P.R. then had some running rights and the whole city of Moncton was suffering from the arrangement.

Mr. Innis, of Kentville, thought it was all a misunderstanding regarding the meaning of running rights. Running rights would be an advantage.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson said this resolution would be taken to mean an approval by this board of the attitude of the C.P.R.

Hon. Mr. Robinson, of Moncton, said he thought the subject was one that required care. He thought Mr. Sumner's amendment should be carried. Unanimity of action was the best and unless that could be reached no resolution should be passed.

M. G. DeWolfe, of Kentville, said he thought a lot of business men were underrating the intelligence of the Government. Halifax should have the C.P.R. He also referred to the wisdom of the late Michael Dwyer, who wanted the C.P.R. years ago in Halifax. The C.P.R. would have made things better everywhere in Nova Scotia. Surely our cabinet ministers were quite equal to dealing with the C.P.R. magnates. St. John people had developed their city and Halifax people should look after her own interests. What helps one section would help another eventually. He hoped the whole question would be carried harmoniously.

James Pender, of St. John, argued that the running rights were dangerous. The late Mr. Blair took running rights from the C.P.R. in 1896 and it was quite evident they would do again what was done in the old days.

Mr. Yuile, of Truro, also spoke on the question, defending it.

Mr. McNeil, of P.E.I., said there was a lot of talk but none of it was worth a button to the Island. He would support the amendment but he wanted the thing carefully thought out so that some benefit to the Island would accrue.

Prof. Andrews said he was not in sympathy with abolishing contentious subjects. It was better for the board to handle large questions. They were not legislating so they need not be afraid.

M. G. De WOLFE,

Of Kentville, N.S., the Board's Auditor and One of Its Most Active Members.

There was nothing alarming in the resolution and the delegates should combine to put up a unanimous vote and not allow any sectional desires to militate against the larger benefits available to the whole Province of Nova Scotia. (Applause.)

Mr. Purdy, of St. John, thought the resolution should be made more explicit.

L. H. Logan, M.P., took some care to say that he was a friend of the I.C.R. and had always been. But St. John people were big men, prepared to give and take. This resolution was misunderstood. Consider the resolution alone, he said. It cannot hurt anyone. Look it over. He read it over clause by clause, and was heard with marked attention. He pointed out how careful it was and quoted its lines "Fair and Equitable" terms and this he accentuated.

"Rob the whole thing," said Mr. Snowball.

Mr. Logan, continuing, said that Mr. Snowball favored the G.T.P. a few years ago but he was afraid of the C.P.R. It was unfair to the C.P.R. They would benefit the provinces and deserved at least this resolution.

Mr. Sumner, of Moncton, said he was anxious to see the resolution guarded.

J. A. Johnson, of Halifax, spoke in favor of giving the C.P.R. more rights. He said Nova Scotia had never received any rights and they needed attention.

Mr. Harvey, of St. John, pointed out that even if the resolution were passed it would be carried by a Halifax vote and would not represent the will of the Maritime Board of Trade. He would favor a resolution asking the C.P.R. to build a new line just as had been done to St. John.

G. E. Faulkner, as mover of the original motion, spoke in defence of his resolution, and condemned any small policy. He pointed out where the I.C.R. would have been if the C.P.R. had built their own lines. If they are now afraid of a small privilege what would it have been then? The C.P.R. had put life into every place it ever touched and would be a great factor in helping all the cities of Nova Scotia. No other factor had done more for Canada, than the C.P.R.

The Resolution Carries.

The amendment of Mr. Sumner was then put and lost by an overwhelming vote.

Hon. Mr. Robinson, of Moncton, then moved an amendment by inserting in the main resolution the clause that running rights should not include station to station privileges between St. John and terminal points.

Mr. Faulkner preferred the original resolution.

The new amendment was then put and lost by a vote of 24 for it and the whole remaining body against it.

The resolution was put and carried by a vote of 52 for it and 24 against it. (Great applause.)

Mr. Snowball moved that the names of the delegates who voted against it and for it should be recorded by name and board.

Dr. Andrews suggested that the respective boards should send the names of the delegates to the Maritime secretary.

Drinking and Business Life.

Dr. Andrews then proceeded to take up an important resolution regarding the relationship of drinking to employment of labor, as follows:

"Moved, that we deem the subject of the effect of the traffic in intoxicating liquor on the commercial life to be one into which the business men should make enquiry and we, therefore, recommend the local Boards of Trade to make this a matter of local investigation and discussion during the year, and that a committee be appointed to collect reports from the local boards and make a report to the next meeting of the Maritime Board and draft appropriate recommendations."

Mr. Black, of Sackville, supported the resolution, and said that the use of liquor had been a factor in the fall of many a good workman, and he deprecated the use of liquor.

Senator Ross said temperance reform was a big question and the work of reform was going on. He praised the temperance character of the members of Parliament all over Canada. He urged the addition of tobacco to the resolution. He attributed his long life and his activity at 83 to the abstention from tobacco.

Dr. Andrews' resolution was carried unanimously.

To Protect Historic Lands.

R. W. Starr, of Wolfville, moved a resolution that the Federal Government be urged to acquire the important historic lands (now private) of this province, for the purpose of protecting and preserving them. Seconded by Hon. G. E. Hughes, and carried unanimously.

The following resolution was also brought in :

"Moved by Frank A. MacEachern, seconded by G. E. Faulkner, that whereas there is a considerable and growing traffic in lumber, coal, merchandise, farm and dairy produce between points in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia proper with Inverness county, and more particularly the large and growing town of Inverness in the Island of Cape Breton ; and whereas nature has not been lavish in her gifts in the matter of harbor accommodation on the west coast of Cape Breton ; and whereas the matter of improving and extending the harbor accommodation at Inverness aforesaid has already been given consideration by the Federal Government, and the said Government is now expropriating land and land covered with water at Inverness aforesaid with a view of improving the said harbor ; resolved that in the opinion of this board the expenditure upon the improvement and extending the said harbor by the Federal Government, in view of the importance of the work, should be of so generous a character as to warrant the completing of this work at an early date ; further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Federal Government and the Minister of Public Works."

A PLEASANT EXCURSION.

During Friday afternoon the delegates and their ladies and friends, as well as a large gathering of Halifax people, were guests of the Halifax Board of Trade on a delightful excursion around the harbor, and a short trip out to sea. The handsome Government steamer Aberdeen was placed by the Government at the disposal of the board, and over 300 were present. No more harmonious and well-managed function was ever enjoyed by the board. The weather was ideal, and after a short tour up the basin and along the harbor to Macnab's Island, then away out to sea, the boat returned just in time for dinner. Refreshments were served freely on board, and music was supplied by the Royal Canadian military band, under Bandmaster Ryan. A pleasing vocal quartette rendered selections, and merriment ruled.

Lieut.-Gov. Fraser and Mayor Crosby, of Halifax, were among the guests. President Bell, of the Maritime Board, and President Faulkner, of the Halifax Board, were warmly congratulated, and cheers were given for them as the boat neared the docks. Secretary Saunders, of the Halifax Board, deserves great credit for his excellent management of the varied city entertainments, to which every delegate was given special invitations and privileges.

During the week the ladies of the party, that is, wives and daughters and friends of the delegates of the board, were given a delightful drive about the city. Every night some special entertainment was available and Halifax again excelled her great name for cordial hospitality.

FRIDAY EVENING SESSION.

Fresh from their trip around the harbor, the delegates met again at 8 p.m. The President opened proceedings by reading the following letter from D. H. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Melbourne, Australia.

"The Secretary the Maritime Board of Trade:

"Dear Sir,—Before the conclusion of your convention, I should deem it a very great favor if you would prominently bring under the notice of the chairman and members, the desirability of the Maritime Provinces being represented at the Congress of Boards of Trade—or Chambers of Commerce—of the Empire, which meets in Australia in September, 1909.

"At the Congress held in Montreal some five years ago, Australia was well represented and the opportunity for Canadians to reciprocate will be available a year hence.

"I was requested by the Hon. William Knox, President of the United Chambers of Commerce of Australia, to advance the interests of the Australian Congress throughout the Dominion. Since my arrival in Canada, I have received a letter from Mr. Knox, from which I beg to make the following extract:

"'I beg that you will convey to all the Boards of Trade in the Dominion our most cordial greetings from the Chambers of Commerce in the Commonwealth of Australia, and New Zealand, say they are looking forward with great expectation and hope to the Imperial gathering which is to take place next year. We hope to have the great happiness of welcoming a large number of our kindred men of commerce, especially those from Canada.'

"For the information of your convention, I may state that Canadian delegates would do well to leave Vancouver in August, 1909, reaching Brisbane, Queensland, on September 7th. The first meeting of the Congress will be held in Sydney on September 14th, 1909, giving delegates a week in transit from Brisbane to Sydney, time which could be enjoyably passed in visiting various points of interest in Southern Queensland, including the famous Darling Downs, which comprises some of the finest agricultural country in Australia.

"There will be various sessions of the Empire Congress in Sydney and in Melbourne. The Australian Chambers of Commerce are already making active preparations to give Canadian and other visitors an excellent time during their stay in the Commonwealth. Interesting side-trips to beauty spots and points of interest have been planned. Delegates will be franked all over the State railways during their stay in Australia. I understand that New Zealand will extend similar considerations to delegates who may wish to visit that most interesting colony.

"It is anticipated that the cost of the round-the-world trip, proceeding via Vancouver, to Australia, and returning via Suez and England, will not exceed, so far as passage money is concerned, more than $550.

"Yours faithfully,

"D. H. ROSS,

"Canadian Trade Commissioner at Melbourne, Australia."

The President spoke of the pleasure he experienced at attending the conference of the Chambers of Commerce in London, Eng., in 1906. He hoped some of the Maritime men would be able to attend this convention in Australia.

A Canadian Fisheries Board.

Business was then resumed by taking up the question of the appointment of Canadian Atlantic Fisheries Board by Mr. Whitman, of Halifax Board. Dwelling upon the need of improvement of the Atlantic fisheries. he related the various efforts made during the year toward this end. The efforts made by appeal to Parliament had been practically fruitless.

Mr. Wilson, of Halifax, seconded the following resolution proposed by Mr. Whitman, which was carried:

"That the executive of the Maritime Board of Trade take steps to again put before the Government the urgent necessity of carrying out the proposed forward movement in the administration of the fisheries, as covered by the following resolution passed at the last session of the Maritime Board of Trade: 'That this meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade endorses the movement for the appointment of a fisheries board to act under the Department of Marine and Fisheries, for the regulation and control of the Canadian Atlantic fisheries, and that steps be taken to have this important matter acted upon at the next session of the Dominion Parliament.' "

Mr. Wilson spoke of the immense value of the lobster fisheries of the Provinces, amounting to about four millions of dollars. The fisheries were not protected. Canners were canning the miniature and undeveloped lobster. The hatcheries and the fry were poorly managed. The lobster catch was declining and something should be done. He stated that five hatcheries produced 623,000,000 fry during the season after 1906. The catch last year of mature lobsters did not exceed sixty million lobsters. This all went to show that the eggs and fry in large percentage failed to come to maturity. The eggs were put overboard far too long a distance out in the sea. The lobster was put out in the egg far too young. A few years ago Nova Scotia had fine oyster beds. A few more years under present circumstances there would be no oyster beds at all. The Island was not quite so bad. The department knew of this, but it was embarrassed because the Dominion Government made the laws and the local Government granted the leases. There was no protection, so that few leases were sought. There were many means of destruction of the oyster and no care of these luscious bivalves was being taken. He would like to see the members of Parliament more intelligently appealed to on these matters. The pickled fish industry required rigid inspection.

Hon. Geo. G. Hughes spoke on this fishery question. In the P.E.I. Legislature they had passed an Act regarding the lease of fisheries. At the conference of the Premiers, he found that there was a movement on foot to place the whole fishery management in the hands of the Federal Government. They were in correspondence now to find out what value was attached to the fisheries before the Province should give them up to Federal control. The three-mile limit held yet, and on P. E. I. they were not properly equipped with boats to get any of the fishery bounties. He knew the matter was in hand, but was in abeyance. He recommended a resolution which would hasten the settlement of the question one way or the other.

Mr. Birch, of Alberton, approved the resolution. He said he did not think that the farmer of P.E.I. was destroying oysters by digging mussel mud for his farms. It was a mistake to say that he killed the oysters, as on some of the beds of the best quality there were five feet of ice.

M. G. DeWolfe said he was glad this subject had come up, as he wished to read a portion of a letter from a literary friend of his in Ontario, regarding the fishery interests in the Provinces. The letter pointed out that better trade could be developed in the West if the Maritime Provinces people would appreciate their own resources more keenly.

Senator Ross spoke regarding the fishery question. He thought that the letter read by Mr. DeWolfe was written by some Ishmaelite who did not know what he was talking about. There was an erroneous impression abroad that the fisheries were declining. Fish were never so plentiful in Cape Breton as this year. The country was strong on technical schools yet nothing was being done to educate the natives as fishermen. Lobster trapping occupied too much attention. He referred to the dog-fish plague, and pointed out that the best fishing was on the Falls.

The deputation to Ottawa failed to ask him to join them there and he was not in the habit of forcing himself on them. He thought the deputation probably saw some of the understrappers and got no attention. He was much interested in lobsters, having an interest in three different lobster factories. The lobster inspectors were not rigid enough. They were too much in sympathy with the fishermen. He had spent 26 years of the best time of his life amongst fishermen. Most of the package and barrel fish of Cape Breton were all poorly put up. He noticed in Boston that the Norwegian mackerel bought for better prices than Cape Breton fish of equally good quality. Canadian fish were not properly washed nor properly packed in good barrels. He did not wish to be severe on the Dominion Government, as he was supposed to be a supporter. He was glad to see an investigation into the Fishery Department. He was strongly in favor of the resolution. (Applause.)

L. M. McNeil, of O'Leary, P.E.I., also spoke in support of Mr. Birch's remarks and supported the resolution. The fishery question, he said, should be out of the reach of partizanship.

The All Red Route.

L. G. M. Campbell, of Halifax, brought in a resolution endorsing the All-Red Route. He spoke stating that the Opposition at Ottawa had not done all that it could to help the All-Red Route scheme. The route was going to benefit Canada more than any other country in the world. He thought it would stimulate shipbuilding and probably revive it. It was only natural that Canadian steamship companies would object, but that alone did not justify the Government in neglecting this All-Red proposition. At present there were no Canadian steamers fast enough to give good mail service. He thought if the G.T.P. were going into a steamship service they would jump at the proposal of the All-Red Route. He demanded the expenditure of so much money on the G.T.P. If there were a hundred million dollars available for a Hudson Bay route survey a million or two could be given towards the improvement of the mail service.

Geo. Hemsley, of Halifax, of the Pickford & Black Shipping Co., advocated ships of great speed for the All-Red Route and supported the resolution.

Senator Ross said he was not in favor of the Hudson Bay Railway, and he did not believe it would be built. In the matter of fast steamers, Canada should have the very fastest boats afloat. He believed the Dominion Government would give a handsome subsidy.

The following resolution, moved by Mr. Campbell and seconded by Mr. Hemsley, was unanimously carried:

"Whereas, the Government of Canada has placed itself on record as indorsing the policy of improved fast mail passenger and express freight services between British possessions, both on the Atlantic and Pacific, and whereas such services would be of immense material and political advantage to Canada by stimulating trade, encouraging immigration and bringing us into closer touch with other parts of the Empire; therefore, resolved that the Dominion Government be urged to formulate its policy and lay definite proposals before the Imperial and Colonial Governments so that such improved services may be inaugurated with as little delay as possible."

THE NEW OFFICERS.

The Nominating Committee then brought in their report as follows:

"Your committee appointed to nominate officers beg leave to report as follows:

President—Hon. Geo. E. Hughes, Charlottetown.

1st Vice-President—W. B. Snowball, Charlottetown.

2nd Vice-President—F. C. Whitman, Annapolis.

Secretary-Treasurer—C. M. Creed, Halifax.

Corresponding Secretary—L. B. Miller, Charlottetown.

Auditor—M. G. DeWolfe, Kentville.

Mr. Bell welcomed the new President, Hon. Geo. E. Hughes, of Charlottetown, and made a nice reference to the ability of the new officer, owing especially to his parliamentary experience. Mr. Hughes was called upon to take the chair.

The President-Elect Speaks .

Mr. Hughes then delivered a suitable speech and presaged greater things for the Maritime Board of Trade. He said he hoped for Maritime union and would like to see efforts made towards this end. He wanted to say a word about the hospitality of Halifax. He thanked the Board for the honor the Board had done Charlottetown by offering to hold their next convention in that city. He promised a warm welcome and a good time.

J. L. Stewart, of Chatham, thanked the Board on behalf of W. B. Snowball, who had been chosen Vice-President, and who was compelled to go home. Mr. Stewart also moved a vote of thanks to Halifax for hospitality and paid great compliments to the beauty of the city and surroundings.

Some Votes of Thanks.

The following resolution was adopted, seconded by Mr. Birch:

"Resolved, that the thanks of the Maritime Board of Trade are hereby tendered to His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor, to the Board of Trade of Halifax, and to the citizens of the city for the warm hospitality and kindly courtesies that have been extended to us during our stay."

A hearty vote of thanks was given to the Retiring President, to which Mr. Bell replied.

A vote to the press was passed, especially mentioning the MacLean Publishing Co., of Montreal and Toronto. This was moved by M. G. DeWolfe, of Kentville, who also included the clubs of Halifax, who accorded hospitality; to the Nova Scotia Telephone Co., and to the Smith-Bremer Typewriter Agent, who had extended courtesies. This was seconded by Mr. Yuill, of Truro, and was carried. The railway companies who had extended courtesies were included in this vote of thanks, and Charles Creed was also thanked for his valuable work.

Mr. Creed made a neat speech and was warmly applauded.

Favorable Financial Statement.

The financial statement of the Board was then submitted as follows:

To General Expenses	$129.40
Secretary's Salary	150.00
	$279.40
Balance on hand, 1907.	$ 19.12
Subscriptions collected for 1908	318.80—$337.92
Balance on hand	$ 58.52
Subscriptions to collect	$ 57.52

Examined and found correct.

MELVILLE G. DEWOLFE, Auditor.

The committee concluded by the singing of the National Anthem.

Convention Notes.

Charlie Creed is looking younger than ever and was congratulated by many members on his good work.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., next. Supposed to be the finest spot in the East. Reach it through the tunnel if possible. This is the third trip to the Island. Hope Father Burke will be home this time.

The new President, Hon. George E. Hughes, is a great worker and spoke at Halifax of 300 delegates that should be present. He is a good fellow and will make an interesting official.

P.E. Island sent the best timber to the convention in Mr. Birch, of Alberton, who is like the favorite tree of the Island, best quality—white.

Kentville send their usual strong quota of delegates headed by M. G. DeWolfe, without whom the convention would be tame indeed. He is looking younger and better every year. No man is more devoted and no man deserves more individual credit.

The capable Secretary of the Halifax Board, Mr. Saunders, slept all week with his boots on. He is a wonder and the rooms he occupies are, from a point of beauty in furnishings and equipment, unsurpassed anywhere. They are located right in the heart of the city and were visited by hundreds.

Once more the weather smiled. It was generally remarked that while the Government was said to control prosperity, the Maritime Board always brings sunshine. The weather was so good that even the strong delegation from St. John could not introduce a suggestion of fog.

President Bell made an ideal chairman. He had many knotty problems to handle, yet the chair was always sustained.

The influence of the Board is growing every year as more members of the local and Federal Parliaments were present this year than ever before.

Two lieutenant-governors were among the patrons this year, including Fraser of Nova Scotia and McKinnon of P.E. Island. Premiers Hazzard of the Island, and Hazen of New Brunswick, also attended. Senators and prominent members were present in large numbers.

St. John was the first city to entertain the ladies at the convention and Halifax followed suit nobly. Now Charlottetown, be careful.

The laws in P.E. Island are down on automobiles, so don't take your touring car over there. They like oxsomobiles over there.

OPENING IN ST. JOHN'S.

S. L. Sheppard has opened a brokers' and manufacturers' agency business in St. John's, Nfld. Mr. Sheppard has during the past twelve months been connected with the Robert Simpson Co., Ltd., Toronto, principally with the idea of studying Western business methods and gaining a larger commercial training. His present offices are in the Fort Townsend Building, St. John's. He has secured a number of good Canadian agencies.

THE CITY OF HALIFAX

The Convention Town a Centre of Commercial Enterprise—Something of its History and Beauties—An Active Board of Trade—Some of its Prominent Business Houses.

Halifax is blessed with a history that is heroic. Its past is steeped in military tradition and "doings." This still fascinates. Yet coupled with this charm is the solid business character which manifests itself at every hand. The majority of Halifax business men would prefer to keep in subsidence the military importance of the place as for years that had a more or less deterrent effect upon real business. To-day one sees everywhere unmistakable signs of growth and activity. The street railway service is first rate, the facilities for shipping are unsurpassed and the encouragement given to industries is well proven by the number of new factories, including the great Siliker Car Co., recently established. The educational institutions of the city are known for their excellence and variety far and wide. It is the headquarters for the Provincial educational system; it has splendid schools, a manual training school, industrial school for refractory boys, a well-equipped business college, a medical college, two theological colleges, an art school, a ladies college, two conservatories of music, several convents and a university for higher education.

Commercial Facilities.

The winter port facilities of the city have been at last recognized by the big steamship companies and the mails are delivered in the winter at this port. At the Maritime Board of Trade this year again this vital matter of the carrying of the mail was a big issue and more resolutions were adopted. The railway facilities include the I.C.R., the Dominion Atlantic and the Canadian Pacific. All the pamphlets of the various steamship companies and railways include elaborate references to the beauties of the city. Halifax harbor and its ability to shelter the whole navy of Britain is a household word. The public gardens are simply magnificent and are said to be the finest in the world. These cover 17 acres and their beauty is all of the nature kind, including flowers of all descriptions and rare trees and plants coupled with waterways and real swans, etc., in the miniature lakes and rivers. Regimental bands play regularly there and the tourist is fed with entertainment all round.

ONE OF HALIFAX' SPLENDID STORES.

Some History and Description.

Halifax was named after the Earl of Halifax, who founded the city in 1749. During the week of Aug. 18 to 23 the city celebrated the 150th anniversary of the Province of Nova Scotia, receiving representative government. This was celebrated in good old-fashioned style by regattas and sports and the city was handsomely decorated with bunting and electric displays. Business men vied with each other in their efforts to make everybody happy and certainly no visitor to Halifax could fail to appreciate the spirit of cordiality which is extant everywhere. The North West Arm is one of the most delightful spots in the world for water sports or for sea bathing. The Waegwoltic Club have completed a very handsome clubhouse and the hospitality extended would be hard to surpass. Guests at the Halifax Hotel, for instance, were, as soon as they registered, accorded all the privileges of this fine club. An arm of the sea juts inland about three miles north-westerly, until it reaches a point half a mile from Bedford Basin and makes the site of Halifax City a peninsula. Residences are located on either side of this arm, including the handsome home of Hon. David McKeen and many others. The best fishing is within easy reach of the city and sport rules strongly in the life of the city. Most of the business men are wealthy and take life comparatively easy. They are much like the British merchants and conduct sound business for a reasonable profit at the same time interlacing pleasures abundantly with their ideal home lives. Every element of strength is in evidence, such as good behavior, good, well-kept laws, fine churches and citizens of character wholesome and sound. Refinement characteristic of generations of culture may be seen in Halifax and the convention of the Maritime Board functions were marked with this superlatively all through its meetings. Halifax is doing a creditable trade in all the essential lines and her banks rejoice in splendid dividends and her possibilities were never so rosy and encouraging. During the past year when the stringency was felt in the commercial world, it was noticeable that the City of Halifax, in fact, the provinces generally, felt it least and last.

Board of Trade.

No city in Canada has a more active and energetic board of trade than Halifax. For a city of fifty thousand people, the membership is remarkably large. It is 533, all in good standing, at the present time. The board started on its present period of life and greater activity four years ago when the present handsome offices were obtained at the corner of Hollis and Sackville Sts., and it has been increasing its usefulness ever since. There are no more attractive board of trade rooms anywhere in Canada than those in Halifax and the Halifax business men are proud of them and of the fact that the board, itself, is so influential and progressive.

Schwartz Spice Business.

A picture is reproduced in this issue of W. E. Schwartz, son of the founder of the Schwartz spice business in Halifax. The industry was founded away back in 1841 by W. H. Schwartz and soon grew into an important enterprise. The Peerless brand of spices have become known from one end of Canada to the other for their excellent merit and especially, of course, throughout the Maritime Provinces. They have increased steadily each year and manufacture also coffee, cream of tartar and other lines. The present owner is well-known in Halifax for his sterling worth and thorough business judgment. He is identified with all movements of progress for the betterment of the city and is considered a representative merchant.

Moirs, Limited.

No reference to the grocery trade of Halifax, or at least the confectionery end of it, would be complete without mentioning Moirs, Limited. They are leaders in all confectionery either in small penny packets or the more elaborate Christmas or holiday goods. They manufacture biscuits of amazing variety and guarantee the purity of all products. Their plant is one of the best equipped in Canada. Modern machinery is in constant use and the steadily increasing trade now covers the whole of Canada. Grocers who desire quick-selling and attractive novelties for the holidays will do well to wait for Moirs' traveler.

Davis & Fraser, Pork Packers.

Davis & Fraser are representative merchants of Halifax, having for years been engaged in a large and growing pork packing business. The business to-day is progressive in every way and the D and F brands are known all over the Maritime Provinces for their high quality and reasonable price. They have developed a fine business in cooked hams and sell everywhere in the provinces, having fully equipped place of business at Charlottetown, P.E.I. They always invite their New Brunswick customers to order direct from their Charlottetown factory, as freights are lower. This, in itself, is a good stroke of business and pleases the customer. Their hams and bacon are all cured by their own special methods and have won favor wherever tried. Both members of the firm are natives of the province and are young men who possess energy and ability that presage great things for their future.

The Halifax Hotel.

Life, generally speaking, is a sequence. The man who is wise at forty could not have been idle at twenty. So this applies somewhat to hotel life. Take, for instance, a house so well known as the Halifax Hotel, which has been running successfully for nearly half a century. It was always known as a first-class house.

There, then, is a cumulative consequence—a sequence of tradition and success in catering to high-class public needs. Coupled with its tradition and its memories of British embassies and Royalty who have been entertained, the development of modernism has given charm to what they themselves in the house call the oldest and yet the newest. All modern conveniences are in vogue and the comfort and convenience of the Halifax is remarkable. The "tone" of the house has never been lost and every guest knows that there is a life and a character about the house entirely its own. The idea of home likeness dominates and that after all is the charm about a hotel. Every department receives attention and every guest gets something for his money at the Halifax. Management has done wonders for the Halifax, even with all its past record. Every business man knows that a hotel is about as hard a proposition nowadays as can be tackled. (Yet E. L. Macdonald, the manager, has "made good" with the Halifax in every particular. The truth is all in the "know how" and "Mac," as he is familiarly known, seems to make everything count). Personal attention without pretension is what counts. The hotel is the home of leading travelers and a good word for the Halifax is heard at every turn.

Standard Printing Co.

The Standard Printing Co. is one of the oldest publishing houses in the historic county of Pictou. Located in New Glasgow, the most thriving centre of this district it has a fine constituency from which to draw support. Their circulation is the accumulation of nearly half a century and the memories and traditions that surround the paper now called the Standard are interesting and attractive. What is more noticeable now is that only recently the controlling editorial interest in the house was taken up by E. Geoffrey Stairs, son of E. Stairs, head of the Stairs, Son & Morrow house, of Halifax. His family connection with New Glasgow is truly historic, as it was right there at New Glasgow where his uncle, John F. Stairs, fought the early struggles of the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co. Young Stairs has never taken advantage of having been born with a silver spoon. He has slaved, practically speaking, in some of the biggest newspaper offices of Toronto, Montreal and larger American cities, so that he might know all the intricate "ins" and "outs" of big newspaper life. He has shown good sense in coming back to his native haunts where all the prestige of family and wealth and influence will back him in making a big success of the editorial end of the Standard. Since he took charge new life has sprung into its pages and the personality of the man has become identified with most of the larger movements in New Glasgow. A good public speaker, Mr. Stairs has at once stepped into prominence and there is no telling what may be in store for him. With not a single bad habit to his credit and the few years of much less than thirty in his favor, coupled with an indomitable energy, sound training and a good record, one may look for splendid things from the new editor of the Standard.

The I.C.R.'s Halifax Man.

As soon as a paragraph is written in the press about any railway man whose personality is widely known, a large number of small men rise up and say, "How much did it cost you?" etc. This very thought makes a reference to J. B. Lambkin, the assistant general passenger agent of the I.C.R., located at Halifax, almost a risk, because "Jim," as he is known from coast to coast and in many parts of the old world, never had to pay for any friendliness from the press. He earned it, and could always get more than he wanted. He didn't want this, but the road can benefit from a word about one of the best-liked railway men to be found anywhere. The I.C.R. is lucky in having such a man in charge of their fine Hollis street offices. Jim Lambkin has made the place not only headquarters for information about the railway, but the city, and in short, the whole country. He has his staff trained as he was, for years in the finely managed C.P.R., to extend the glad hand of cordiality to everyone. Thousands of travellers from all parts of the world drop in to see their personal friend J. B., and it would be idle to say that Jim's host of personal friends would be an asset were it not that outstanding far and above that is his remarkable power to make friends always for the I.C.R. That would be an asset to any up-to-date railway. Whether it is looking after a private car, arranging tickets (through) as the railway men know it, for a large party, or giving personal supervision to sick travellers, peculiar people or foreigners, no matter where from, J. B. Lambkin is, to use the vernacular, "Johnny on the spot." He is a general favorite in Halifax and possesses that rare quality of good fellowship combined with dignity and standing in the community. He is in the prime of life and has rare possibilities before him.

ST. JOHN AS A COMMERCIAL CENTRE

Excellent Facilities for Shipping, Manufacturing and Distributing—The Winter Port Business Important—Retail Stores Modern in Equipment —Some Prominent Houses.

A city that is fast coming to its own after many vicissitudes is St. John. Energetic business men, in a manufacturing and commercial way in their daily pursuits, have contributed yearly to its advancement and progress. As a winter seaport in Canada it has no equal, and is situated at the mouth of the St. John River, which is navigable for over one hundred miles, having many large tributaries. The beauty of its ever-varying scenery is famous throughout the whole inland water course.

The town in itself is located on an elevated peninsula with the harbor on one side and Courtney Bay on the other.

From a health standpoint, St. John is one of the healthiest cities in Canada and is noted for its natural drainage, sanitary precautions and pure water, which cannot be said for many other cities in the Dominion. As regards climate, it is all that could be desired. Winters are only moderately cold and the summers are usually delightfully cool. United States tourists flock into this city by the thousands from the beginning to the end of an always lengthy summertime.

Manufacturing Facilities.

With reference to facilities for manufacturing, the City of St. John is in possession of land which is admirably suited for business and commercial purposes. Further, St. John is the terminus of two great railways, the Canadian Pacific and Intercolonial, also being the Atlantic winter port of the Dominion, it connects the city directly with Europe and the United States. There are also numerous iron, timber and coal-producing sections in the province, all of which add additional facilities to the advancement of the town in general.

Lumber and lumber products contribute one of St. John's chief industries, the town actually containing twelve sawmills.

Iron and metal work is also to the fore. A large rolling mill, a foundry, and some stove, furnace and heater factories are among the local industries. Two large machine shops and boiler works and an important wire nail concern are also located here.

An Important Tea Centre.

St. John is rapidly becoming an important tea centre in Canada. At the present time a number of houses are devoting all of their time to this business.

Other industries, which have to do with the welfare and advancement of St. John in general are: Manufacturing of cotton goods, the pulp industry, lime quarries, fruit and produce trade, and the fishing industry.

Taking all in all, the wholesale trade of St. John is an important feature of its welfare and progress. Practically nearly all kinds of wholesale businesses are carried on here, among the most important of which are the grocery and general hardware trades.

Up-to-date facilities are particularly noticeable in St. John's retail sections. No other city in Canada of similar population is better furnished with retail conveniences. Full supplies of the choicest lines are always carried by the large grocery concerns, most of which have the necessary experience, enterprise and integrity necessary to carry on a successful business.

Thos. McCready & Son., Limited.

The vinegar and pickle works of Thos. McCready & Son, Ltd., are, without doubt, the most important enterprise of their kind in eastern Canada, and rank second to but two or three similar establishments in the Dominion. Twenty-five years ago, in 1883, the business was founded and has a high reputation for its products. The manufacturing plant is a large one and is equipped with all modern improvements. The principal line manufactured by this firm is vinegar, which is shipped all over the Dominion. They are also manufacturers of mixed pickles, chow-chow, mustard, Worcester sauce and fruit syrups. J. T. McCready is manager and secretary, and he has had what may be designated as a life-long experience in every detail relating to the industry. Prompt shipments from the firm are assured, as the facilities are of the best.

G. E. Barbour Co., Limited.

To-day the City of St. John does not boast of a wholesale business more thoroughly representative of its best business traditions, with a more universal spirit of loyalty among its staff, or with a rosier prospect before it of future success and public confidence than that of G. E. Barbour Co., Ltd. The success of this firm is admittedly attributed to strict business principles, the best of employment, and last but not least the possession of most of the choicest lines to be had in the grocery trade, for which they are the agents in the Maritime Provinces. This firm with such ambitious men at its head may rest assured of success in all that they may undertake to do in the future.

BUILDINGS OF THE NEW BRUNSWICK COLD STORAGE CO.

One of St. John's Leading Commercial Enterprises.

The White Candy Company, Limited.

The White Candy Co., Ltd., was incorporated in 1895, and is the outgrowth of a business established by Thos. White in 1865, and another concern founded by J. R. Woodburn, in 1873. The firm has steadily grown and expanded during recent years and is to-day one of the most important exclusive manufacturers of candy in the eastern section of Canada. The equipment of the factory with up-to-date machinery gives employment to from fifty to seventy-five hands. This firm manufacture all grades of candy and confectionery from the cheap penny stick goods to the highest and best grades of chocolates and caramels. Some of the specialties manufactured by this company are: Delamar chocolates, Snowflake chocolates and White's caramels, all of which are considered fully the equal of any made in the Dominion of Canada. At the World's Fair held in Paris in 1900 they were awarded a medal. Guaranteed pureness of all products made according to the latest scientific methods are attributed to the experience of the skilled management of the managing director, Thos. F. White, who has had an experience with the house extending over thirty-five years.

The Phillips & White Co., Limited.

The Phillips & White Co., Ltd., while as yet a new enterprise, have added materially to the manufacturing and distributing facilities of the city. The firm occupy large and commodious quarters at 13½ Dock Street. The dimensions of the building are 30x90 feet, and the structure contains six floors. The office and warerooms are located on the ground floor and the upper part of the building is given over to the factory and storage purposes. This company manufacture a general line of confectionery and candies, and they specialize in the manufacture of fine chocolates, buttercups peach blossoms and creams. At present this firm employ anywhere from 25 to 40 hands. Their trade is principally throughout the Maritime Provinces. This business, though a new enterprise, has the advantage of having in its proprietorship the services of two gentlemen of thorough experience of the business. Mr. Phillips had considerable experience before the above firm was organized, and Mr. White is an experienced and practical candymaker. From the above it may be realized that this house is contributing materially to the reputation of the provinces, as a source of supply, and is therefore entitled to due recognition.

The Crosby Molasses Co.

Special attention is due to the business conducted here under the designation of the Crosby Molasses Co., Ltd., in reference to the wholesale and importing trade of the city. This business was first founded by L. G. Crosby at Yarmouth, N.S., some twenty-five years ago, and during the past twelve years the business has been located in St. John. About four years ago incorporation transpired, the present executive officials being, L. G. Crosby, president, and Fred S. Crosby, secretary-treasurer. Direct importers of molasses and West Indian sugars, the company is the only one here that makes a distinctive specialty of these lines. The Crosby Molasses Co., Ltd., is one of the largest molasses and sugar importing concerns in the Dominion, shipping to all parts of Canada.

Chas. H. McDonald.

As an example of what may be accomplished by enterprising methods and by maintaining the highest standard of excellence in the products offered to the public, we offer here a few facts relative to Chas. H. McDonald, tea importer, who has been in business for the past two years. Forming the opinion that an enterprise such as he now conducts could be successfully carried on here, he commenced operations upon correct principles, and results have developed the soundness of his ideas. Mr. McDonald's "Red Clover" brand of teas has already gotten a strong hold on the market, and he is to be congratulated on the up-to-date way in which he is pushing business. Mr. McDonald is specializing in bulk teas, and if direct importation, careful buying, and exact blending mean anything in the make-up of teas, his blends should always be general favorites with the trade. Mr. McDonald is well known and universally liked by merchants throughout this locality, and the firm, up to the present, has enjoyed the best of reputation for fair dealing and looking after the best interests of customers in every legitimate available manner.

THE GROCER'S REPRESENTATIVE.

Kind Words Regarding a Member of the MacLean Co. at the Convention.

The following paragraph from a recent issue of the New Glasgow (N.S.) Standard, gives an idea of how one of the MacLean Company's representatives at the Maritime Board of Trade Convention is regarded in the Eastern Provinces:

"Charles D. Cliffe, of Montreal, of the MacLean Publishing Company, publishers of Hardware and Metal and the Canadian Grocer, as well as a number of other trade journals, was a welcome visitor to the Standard's office. His mission in the Maritime Provinces is to get information for special articles in the above journals in connection with the meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade in Halifax next week. Mr. Cliffe will also report the meetings for these papers.

"Mr. Cliffe is the Montreal Editor of Printer and Publisher, perhaps the most interesting of all the MacLean Company's papers to the newspaper men of Canada. He looks after all matters about the press of the Maritime Provinces, and we respectfully request Colonel MacLean to make it possible for Mr. Cliffe to be present at the meetings of the Nova Scotia Press Association at Sydney, Sept. 16. He stayed at the Vendome.

"The commercial interests of the Lower Provinces owe a great deal to the MacLean Publishing Company for their willingness to devote very considerable attention to the trade questions of this section of Canada; and also to a man of Mr. Cliffe's caliber, who can adequately size up conditions here and properly present their claims in a manner commensurate with their worth."

TRADE NEWS OF NOVA SCOTIA

Tomato Combine a Failure Since Supplies Could Be Secured at Several Points—Fishing Business Quiet—Fall Mackerel Expected Shortly.

Halifax, August 22.—The country side is now looking the most promising for years. The hay outside of the marshes is about gathered, and it is up to the average in both quantity and quality, the fine weather having permitted its being cured without too much exposure to the wet. Grain is ripening fast, and oats will be fit to cut in some places in about a fortnight. Turnips and mangles offer a prospect better than the average. As to apples, the season is not far enough advanced to speak positively; but the quality in regard to freedom from spots seems to be better than in most places. The Gravenstein promises a larger crop in most localities than last year. Fruit is now coming on the market in large quantities, and, as a result, business is good. Apples and plums are on the market much earlier than usual, and prices at present are considered high. The class of red astrachan apples offered for sale is very poor, and they are quoted at $1.50 to $2 per barrel. Plums are 75 cents for a six-quart basket. It is expected that plums will be high this season, as the crop is reported to be below the average. Berries are in abundant supply and the prices are away down.

Notwithstanding the tomato combine, the market is well supplied with tomatoes and the prices are reasonable. Ten-pound baskets can be purchased for fifty cents, and it is predicted that the prices will go still lower. It is stated that some of the jobbers who entered the combine are not meeting with the success that was at first anticipated. They agreed to pay a certain price for tomatoes, and they have lived up to the agreement. As a result, other dealers not in the combine, are able to undersell them, and they are losing trade.

The receipts of butter are fairly good, but some of the stock marketed is of very poor quality. Many complaints are made by the jobbers, who cannot understand why poor butter should be marketed at this season of the year. There was no old butter held over from last season, and it is thought that the country dealers hold this stock back, waiting to sell at good prices, and failing in this they send the butter to Halifax. They hold the butter too long, and it depreciates in value.

Eggs are very firm and the prices unusually high. Fresh laid stock is worth 25 cents. Case Island eggs can be purchased for 21 cents, but the quality cannot be depended upon. The prices are considered too high for the season of the year.

The fish business is very quiet at present. There is not much doing in salt or pickled fish, and the demand for fresh fish is not very heavy. Some good catches of herring are being made, but no mackerel. It is expected that the fall run of mackerel will soon be along. Fresh haddock are reported very scarce on the local market.

During the week the grocery stock of Charles Marsden, Spring Garden Road, was sold at public auction, and good prices were realized. The stock was sold by order of the official assignee.

THE ORIGINAL AND THE IMITATION.

The Genuine Article is in the Bottle on the Right—The Close Imitation May Be Seen in the Other Bottle.

A FRAUDULENT IMITATION.

An Instance of a Despicable Attempt to Sell Poor Goods on a Manufacturer's Reputation.

Sometime ago the firm of Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal, manufacturers of essences and brokers, discovered in a local grocery store, exposed for sale, a product which was evidently meant to be as near a counterfeit of their own flavoring extract, in appearance, as possible, without being an exact reproduction. The fact was patent that the proprietor of the imitation, which was put up by "Harry Jones & Co.," intended to trade on the reputation of Henri Jonas & Co. A grocer in a certain quarter of the city was found to be pushing the imitation quite strenuously, conveying the impression to his customers that they were receiving the genuine Jonas product.

When sufficient evidence was collected a judgment was taken against the grocer in question to restrain him from any longer selling the imitation product. When these proceedings became known to "Harry Jones & Co.," "Mr. Jones" left unceremoniously for parts unknown, and has not been heard of since. The steal was a complete one. The capsule, label, shape of bottle, size and color, was almost exactly the same as the bottle of Henri Jonas & Co. The imitation did, however, bear the distinction of being a decidedly cheaper looking article. The reproduction given herewith shows how closely the imitation resembles the real article.

A. T. Hodge, traveler for Chase & Sanborn, Montreal, has returned from his holidays.

Geo. Hadrill, secretary Montreal Board of Trade, is back at his desk after a few weeks spent in the Laurentians.

THE MARITIME BOARD AND THE C. P. R.

The annual convention of the Maritime Board of Trade, one of the most important meetings of the year in regard to business in the Maritime Provinces, met at Halifax on August 19, 20 and 21, and is reported in detail elsewhere in this issue. The Maritime Board of Trade is composed of representatives of local boards of trade from New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, and as such comprises a body of able and energetic business men eager for the progress of their own town and province and at the same time of the Dominion of Canada, as can well be gathered together. The work done by the board in past years has been of material influence in developing the resources of the Maritime Provinces in many lines, and the greater part of the resolutions passed by the board have received considerable attention in Parliament.

This year the question of transportation received a great deal of attention and discussion was directed principally to the question of giving running rights over the I.C.R. to the C.P.R., the matter being introduced in a resolution favoring the change brought in by the Halifax Board of Trade.

The resolution engendered some little difference in the convention, as was perfectly natural when the circumstances are considered. Halifax's desire for the change embodied in the resolution is perfectly reasonable. The city at present is dependent on the one line, and this line beset by numerous well understood difficulties which greatly hinder its collecting and carrying trade. Another line and particularly the C,P.R., would be of inestimable value to the city and would undoubtedly largely increase its importance as a commercial and shipping centre.

St. John, on the other hand, from which city the opposition to the resolution chiefly came, is already in possession of the short line of the C.P.R. with its consequent advantages and naturally is not anxious to see a change which would tend to carry a vast amount of traffic from St. John to Halifax harbor. If that company had running rights over the Intercolonial, it could send short line trains from St. John via Moncton to Halifax, or, when the Quebec bridge is built, it could use the whole length of the Intercolonial system from Levis to Halifax. In fact, it could turn its cars upon the Intercolonial at the latter's Montreal terminus, and thus use the Government line from beginning to end. Halifax would be willing to have all ways open. But St. John cannot be expected to be very cordial towards a change that would contribute to the building up of a rival seaport and that would enable traffic to be carried past its own door.

The objection raised by the New Brunswick delegates at the convention was that the proposed change would be fatal to the future of the I.C.R. This is certainly a question that deserves deep consideration, but it seems to have been made more of than was deserving at the convention and the real point of issue scarcely came out in the discussion.

The resolution was finally carried by a majority of 28, on a vote of 76, and this may be taken to pretty well represent the concensus of feeling regarding the matter in the three provinces represented.

WHY NOT GROW CRANBERRIES?

According to a despatch from New York, cranberry sauce will be an expensive dish for the coming Thanksgiving dinner, owing to unfavorable reports regarding the cranberry crop in New Jersey and Cape Cod, which is said to be the poorest in twenty years. The big bogs about Burlington, N.J., are said to be almost barren of berries. Late spring frosts and summer hailstorms are blamed by the growers for the dearth of berries, and hundreds of men who in former years had found employment in picking will this season be out of a job. The same state of affairs obtains in Cape Cod, where the drought and fire worms are said to have made havoc with the berry crop.

The Toronto importers of cranberries say these statements bear out the information they received some few days ago, from Chaney, of Des Moines, Ia., and Williamson, of Philadelphia, representing the two largest cranberry associations in the United States. If the crop turns out as estimated, record-breaking prices for the fruit will rule this year.

Undoubtedly, there has been manipulation in the past, and one Toronto dealer, at least, says some years ago it was the custom for the growers to send out these gloomy reports, thus starting the market at a high price. Afterwards the market was so flooded with berries that it went flat and the early buyers went broke. Year after year this manipulation of the market went on until even now The Fruitman's Guide, one of the best informed fruit journals in America, says of these doleful reports from Cape Cod that the growers are "already starting to 'kill' the cranberry crop."

Most of the Toronto dealers, however, state that though this custom of sending out gloomy reports for sinister purposes may have prevailed in the past, it does not hold good to-day. Ninety per cent. of the crop is said to be in the hands of one or other of the two associations represented by Chaney and Williamson, who have a chain of agents practically covering the whole of America. Up to the present both these concerns were represented in Toronto by a local agent, but this year the associations will deal direct with the large importers. When supplies are free the price of the berries is about $6.50 to $7 a barrel, good business is done, and a fair profit is made all round, but if the crop this year is a total or partial failure $12 and $15 may be asked. Nearly every dealer wants a carload with which to begin the season, and if he pays the high price he naturally wants a high price in return from his sales; but if he pays a high price for the berries on the strength of doleful reports, which afterwards turn out to be untrue somebody is bound to be stung.

All this leads to the question why something cannot be done to cultivate the cranberry in Canada. In the northern part of Ontario and Quebec, as well as in other sections of the country, cranberries grow wild among the bogs. These wild berries find ready sale in the localities where picked, but do not bring the high prices of the imported cultivated berry. The quantity put on the market, too, is very much short of the demand. Surely a berry which grows wild without any care could be improved by careful cultivation. Toronto dealers concur in this and say that a ready market would welcome the advent of the Canadian cultivated cranberry, which should also command a fair price.

REMOVING TO LARGER PREMISES

Something About the Growth of Holbrook's Canadian Business.

The removal of Holbrooks Limited, Toronto, from their old premises at 25 Front Street East, to new ones at 40 Scott Street, this week, was the occasion for a little chat with H. Gilbert Nobbs, the Canadian manager.

Mr. Nobbs arrived in Canada a little over three years ago. A few months later Holbrooks Limited decided to open a branch office in Toronto in order to be able to look after the development of their Canadian business, and believing that to do business successfully it is necessary to learn to "do in Rome as the Romans do." "At this time," said Mr, Nobbs, "the trade was being developed by myself with the aid of one assistant, and I have very pleasant recollections of the very many friends made in those days. I was very much charmed by the manner in which the trade received me and I have a very high opinion of the grocers of Canada, both as business men and as gentlemen, and many of my best personal friends to-day are those who though strangers extended the hand of good fellowship on my first arrival. A year after opening our branch we found it necessary to remove to premises where we had larger office and warehouse facilities at 25 Front St. E."

"At no time during our Canadian history," continued Mr. Nobbs, "has our business gone forward with such rapidity as during the last six months. At Christmas we had four travelers attached to our Canadian staff; to-day we have twelve, and are again compelled to seek larger premises. In our new building we have storage facilities for upwards of 25 carloads, with offices and shipping departments on the ground floor. We are now making large developments in the United States. The management of this has been intrusted to my care and we are already making very rapid strides there."

NEW GROCERY TRAVELERS.

A. S. Williamson, late manager of the grocery department of the Trites-Wood Co., one of the stores recently burned in Fernie, B.C., has been added to the western traveling staff of the Eby-Blain Co., Toronto, and will represent them in the territory from Winnipeg to the coast. Mr. Williamson has a large acquaintance with the trade in the west and with his wide experience as a manager should do remarkably well.

The Eby-Blain Co. have also added to their Ontario staff R. Pinchon, who will cover the territory from North Bay to Kenora, and also the Soo branch.

AN OLD HALIFAX HOUSE.

The following item was intended to have been connected with the matter regarding the Maritime Board of Trade convention elsewhere in this issue in the section descriptive of Halifax business firms. Unfortunately it was misplaced and came to hand too late to be inserted with the other matter:

The firm of Levi Hart & Son, Ltd., is one of the oldest and best established business concerns in Halifax. The firm was originally founded by the late Levi Hart as far back as 1848 and has carried on an export fish business for years.

About 1902, Mr. Flowers, manager for the old firm of Cunningham & Curren, became associated with them, and since then they have added to their fish business an extensive connection in flour, feed, grain, etc. Their corn meal mill on the Furness Pier, having the largest output in the province, has recently been remodelled, their new capacity being 600 barrels per day. The product of this mill is shipped throughout Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Their fish business extends throughout the Mediterranean, West Indies and American ports.

The business is at present managed by H. Flowers, assisted by F. R. Hart, secretary, the latter being grandson of the original founder of the business.

WERE RAISINS, NOT CURRANTS.

In the department on Grocery Advertising in last week's issue of The Grocer, as a good example of a retail grocer's ad., an advertisement of J. A. McCrea & Son, Guelph, was reproduced. In this an unfortunate error was made in quoting currants at 4 lbs. for 25c. The mistake was made originally by a local printer and the ad. was simply reproduced in these pages. The line in question should have read, "4 lbs. of raisins for 25c." Had the copy been criticized in regard to prices, etc., the error would certainly have been noticed, for we are well aware that McCrea & Son are not in the habit of cutting prices in a manner such as this would indicate. The ad. was used, however, as a model of good display and this other point was overlooked.

INCREASING WAREHOUSE VALUES

The concern that is paying rent for more than one flat can more than double the value of the upper flats to them by putting in an elevator. It will save time, expense and labor, it will increase floor space and facilitate the handling of goods.

Such an elevator is not expensive, either. The Otis Fensom Elevator Co., Limited, Toronto, sell a first-class elevator at as low as $100 on the cars at Hamilton. It has a good solid car, size 6x5 feet, will carry a load of 1,500 lbs., and will give good service for years and years.

It is an easily-operated hand-power elevator than can be installed by anyone who will follow the plans and directions which the manufacturers give. Write in to the company for full information and state your requirements.—Advt.

PERSONAL NOTES.

John Findlay, shipper for Davidson-Hay, Toronto, is enjoying a few weeks' holidays in Muskoka.

Roy Telford, of the office staff of T. Kinnear & Co., Toronto, is holidaying at Port Elgin and Southampton.

Ernie McMurtry, of Groceries, Limited, Toronto, is away on a couple of weeks' holidays at Minnett, Lake Rousseau. Harold Beatty, of the same firm, has just returned from a holiday trip to Penetang.

C. W. Powis, of Andersen & Powis, Toronto, was welcomed on the street by his friends again this week, after an absence of about nine weeks on account of a long-continued illness. Mr. Powis looks a great deal better and says he feels tip-top.

Col. John I. Davidson, of Davidson-Hay, Toronto, has as a guest this week his brother, Prof. W. L. Davidson, who is one of the professorial staff of Aberdeen University. Col. Davidson and his brother spent a few days during the week enjoying the breezes at the Royal Muskoka.

R. Kennedy, who was for a number of years with Messrs. Forbes Bros., of Montreal, and later represented "Tamilkande" tea in the vicinity of Arnprior, Smith's Falls and other points on the C.P.R., has joined the traveling staff of James Turner & Co., Limited, Hamilton, and expects to be calling on his many friends in the near future.

J. Ellis, of the Hudson's Bay Co., Winnipeg, and Mrs. Ellis, are in Toronto for several days on a business and pleasure trip and made a pleasant call during the week at E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd. Mr. Ellis has stuck pretty closely to business in the west, as is evidenced by the fact that this is his first trip east in 33 years.

T. C. Pott, formerly of "Red Rose" tea has joined the traveling staff of James Turner & Co., Hamilton, and will represent them in the counties of Bruce, Grey, Huron, Oxford, Waterloo and Wellington. Mr. Pott, while having had experience in package teas on the road, is not new to the grocery business, having been connected with the retail business practically altogether during his business career.

POINTERS—

Fish—Advanced.
Valencia Raisins—Declined.
Butter—Advanced.
Cheese—Steady.
Fruits—Declined.

Montreal, August 27, 1908.

The proverbial dullness of August has prevailed to some extent in the local markets. Wherever demand has been good it has consisted of a good volume made up of small orders. Valencia raisins have come down a little, but this does not seem to entice buyers much yet. Butter and cheese are being much enquired after by English importers, in spite of the prevailing high prices. Sugar is in great demand, as the preserving season is at its height. Fruits and vegetables have declined, which is to be expected at this time of the year. Other lines have preserved a pretty even way since last week.

SUGAR—Some of the large dealers a week ago were complaining of a decidedly unhealthy condition of the market for this time of the year, when, owing to canning and preserving operations, there is usually a good demand. This condition has now passed and a first-class demand is reported on all sides. The raw market is quieter, too. This market has been in a remarkably unsettled state, although its influence has not reached the refined market except in but one or two instances.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—A local house states that the sale of molasses is on the increase as people are becoming more and more educated to its value as a food. It has many and an increasing number of uses in the kitchen. The best quality is in the greatest demand. There has been a fair demand for syrups in cases during the week. Prices for both molasses and syrups have not changed since our last quotations.

TEA—The Japan market remains the same as last week, nothing having developed in the meantime. Demand is good and the prospects are that it will remain so. Stocks held by dealers are low in all lines of tea, and buying in Ceylons, Indians and Chinas has been pretty well limited to small lot orders. Prices have remained at the same level.

DRIED FRUITS—U. S. Consul Chas. S. Winans reports that: "Advices from Spain indicate a good raisin crop in the Valencia district. It is expected that the crop will total 30,000 tons, which is some 4,000 tons above the average of recent years. Not only is the yield going to be large, but the quality will be excellent. The flowering of the vines took place under excellent weather conditions and although the critical period for Muscatel grapes is not yet passed, no indication of heat waves, which are so injurious to the fruit at this season, have been reported up to the present. Stocks in the hands of farmers and speculators in Spain are now totally cleared, while latest advices from London, where the most important stocks of old raisins are always held, report 6,700 hundredweights Denias, and 180 hundredweights Malagas on hand, against 3,380 of the former, and 100 of the latter, at the same period last year. Shipping rates, it is thought, will remain as usual, namely, 25 shillings a ton for principal U. S. Atlantic ports, both by direct steamers and through Liverpool in transhipment."

Locally buyers have decided to load up as soon as possible with their requirements for prunes, as there does not seem to be much chance of the price climbing down, owing to the extraordinary shortage in the crop. Valencias, which have been very high have declined ½c, owing to the way buyers have been frightened out of the market by sky-high prices. A fair business has been done in spot currants. Jobbers throughout the country have small stocks, and so far are buying only for immediate wants, The new crop of dates is not expected to arrive here much before November 1, therefore the demand for those on the spot has been very fair. New figs are being quoted for the first half of September shipment. Prices rule the same as at last quotations.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Trade passing in rice is practically nil. Tapioca is very slow also. This condition is partly due to the fact that native fruits are being used largely for dessert in households, where rice often serves the purpose. Prices are unchanged.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Canned fruits are very quiet, there being hardly any demand at all. Vegetables are receiving only slight attention. The pack of Sockeye and Cohoe is already exhausted, but orders are being booked for Pink fish. Other lines of fish are quiet. Meats are very much neglected, and altogether the market is not a very interesting one just at present.

TORONTO.—Business is rather quieter this week and not a great deal of interest is manifest. The keen competition among the various canning companies continues an interesting feature of the situation, though nothing particularly new has developed recently.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Declined 10 cents.

Teas—Firmer.

Dried Fruits—New crop goods on the way.

Collections—Fair.

Toronto, Aug. 20.

Business continues on about the same basis as reported last week with a quiet tone in evidence. The approaching exhibition has had some small effect on local orders but from outside points orders are about as usual.

The chief feature of the wholesale markets during the week was the decline in refined sugars on Wednesday and the steady firming up on Ceylon teas.

Collections are very fair with a good deal of care still being exercised by wholesalers as to their accounts.

SUGAR—A decline of 10 cents on Wednesday was not at all unexpected in view of the gradually weakening raw markets during the past two or three weeks. Cables advising a decline by the St. Lawrence interests were received Wednesday afternoon and the Redpath followed a few hours later.

The decline bears some evidence of permanency though with the heavy demand for refined which comes in September and early October, there seems some possibility of a return to a higher basis, with the raw markets, both in America and Europe on the present sagging basis prospects of a steady refined market at present prices seem remarkably good.

Regarding the general situation in raws, Willett & Gray say:

"The trend of values continues to be downward. Early in the week sales were reported of Cubas about three weeks off at 2.61c c. & f., basis 95 degrees test, equal to 4c to 4.03c, landed for 96 degrees test, and no price better than this has since been obtainable. Supplies being sufficient for the immediate future, refiners would prefer that holders withdraw their offerings until the sugars are required, and this is what many owners are doing rather than accept 4c for 96 degrees test, believing that a partial recovery may come before long, as a result of a renewal of demand from some refiners not as well protected as others, or an increased distribution of refined. There are only comparatively small balances of Cuba and Porto Rico crops unsold, but about 50,000 tons of Javas are afloat which have not yet been placed and will seek a market in the United States or the United Kingdom. Receipts at the Atlantic ports (United States) for the week were 31,600 tons, against 37,000 tons required for meltings, and the exports from Cuba were but 2,000 tons. Only one Cuban Central is now grinding and is adding but little to the season's production. According to our cable reports there are still favorable weather conditions for the crops in Cuba and Europe."

SUGAR DOWN TEN CENTS.

On Wednesday afternoon Canadian refiners cabled advices of a decline of 10 cents on refined sugars. The weakening markets abroad and the dull business in some parts of Canada is understood to furnish the reason.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Business is dull at this 'tween season time with prices steady.

TEA—A stronger position in both common and high grade Ceylons has taken place recently according to advices received this week from Columbo. Little is heard of Indians. Local business continues quiet. Thompson Bros., weekly circular, dated London, Aug. 13, summarizing the general situation, says:

"After a fortnight's cessation of active business and no public sales, it would seem an opportune moment to look round and examine the general position of the trade. The shipments from India and Ceylon since 1st May amount to some 43,000,000 lbs., as against 44,823,000 lbs. in 1907, and judging from the cables from the various estates in India there seems reason to look for only a moderate outturn all round, not much, if at all, exceeding that of last season. From Ceylon, estimates are also based on last year's crop, so that unless there is abnormal leaf-producing weather the supply from both sources should be easily handled. The deliveries for home consumption for the last three months have amounted to 67 969,000 lbs., against 70,303,000 lbs. in 1907, which, considering the adverse conditions of the various trades throughout the country, may be looked on as fairly satisfactory. Exports during the same period have been 7,456,000 lbs., against 9,660,000 lbs., not so good as might be wished, but it is expected by some shippers that when the reduction of the duty takes place next month in Russia, coupled with the lower values of common tea, an improved demand may be looked for here both from the continent and America, which should materially increase the volume of business in this direction and that the London market will benefit accordingly."

COFFEE—Local business continues good, with no change in prices.

SPICES—The approach of the pickling season is having some effect on business which is slightly more active. Prices are steady.

DRIED FRUITS—Markets continue generally firm, with emphasis on prunes and seedless raisins. New crop Valencia raisins and currants are on the way and will be on the market in a couple of weeks. Advices state that raisins will be about the same price as last year.

BEANS—Demand is lighter and prices steady. Reports of this year's crop are very favorable.

TOBACCO—The prices on Tuckett's T. & B. tobaccoes were advanced on August 20th. The increase amounts to 5c per lb. on plug tobacco and 3c per lb. on the cut. No definite reason is assigned for the change, but it is assumed that the recent changes in duties and the excise system, by reason of which other tobaccoes were advanced some months ago, is responsible.

TRADE NOTES.

O. Digby, confectioner, Winnipeg, is succeeded in business by A. F. Smith.

E. Peterson, confectioner, Midale, Sask., is succeeded in business by A. & J. Peterson.

John Musselwhite, tobacconist and confectioner, Chilliwack, B.C., has sold his business to J. Wilson.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, August 27, 1908.)

POINTERS—

Cornmeal—Advanced.

T. and B Tobacco—Advanced.

New Lobsters on market.

New foreign dried fruits arriving.

Eggs—Advancing.

Harvesting operations are in full swing, and while some other branches of trade are experiencing a temporary lull the grocery stores are busy delivering provisions and supplies. While some districts have suffered from early frosts and others from drought during July the general outlook is good, and a crop of considerably more than 100,000,000 bushels of wheat is assured now. The business outlook is, therefore, particularly bright.

CANNED GOODS—The canned goods situation presents many interesting features which are engaging the attention of the trade at the present time. Competition is keen in corn, tomatoes and peas, and, as mentioned in this column before, a special line is being put on the market by the Canadian Canners, to meet competition in these vegetables. We quote:

BUTTER—Supplies of dairy butter are fairly liberal. Produce houses are paying 17c to 17½c per lb., f.o.b., Winnipeg.

EGGS—There is a brisk demand and supplies are none too liberal. Produce houses are paying 19c to 20c per dozen, f.o.b., Winnipeg, for candled eggs.

WHEN ADVERTISING PAYS BEST.

Very often the dealer is encountered who states that newspaper advertising does not pay, at least in his case. There are thousands of dealers all over the country for whom newspaper advertising, and in fact, all kinds of advertising, has been a poor investment. This seems strange, especially when it is remembered that there is no great retail business in America that has not been advertised, and more liberally than elsewhere, in newspapers, and which does not attribute its greater success to advertising.

The explanation of the seeming paradox is simple. The thousands of dealers who have failed to make advertising pay do not know how to advertise. The big retail dealers, those who are the notable examples of the power of advertising, do know how. This is the secret of the whole difference.

When newspaper advertising is well written, when it says, as well as the best clerk could say, the things that should be said about the goods advertised, and when it is store news, and changed so frequently as to be really news, then newspaper advertising is sure to pay, and always pays.

In these days of modern merchandising, a good many dealers who realize their shortcomings as writers of advertising or anything else of literary nature, employ clerks who possess the ability to write as well as act salesmanship. These up-to-date merchants are not the ones who complain that advertising does not pay.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted 10 cents per agate line.

Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, are offering different lots of tea at most attractive prices, and buyers would be wise in securing their prices before purchasing. The same firm continues to book orders for their Soleil Brand imported canned goods and for the various lines of domestic canning.—Advt.

Prices on Salmon Jumped in British Columbia—Biscuit Baking Contest in Saskatoon—Fort William Grocers Getting Back to Cash Business.

VANCOUVER.

August 22.—The Peachland, Okanagan, peaches are now on the local market, competing with the fruit from California. One would naturally think that the home-grown fruit would be cheaper in price, but this is not the case. They sell at $1.25, while Californias are about $1. Many people, however, prefer the Peachland peach, and there is a good demand. Last year the crop was pretty well controlled by one company, but this year the market is open, and there is a difference of about 50c in the price. The variety now selling is the Triumph, and is well-shaped, of good size and fine flavor.

The United Commercial Travelers have organized in Victoria, and the council there, No. 434, is the latest addition to the ranks. The officers elected are: A. R. Kelly, past councillor; senior councillor, F. M. Russell; junior councillor, C. F. Gardiner; conductor, A. W. Duncan; secretary-treasurer, E. M. McConnon; page, S. P. Moody; sentinel, John Clark; executive committee, L. H. Hardy and Richard George, for two years; Harry C. Briggs and Percy Cudlip for one year. Grand Senior Councillor R. O. McClintock, of Spokane, was the instaling officer. Twenty-nine members were enrolled, 22 applications received, and 15 transfers considered. The initiating team was composed of the following members of the Vancouver council: Senior councillor, Charles Egan; past councillor, E. B. McMaster; junior councillor, A. R. McFarlane; conductor, T. S. Dickson; page, H. R. Werup; sentinel, G. W. Howe. Among the guests was R. L. Phelps, of Vancouver, who, with his bride, happened to be in Victoria. Mr. Kelly, the organizer, who has been transferred from Tacoma to Victoria, has received an application for the formation of a council at Nelson.

The commercial equation in fisheries is now occupying considerable attention. From the west coast of Vancouver Island comes the news that the world's record for a week's catch of whales has been broken, when 26 were taken, making 234 for the Kyoquot station since the season began. This means an immense product of oil, etc., for the trade. In this connection, Capt. A. Huff left on Monday night by the steamer Amur for Rose Harbor, Moresby Island, where he will locate a site for a whaling station, which will be operated by the Queen Charlotte Whaling Company. The processes of Dr. Rismuller, of the Pacific Whaling Co., will be used.

Young lobsters have been found at English Bay, Vancouver's bathing resort. It is not known where these came from, but it is supposed that the lobsters put in the waters on the coast at different times must have been breeding. If this is the case, another industry is in sight.

The catch of salmon has fallen off very considerably, and it was thought as the season was near an end there would be no price difficulties. A Chinese canner, though, has jumped the price, and the canners in the association have had to do likewise. Further increases may be made by canners who have cases to fill.

The International Fishery Commission, consisting of S. T. Bastedo and Dr. David Starr Jordan, arrived here on Tuesday. They have conferred with the canners and sized up the local situation. Dr. Jordan would not give out an opinion on the matter of fish traps, but it is known he is opposed to them, though what he will report after the Puget Sound fishermen, who get the main advantage of traps, are through with him, is difficult to say. The commission has come from Atlantic waters, and besides the salmon will investigate and report on the halibut, in short, the fisheries in general.

The policy of the Provincial Government in forbidding fishing above the bridge across the Fraser at New Westminster is being vindicated by the large number of fish that have reached the upper waters of the river en route for the spawning grounds.

The address of J. S. Dennis, expert for the C.P.R., and well known throughout western Canada, at the irrigation convention, held at Vernon last week, was something to set both people and the Government thinking. He declares the first legislation will have to be drastic to get irrigation on a proper and fair basis, that vested interests should not count, except where water is being used, and that all records, not being utilized, should be snuffed out. The convention will be productive of good in that different opinions were exchanged. Hon. Mr. Fulton announced that Mr. Dennis will assist in framing the proposed bill, which will be submitted to people in various parts of the province for suggestions, either for or against, and the final draft will be an embodiment of what is considered to be the best for the whole population. With the settlement of the fruit-growing districts, where irrigation is a necessity, many difficult problems will arise.

Among the provisional directors of the new Bank of Vancouver is W. H. Malkin, of the wholesale grocery firm of Malkin & Co.

The death took place last week in Vancouver of E. H. McMillan, proprietor of the grocery at 428 Granville St. In the early days of North Vancouver he conducted a store there, where he was appointed postmaster in 1902, retaining the position, with his brother, J. A. McMillan, who took over his business, acting as deputy. He had been troubled with a disease for about two years, though it did not make rapid advances until the last few months. He was 45 years of age and leaves a wife and six children.

A. D. Ganong, of Ganong Bros., Ltd., St. Stephen, N.B., makers of the celebrated G. B. chocolates, is visiting on the coast. While here he was the guest of the firm's British Columbia agent, Jas. Macauley, of Knowler & Macauley.

On the occasion of the visit to Summerland of the delegates to the irrigation convention, B D Lapsley, manager of the grocery department of the Summerland Supply Co., had a finely-decorated window of local fruit and vegetables which was much admired.

F. C. Gasleigh, of Trenton, Ont., has been secured by the Peachland Canning Co. as process man.

A. S. Williamson, who has been in Kamloops and Fernie, has gone to Toronto to join the Eby-Blain forces.

The Kootenay Jam Co. has under consideration plans for the immediate enlargement of its factory and plant at Harrop, in the Kootenay, near Nelson. The present capacity will be quadrupled and a separate canning plant will take care of the larger fruit and vegetables. It is expected that the improvements will be ready for next season's operations.

SASKATOON.

August 22.—Speers & Paul, the west-side grocers, have arranged to hold a prize biscuit baking contest at their store. Arrangements have been made with the Gold Standard Manufacturing Co., of Winnipeg, for holding the competition. Biscuits must be baked at home with the firm's baking powder and the grocer's bill for same must accompany the biscuits. Judging will be done by three ladies of the city who will not compete. There are three prizes valued at $3, $2 and $1.

So extensive has their business in the West become that the Rogers Fruit Company have decided to build a permanent warehouse here. A site has been purchased with a track frontage and the building will be equipped along modern lines for the handling of fruit. The warehouse will be 40 by 100 feet, of brick with a floor space of 1,000 feet. It will have four banana rooms for this line of fruit besides three cold storage rooms. The site provides plenty of room for extension should the business continue to develop as rapidly as it has done in the past.

EDMONTON.

August 24.—Edmonton and Strathcona merchants are more than pleased at the closing of arrangements by which the city of Edmonton has secured a thirty-year franchise in Strathcona from the Strathcona Radial Tramway Co. Street car accommodation in the two cities and communication between them is to be provided at once and men are already at work on the grades. It is expected that inter-urban traffic will commence before the end of the year. Cars will be running to the principal suburbs of the two cities and this means increased business for the city stores.

Street railway communication will bring the twin cities into closer relationship and already there is a movement on foot to unite to form one city with a population of more than 25,000.

FORT WILLIAM.

August 22.—In course of conversation with one of the leading grocers of the city your correspondent was told by him that during the past year a great change had come over the general conditions prevailing in the trade and that the result had been an immense improvement in the business situation in this particular branch. "A couple of years ago," he said, "the wholesale men would give an almost free hand as far as credit was concerned to any party who was operating a store, and the grocer, in his turn, pushed trade with the greatest vigor, regardless to some extent of the financial standing of the people to whom he was giving long lines of credit. The result was that many people who were working on wages and fixed salaries in the city fell behind in their payments until the meeting of the whole of the grocery bill out of one month's salary was impossible. In this way, partly, no doubt by their own fault, the grocers found on their books a large number of accounts which never could be anything but slow, and which in some cases were even extremely doubtful." At this time the banks and the wholesalers began to cut down the line of unlimited credit that they had been accustomed to give, and the pinch began to come upon the retail trade, who, in their turn, have been compelled to cut out the customer whose account was likely to be doubtful and, instead of pressing the goods upon any and every one, decided to retain the goods on their shelves rather than have anything in doubt as to their realization of cash. Customers were quietly sized up and sorted down until a clear dividing line was drawn between the good and the bad, and at the same time special efforts were made to collect the old arrears now over-due. This process acted as a temporary hardship upon the customer, but it enforced economy, and the introduction of economy into the home has naturally resulted in the reduction of the volume of business done. This grocer admitted that he had done less trade by far during the last few months than he had turned over in the similar period of last year, but was entirely satisfied with the result. It has given a healthy tone to the whole grocery situation and placed the retailer in a far stronger position than he ever was before. The movement commenced through the wholesale men and has been practically forced upon the retailer, occasionally against his will, but with actually a most beneficial effect.

The collection of old accounts has been also more satisfactory than might have been expected and has been done with less recourse to the divisional court than usual. In many cases the wage earner has voluntarily placed a certain proportion of his monthly or weekly wages in the hands of a disinterested party to be distributed in proportion among a certain list of creditors, and thus have saved themselves the costs of action and garnishee, and have made a better and more satisfactory settlement with the retail merchants.

A Montreal Grocer Has a New Idea in Delivery Wagons—Valleyfield Needs a Grocers' Organization.

MONTREAL.

August 25.—It is refreshing to come upon a clean strip of sidewalk, and the effect which this exerts upon customers is always a good one. A certain corner store in this city, which is always the acme of cleanliness and brightness, takes good care every morning that the sidewalk around the store is clean. Clean external surroundings assist in creating favorable first impressions, and every grocer appreciates the value of making good impressions at the start.

A grocery delivery wagon was noticed, a few days ago, with a large card on either side, telling people that they could buy good butter at an attractive price, at this store, and on the other side there were some specially enticing bargains in breakfast foods. At first this may be thought to be disfiguring to the wagon, but such, however, is not the case when the ad is neatly written and does not occupy too large a space.

James Robertson, St. Catherine St. W., leaves shortly for a brief holiday.

Some of the dealers on St. Catherine St. are complaining about the lack of judgment shown by the city road department and the Montreal Street Railway. On one side of the street the city is laying new water mains, and at the very same point, but on the other side, the Street Railway are carrying out repairs, so the street is almost impassable. Everybody knows that any obstacle which interferes with the accessibility to a store is a rather serious thing, as people follow largely the lines of least resistance. In addition to this there is the unsightliness of it all.

August is always regarded as a more or less dull time in the retail grocery trade, and this fact renders it possible for many to get away for a vacation during that month. A large number of the stores about town are granting their employes holidays just now.

There is a display of Montreal melons in front of Walter Paul's store, St. Catherine W., which is certainly a credit to the growers. These melons, which are arranged around a sidewalk show case, make a very good display. It might be said that the show case contained a very fine selection of fruit neatly arranged. This fruit is exposed to full view of the people, but is under glass, and free from street dust.

"We are nearer the top." Such was the terse way in which a local wholesale man expressed his reason why Montreal is causing jealousy on the part of New York and Philadelphia regarding the grain trade which is now coming our way. He meant by this that the nearer the North Pole, the shorter the distance around the world, and Montreal was now getting a large amount of the grain-carrying trade which formerly went to New York. This is so because Montreal lies in a direct line with the European ports to which it is shipped, and in this way the grain is not deflected in a southern direction, but maintains a direct route to its destination. With the harbor improvements which will make Montreal a well equipped port, and the great natural advantages in her favor, the prospects in this line of shipping are very good. New York was the first to feel the effects of the change to a more northerly route and now Philadelphia joins in.

To use a slang expression, it is evident that most grocers get "stung" when they first start in business, by bad accounts. Starting in a new community invariably they find it is rather difficult to distinguish between the honest and dishonest people. To gain experience is sometimes expensive. In mentioning this always present difficulty to a grocer who has been, and still is, prosperous, he stated that when he started he trusted nobody, as he said he would rather have the goods on the shelves than only a possibility of getting his pay if they had been sold on credit. There are some dead-beats who regard every new dealer who starts as a fertile source of supply. When these people have obtained all they can they go somewhere else. All of this is bad, but what is maddening, is the fact that they also go somewhere else when they are disposed to pay cash for what they get. As a rule these people never give their creditors their cash trade.

Col. A. E. Labelle, manager of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Montreal, has returned from England where he went in command of the Canadian Bisley team.

VALLEYFIELD.

August 24.—Trade has begun to pick up with the grocers during the past few weeks, owing to the fruit season having commenced. Harvest apples are in abundance. Red Astrachans are selling from $1.50 to $1.75 per bbl.; Duchess and Peach, $1.50 per bbl. for No. 1 hand-picked apples. Potatoes are very firm at $1 per bag.

One fault the merchants of Valleyfield have is in not buying their potatoes by weight and our market is run on a very poor system, the merchant has to pay the same price as the private consumer. An effort should be made to form a grocers' association and I am sure we would all benefit by it.

James Hillman, manager of the Co-Operative Society, has resigned his position and is returning to East Angus and is succeeded by Mr. Craig, of the English Provision Co., Montreal.

Prices for produce are keeping away above the normal for this time of the year. Grocers are paying 25c for butter and 22c for eggs.

Local farmers are getting as high as 24c for new laid eggs from private consumers.

Our grocers do not take enough time to look after their windows. A display will be put in and left sometimes for weeks. If more care was taken of the windows and they were changed at least every second week, it would greatly improve the appearance of the store.

Interesting Ontario Notes

London's Grocers' Outing Club Has a "Time"—The Prize Nuisance in Chatham —St. Thomas Feels the Peddler Nuisance.

LONDON.

August 24.—Grocery brokers report business quiet with them, while with wholesalers and retailers it is fair. Prices of sugar remain unchanged and raws are dull. Coffees are also unchanged. Extra fine teas keep high and lower qualities are a little easier. Other staples are unchanged, but changes are looked for in food shortly. Fish of all kinds are quiet. Raisins are quiet and currants a little easier. No definite news is yet to hand as to the Spanish and Greek crops.

Fruit dealers say people are going to be disappointed this year in regard to the fruit crop, which the newspapers have led them to believe was going to be good. The crop of early peaches and plums was fair but they were of little use for preserving. The crop of fancy plums and good peaches is light. The crop of tomatoes and grapes is very good.

The Grocers' Outing Club held a successful outing at Dorchester, on Wednesday last. Arrived at the station the party at once proceeded to the fair grounds where a baseball game was to be played. G. Garvey and Edward Ryan acted as captains of the respective teams. The line-up of the two teams was as follows: Mr. Ryan's team —Messrs. Dowell, Ryan, Wilson, Linnell, Vincent, Tripp, Young, Millman and Duncan. Mr. Garvey's team—Messrs. Collis, Nopper, C. Garvey, T. Shaw, J. Wilson, T. Ranahan, Smith, Gilmore and F. H. Traver. Dr. Banghart, of Dorchester, umpired the game in a most satisfactory manner. From the time the ball game ended until six o'clock the crowd amused themselves in a general way. A number went to the beautiful grounds owned by the gun club and spent a pleasant hour. At about six o'clock the second number on the programme was announced. It was a "duck" supper served in the Linder House. As soon as the meal was disposed of Thomas Shaw, the President of the Retail Grocers' Association, was elected toastmaster.

The first toast proposed was to "The King," which was responded to in the usual manner. The next number on the programme was a song by Edward Ryan, which was greatly appreciated. The toast to "Canada" was next proposed, coupled with the names of E. Wilkey and E. E. Linnell. Both paid fitting tributes to the great Dominion. The chairman then called on Roy Nopper for a song, which was rendered in a manner to win rounds of applause. The toast to the "Retail Grocers" was responded to by Ed. Ryan and Fred. Traver. Mr. Ryan said everyone was here to enjoy themselves, and he sincerely hoped that they would do so. Mr. Traver said this was the first time he had the pleasure of accompanying the members of the club on their annual outing, but he hoped it would not be the last. A toast to the "Wholesale Grocers" was then proposed and was responded to by C. Garvey and McKinley Millman. They both congratulated the club on the success of the outing and hoped to be present at the next annual event of the kind. The next number on the programme was a toast to the "Retail Grocers' Association," which was coupled with the names of E. Young and G. Duncan. Both gentlemen spoke of the benefit the association had done to the retail grocery business. The last toast on the list was to "The Guests" and was responded to by S. Leish and G. Wilson. Both appreciated the honor of being the guests of the club and congratulated the members on the success of the outing.

The gathering then adjourned to the hotel parlors where all joined in songs, accompanied by T. Ranahan on the piano, until the train was due. The merrymakers arrived in the city shortly after ten o'clock greatly pleased with the day's outing.

Preparations are nearing completion for the Grocers' big picnic at Springland, on Wednesday afternoon of next week, and the indications are that the affair will be the greatest of the kind ever held.

CHATHAM.

August 24.—The complaint voiced by the Peterboro correspondent a short time ago with reference to Sunday schools, churches and other organizations soliciting prizes from merchants, strikes a responsive chord here. True, Chatham has never been excessively troubled by prize solicitors, but the kindred evil of programme "advertising" at one time had deep root. Not a concert took place but the management deemed the merchants their lawful prey to the extent of 50c or a dollar, paid for "advertising" space that wasn't worth a red cent.

The evil is one which can be effectively dealt with only by a merchants' or grocers' association. The local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association grappled with it most effectively a couple of years ago, and now the practice, as well as the practice of ticket soliciting, is practically dead. While experience has shown that it is hard to get the entire mercantile community together to discuss united action, yet a dozen or so resolute merchants can make a beginning which others are only too glad to follow. The experience here is that even the few merchants who decline to join the association are perfectly willing to back up its efforts along this line. Furthermore, the mere passing of a resolution by the merchants does much to check this "grafting."

Chatham's tax rate for 1908 will, it is expected, be 28½ mills. While this is a good, substantial figure, citizens have the consolation that the paving of all the main streets of the city is practically complete, and that a few years from now, when the present local improvement debentures begin to drop off, we will be enjoying not only a lower tax rate but modern improvements as well.

Carter Mitchell, one of Chatham's oldest colored merchants, died rather suddenly Wednesday morning. He was 80 years of age, and had conducted a small grocery on Wellington Street East for many years.

J. W. Edwards' general store at Cairo, near here, was completely destroyed by fire on Friday morning. The store was also the village post office. Mr. Edwards' loss is estimated at $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

Miss Chick, special demonstrator for Peters' and Nestle's Swiss milk chocolates, was at E. A. Mounteer's confectionery store all last week, where she conducted a very successful demonstration and distributed free samples of her goods.

The Stoney Point Canning Company have put up a new $5,000 building. E. Desmarais has also enlarged his store.

The manufacture of Stogie cigars in Canada is now an accomplished fact, a factory having recently been established in the Irwin Block, Leamington. The product is now being placed on the market.

The 1908 tobacco crop, which, though small, promised to be of excellent quality, is now reported to have suffered somewhat from the heavy rains of last week. A period of warm, dry weather is now needed to bring the crop to perfection. Buyers are very optimistic as to results for next year, and are again advising growers to plant tobacco extensively.

Reports from Blenheim indicate that the bean harvest in South Harwich has already commenced. The patent bean puller is now extensively employed, superseding the old process of pulling by hand, and, incidentally, doing the work in a tithe of the time. While some very fine fields have been noticed, the recent heavy rains have worked considerable havoc in many sections.

ST. THOMAS.

August 24.—Business was rather dull last Saturday, possibly owing to the absence of many farmers who are kept busy in the harvest fields and also to the fact that the employes of the P.M.R.R. held their largely attended excursion to Chatham that day. It is regrettable to the merchants especially that Saturday is always selected as the day for these excursions and next Saturday the Wabash & G.T.R. employes hold theirs to Detroit, which, with the M.C.R., lately held makes three Saturdays already spoiled for trade this season on this account.

It is surprising the apathy shown by the authorities in enforcing the Transient Traders' and Peddlars' By-Law. The city is overrun by tea, clock, clothing, fruit and other peddlars plying their trade unmolested, whilst the grocer has to pay his business tax to keep up the machinery of the law and get no protection in return. This is a gross injustice to him as well as the loss of a legitimate source of revenue to the city. The grocers' section of the R.M.A. ought to take this matter in hand and wake somebody up.

Home-grown watermelons and cantelopes are quite plentiful and readily retail at from ten to twenty cents each.

Plums locally are also a big yield, the trees almost breaking down with them and are ripening three weeks earlier than last year and by the time some of the tardy housekeepers get ready to do their canning, the plums will be all gone. Then, as usual, they will blame the grocer for not telling them in time and he, in the meantime, has had probably to dump them because they were not ready to buy when he had them. Peaches in the Leamington district are quite plentiful and as St. Thomas depends on that district for its supplies it is welcome news. Eleven-quart baskets sold retail at sixty-five cents last Saturday. Fall apples are abundant and cheap, selling at fifteen cents per peck but winter apples are a very light yield in this county according to reliable reports.

A report was industriously circulated this morning that G. R. Rinn, one of the St. Catharine St. grocers, had his store burglarized on Sunday. When the chief of police called to investigate, however, he found it all a mistake.

Bob has a fondness for the jumbo bunches of bananas out of the car. He got four dandies on Saturday and hung them up in his store. One of the bunches fell and took down the hook and plaster. Someone was in, saw the debris and took it for granted that the store was burglarized, hence the story.

BRANTFORD.

August 25.—C. W. Grantham has purchased from Hagey & Co. their East Ward store at the corner of Alfred and Colborne Streets. Mr. Grantham formerly had a grocery on Dalhousie Street, near the Commercial hotel.

Local retailers report business improving, the holiday season is nearly over and the fruit and pickling season is responsible for a considerable increase in business. Butter is very firm at 26c and 27c per lb. Eggs, 22c dozen.

The Brantford Grocers' Association have received an invitation from the Hamilton grocers to attend their annual hump, and no doubt but many will go to enjoy the lake breezes on Wednesday afternoon.

The regular meeting of the association was held on Tuesday evening and all the business in connection with the recent excursion to Niagara Falls was finished. The treasurer reports a neat surplus. An interesting discussion took place on methods of lessening the credit business. That the cash system is the best and is coming more into vogue is very evident. There should be a larger attendance at these meetings of the retail merchants to discuss matters and to bring things up for debate. The president promises some interesting discussions at the future meetings.

Wednesday afternoon brings to a close the summer half-holiday in this city. The clerks appreciate the generosity of the merchants in giving June, July and August this year.

Thos. Thompson has purchased the grocery on Colborne Street from Norman Willitts and Mr. Willitts, who has been connected with the grocery trade of Brantford for the last twenty years, has entered the bakery business. We wish him every success.

Ald. S. Suddaby, the West Brant grocer, has had plans and specifications drawn up for a fine new store which, it is his intention of erecting in the near future.

GALT.

August 25.—Never before has the town of Galt been closed up so tight as on Thursday afternoon last, when the retail merchants held their first annual picnic. Every store was closed during the afternoon and the business portion of the town was deserted. Confectionery stores which with the exception of Sundays had not been closed for twenty years, shut their doors, and employers and employees joined in the picnic. It required considerable consideration on the part of Galt merchants to arrive at the conclusion that an outing together would be beneficial in more ways than one, but once the decision was reached the unanimity with which everyone entered into the preparations ensured success, and the outing was an unqualified success. It was the biggest picnic ever leaving Galt and ten cars were required to transport the merchants, their clerks and friends, numbering over 800, to Waterloo Park, a distance of 15 miles. The whole afternoon was spent at the park, and there was a football and baseball game, and a programme of sports, a baby show and a cakewalk, and a dance in the park pavilion. The committee had perfected every arrangement with the result that every minute of the outing was enjoyed by all present. A bountiful luncheon was supplied at six o'clock and the multitude was fed without confusion.

From a merchant's standpoint the picnic was most enjoyable. Business was forgotten for the afternoon and rival proprietors of businesses rubbed shoulders, many for the first time, with the result that a more harmonious feeling between merchants in Galt now exists. It was a great day and the merchants are delighted with the success of their outing. The picnic next year will probably be on a more elaborate scale, and may embrace an all-day excursion.

Robert Percy, of Radigan's grocery, has returned from a week's holiday in Montreal.

The fruit season to date has been very disappointing to local growers, who, owing to the large quantities offered for sale, found it impossible to realize a fair profit. "I can't remember a season since I have been in business," said a local grocer, "when the price of fruit has been so low. It is almost impossible to give it away, and we are compelled to order in very small quantities in order that it does not spoil on our hands. Were it not for the convenience of our customers I would handle absolutely no fruit this year." A number of other grocers were interviewed and all corroborated the above opinion.

New honey in comb and jar is being offered and is moving out very rapidly.

Allan Deans, of the Red Front, spent four days of last week at the bowling tournament in Berlin. His rink reached the sixth round before it was finally defeated.

Miss Dobel Anderson, of the office staff of Sloan Bros., is holidaying in Norwich and Simcoe.

OTTAWA.

August 25.—"Tomatoes are coming in well now, and are dropping in price," said a dealer on By Ward Market this morning. "How is the crop?" was asked. "Mine is very good, and I hear others saying that they expect theirs to come out well. They are good color and sound. They've been a little late that's all." Prices for the commodity were this morning 18 and 20 cents a gallon, and 40 cents for baskets. The supply was fairly good. Potatoes showed little change, but were, if anything, a shade easier. The quotation was $1.50 a bag. There was a large quantity of plums offered for sale but those that were local were a little hard looking. For them 50 cents a basket was demanded. Peaches have been fairly plentiful, but pears are a little hard.

Ottawa's milk supply during the latter part of July was severely taxed. Recent rains, however, have temporarily improved the pastures, and as a result the production at present is somewhat larger, but the general shortage has caused the price of cheese to float above 12 cents, and butter has advanced to from 25 cents to 30 cents.

August 24.—Some of the grocers in Ottawa seem to be after blueberries pretty hard, here's another one. Albert Lafleche, grocer, bought a cargo of blueberries on the market the other morning before the legal hour of 8.30. He was detected by the market inspector, admitted the offence and was taxed $12. Mr. Lafleche said he thought it was after 8.30 when he bought the produce.

A good many people lately have been inquiring as to the reason potatoes here were so mach higher this season than in Montreal or Toronto. The reason given by most of the vendors is that while these two big wholesale centres depend on the outside supply from all over Canada to fill their requirements, Ottawa depends in a large measure on the local supply. This latter happened to be a bad one this year, and consequently prices went up. Probably expecting that they would go down again in a very short time, the local dealers did not bring in enough carloads from Montreal to appreciably lower the price until lately, so that for a time almost record figures were attained.

The monthly meeting of the Ottawa Vegetable Growers' Association, was held Tuesday evening, August 18, in Allen's Hall. The meeting, on account of the Horticultural Exhibition, was not as fully attended as was to be desired, however, some very valuable points were discussed. The chair was occupied by W. Smith, who called upon T. A. Ferguson for an address. He responded and gave some advice on onion growing from personal experience.

Commercial men who are now in the city taking orders for fall delivery, report a gradual revival in trade conditions. "It was never difficult to get orders," stated one of them last night, "but the difficulty arose through slow payments, Paper is now being met with much greater promptitude and the general outlook has vastly improved. The heavy crop in the west will have a very stimulating influence."

Though there has been plenty of fruit on the local market, the prices are high. Imported fruits are more moderate in price than the home-grown, for the Ottawa valley crop is somewhat light owing to the lack of rains in early summer.

HAMILTON.

August 24.—That veteran grocer, C. H. Pebbles, has come to his reward, having received an appointment from the Whitney Administration as Division Court Clerk. The best wishes of the retail trade go with him to his new office. He was respected and admired for his many sterling qualities while in the grocery business, and general regret is felt by both wholesalers and retailers at his leaving the trade.

A good story is being told of "Bay" Hill, the energetic secretary of Hamilton Grocers' Association. While out at the recent travelers' snack at Alton a couple of weeks ago, he was introduced to one of the town's foremost citizens. The citizen in question is troubled with inability to remember the names of people. Next day, meeting "Bay" and not wishing to appear forgetful, the foremost citizen, thinking he had a clue, asked whether he spelled his name with an "e" or an "i." Bay smilingly replied, "Why, my name is Hill."

BERLIN.

August 25.—Isador Snyder, one of the progressive farmers of this vicinity, who pays particular attention to several fruits, including melons, says the watermelon crop is an excellent one this year. He will begin marketing them this week.

Three thousand people will come to Berlin on September 23rd to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the organization of the Brotherhood of Railroad Men in Canada, which should be of considerable benefit to local provision and fruit dealers.

The long-continued wet weather caused the farmers a trying time in harvesting oats and many farmers reported instances of the fall wheat sprouting. However, this evil to the wheat was beneficial to the root crops, so Farmer John is not complaining.

GUELPH.

August 24.—One of the best grocery buyers or in fact closest buyers whom I have ever met passed away here today in the person of A. J. Fitzsimmons. He was a good grocer and made money in the stand at present occupied by J. C. Chittick. His first question to a traveler always was, "Well, what have you got to-day off the unbeaten track?" Travelers from all parts of Canada will remember him for this quaint saying of his. He was always a buyer, and for cash if you could interest him. Many friends will miss him, but few more than the travelers, who used to have to brush up against him in a business deal.

Albert Van, of J. A. McCrae & Son's staff, had two splendid windows in this week, one with a background of sacks of Wallaceburg sugar at $4.85, with the front dressed with all kinds of spices from a to z, including two large decanters of vinegar, one cider the other white wine. His other window consisted of fancy jugs, regular 40c jugs for 15c, and was a great drawing card.

The Surprise Soap Co.'s representative, D. L. Blake, was in town this week advertising this famous brand of soap. He dressed a few windows also, and made many friends. He did quite a business in cans and twine holders also. His window dressing was all that could be desired, but when a professional does come along we are looking for something out of the ordinary. The boys are all willing to look and learn, but several windows of the same kind is not just exactly what we are looking for. You did all right, Mr. Blake, but *give us something or show us something next time out of the ordinary and we will appreciate it more.

The clerks' advertisement and the merchants' advertisement in each Wednesday afternoon's paper cause a good deal of merriment, but so far the clerks have had the best of it, and also the half-holiday.

Surprise soap is all O.K., but heavenly day, I wonder if it will take mucilage off windows is a question I heard today. Will some of those Galt people tell us ?

STRATFORD.

August 25.—Does it pay to sell cheap granulated sugars ? Twenty cents per cwt. is quite an inducement for many grocers to handle it and there seems to be quite a lot of it on the market. Just now during preserving season when sugar is the big item in groceries it is a most important question for every merchant. It is true a merchant has to figure out his percentages—but in just what way they are figured out means much to the sound establishment of his business. To-day customers certainly know the difference between a cheap article and a genuine one, and are not easily fooled—hence the merchant that pushes cheap sugar is doing an injury to his business. Wouldn't it be a better way to give a pound less per $1, give the genuine article and build up a reputation for good reliable groceries ?

Surprise soap and Lea & Perrin's sauce are being freely advertised in the city, many grocers having placed their windows at the disposal of the former.

Leo. Killoran, proprietor of the M. J. Killoran grocery, is the local C.M.B.A. delegate to the big convention at Quebec.

Tomatoes are very high in price and are rather on the scarce side. They are retailing as high as 50c per basket. Peaches are of poor quality so far and very few being handled. Plums and pears are plentiful.

INGERSOLL.

August 24.—With the breath of autumn stealing upon us in the early morn and at evening time, one's thoughts naturally turn to the fruit season, the most delightful in Canada of all the seasons. The early fruits were abundantly plentiful, and this also may be said of the autumn fruits. At the present time plums are being marketed in very plentiful quantities, and it is said that the yield in the surrounding districts will be the heaviest in years. This is probably true as the price, for the opening of the season, is considerably cheaper than usual.

The tomato, a vegetable which finds favor in every household, will also be extremely plentiful this season. The scarcity of fruits and the increased price of sugar during recent years, were factors in lessening the quantity of fruits in many homes, and, as a result, their places have been filled to no small extent by vegetables, chief among them being tomatoes. Many housewives have increased their supply of catsup, and it is always a welcome table requisite and means a saving of fruit. The pinch of hard times which many experienced last year taught them a lesson in frugality and industry, and more and better worked gardens are to be seen on every hand. This means that the average citizen will not be as dependent upon the market as heretofore. Special attention has been paid to tomatoes, cucumbers and potatoes, the three staple vegetables, and prices this winter will doubtless be cheaper than for several years for this very reason.

Beattie & Co. took advantage of Civic Holiday, Monday, August 17, and removed to their new premises. They have many important improvements in contemplation, which, when carried to completion, will make the new stand all that could be desired for the grocery business.

For the past week or two the community has been terrorized by a bold gang of sneak thieves who have visited dwellings, stores and offices. Among the places visited was Sherry's grocery store on Thames Street. An entrance was effected by cutting the screen at the window over the front door. The window happened to be open, and the thieves had little difficulty in entering the store after the screen had been removed. They secured between four and five dollars from the till, and a quantity of tobacco, cigars and other articles.

TORONTO.

August 24.—Harry MacDonald, the Sorauren Avenue grocer, was up in Guelph during the Old Home Week, and while there, besides enjoying himself fully, he made arrangements out at the Model Farm for a good-sized supply of butter weekly. The idea was a good one and residents of North Parkdale seem to thoroughly appreciate the excellent butter. About 200 pounds are being brought in weekly.

Roy Armstrong, of the Perkins, Ince Co., Toronto, is spending a vacation at Buffalo. John Stevens, book-keeper for the same company, is holidaying at Scarboro.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Grocers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association, held at their rooms on Monday evening, August 24, the committee appointed to interview the wholesale grocers in regard to the question of discounts, presented its report. A. B. Griffin presided at the meeting, which was well attended, and Jno. F. Holloway and W. M. Miller, represented the committee. Mr. Holloway reported that the wholesalers they had met stated that for three reasons they were compelled to take this action. The manufacturers had cut off discounts to the wholesalers to the extent of 60 per cent. of their business; the system of discounts had been abused by the retailers; and discrimination had been unconsciously enforced against some retailers. Where discounts were given for ten days, some retailers had abused the privilege by making it more like sixty days, and it was a difficult matter for the wholesaler to know where to draw the line. A number of retailers instead of paying accounts in ten days, let them run thirty and forty days, and then remitted a check after deducting the discount. The conscientious retailer who knew that discounts meant paying in ten days would pay his account in full if it ran over the period. Thus the wholesalers found that some retailers were discriminated against.

The meeting received the report and decided that if the wholesalers insisted upon carrying out their intention of cutting off all discounts, then it was necessary for them to make reasonable concessions. The same committee was appointed to wait on the wholesalers and see what concessions they would grant. The committee is to report at a special meeting on Friday, August 28.

The report of the development of the co-operative system in Toronto was read by E. M. Trowern, and a resolution was unanimously passed asking the general executive board of the Toronto branch to take vigorous steps to inform the public through the press or otherwise as to the real facts concerning the system.

The report of the committee regarding hawkers and peddlers was brought in. The committee had been before the Board of Control and asked that the peddlers' by-law be enforced, to which the Controllers agreed. The committee was instructed by the meeting to take proceedings against any peddler who engaged more than one person on a wagon. The committee is also to interview the Police Commissioners and see that the by-law regarding peddlers with push-carts be enforced and that these men be made to move on as authorized by the by-law.

A committee was appointed to prepare a list of prices at which staple articles should be sold, and this list is to be issued to all members once a week.

The local representatives of Thomas J. Lipton have arranged rather a novel window dressing contest for the grocers of Toronto. $250 in prizes are offered for the best eighteen windows dressed with the firm's tea, coffee and jelly tablets. The period of display is to be from August 29 to September 12, and the editor of The Grocer is to do the judging. The company offer show cards, etc., to assist in dressing the window. Photos are to be sent in to the Editor of The Grocer and must reach him by September 21. The contest is creating a good deal of interest in the city, and the entries promise to be large in number.

A tea-room has been opened at 191 Yonge St., by Thomas J. Lipton, to demonstrate the firm's products during the two weeks of the coming Exhibition. The idea has proved exceedingly popular in Montreal and Quebec, as it has done here in former years. Visiting grocers are invited to make the room their headquarters during the Fair.

C. Lyons, general merchant, Rosthern, Sask., is succeeded in business by Lyons Bros.

INTERESTING PROVINCIAL EXHIBITS.

1,000 Miles of Wheat From Saskatchewan—An Unexcelled Dairy Display.

One of the most attractive features of the Canadian National Exhibition, which opens in Toronto next week, will be the exhibits from the various Provinces of the Dominion.

Alberta's exhibit, for instance, will include a mirror arrangement reflecting 1,000 miles of waving wheat extending from Edmonton to Portage la Prairie. An exhibit from Saskatchewan will be a working elevator showing how grain is stored and shipped.

In dairy products there never was such a good showing at the Exhibition as this year, especially in butter exhibits of which are promised from Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and in extra quantity from Quebec.

Grocers will find numerous points of interest at the great Fair, and a visit will be well worth while.

INVITATION TO THE TRADE.

If you are coming to the Toronto Exhibition—and I trust you are—plan to call at our office, 3 Wellington Street East, and make it your headquarters while in the city. Just consider our staff, phone, writing material, etc., at your disposal. If we can be of service to you it will be a pleasure. When at the Exhibition grounds be sure and visit the "Red Rose Tea" booth in the Manufacturers' Building and you and your friends enjoy a cup of "Good Tea."

TRAVELERS HOTEL IN OTTAWA.

Commercial travelers visiting Ottawa these days are going in larger number than ever to the new Hotel Cecil. The boys find every modern convenience at this hotel and are delighted with the excellent cuisine and prompt service. Mr. Walter B. Walby, the proprietor, has been 18 years in the hotel business, and has always found the "Knight of the Grip" the best patron of any high-class hotel. For that reason he has, since the opening of the Hotel Cecil, catered particularly to the commercial travelers of the country.—Advt.

TRADE NOTES.

S. J. Smith, Hamilton, has sold his grocery business to E. R. Almas.

John A. McFarlane, grocer, Shakespeare, is advertising his business for sale.

McArthur & Dezall, general merchants, Hopeville, have dissolved partnership. The business will be continued by Mr. McArthur.

The Robert Greig Co., Toronto, have recently made large shipments of White Swan Prepared Cocoanut to Winnipeg and other points. Their business in this and in White Swan Coffee is steadily growing.

"Men Who Sell Things"

Something Further About Letter-Writing—Make Them Personal Talks With the Customer—A Homily on Price-cutting Which is Characterized as a Weakness—Quality and Value Rather Than Price the Real Factors in Selling Goods.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

To begin with, don't put too much of yourself into your letters. The best customer on your calendar is not interested overmuch in you. The thing that concerns him is how you can help his situation. Don't fool yourself into believing that you have him solidly bound to you by close ties of friendship. Intimate acquaintance is worth much, to be sure, but your own brother will patronize you in a business way only so long as you can make it worth his while from a dollar-and-cent standpoint. That is because business is business. Friendship is another matter. It is useful only as a path-opener in business. It will keep the opening clear only as long as it conduces to your customer's commercial prosperity.

Keep Self in the Rear.

But to return. In letter-writing keep yourself in the background, put your customer's interests to the fore, and avoid construction of the machine-like, ready-made order. Introduce your subject in a graceful, natural and friendly style; then, carefully avoiding meaningless sentences, proceed into the real pith of your proposition, making your points tell one on another, briefly, vividly, connectedly, down to the leave-taking, which should be genuinely polite, but withal natural and pleasant, as you would say good-bye to a friend or acquaintance about to depart on a short journey.

You wouldn't greet an old acquaintance on the street with, "Excuse me for taking this liberty in saying how do you do," or "The favor of your presence here on the street with me is heartily appreciated, I assure you." And you wouldn't leave him with, "I hope you will remember me. Good-bye," or, "I hope I have pleased you in this meeting, and that you will offer me further opportunity for continued acquaintance."

Sounds funny, doesn't it?

Well, that's the way it sounds when you write letters that way. If you wouldn't talk that way to your friends, why do you write in that style? Think it over.

You don't do it? Oh, yes, you do! And you are not alone in it either.

Make it a Personal Talk.

Bring your customer as close to you in a letter as you would in a personal talk, if he were sitting at your elbow in the sample-room or talking to you at his own desk.

Men of limited schooling have found an easy method of increasing their vocabulary in reading extensively and studiously from the lives of great men, and other works of educational interest. In precisely the same way the salesman may increase his knowledge of correct letter writing by making a careful study of the style adopted by men who are specialists in the art of business-letter writing.

Take pains with your letters. When one is finished in which you wish your powers of persuasion to have full swing, read it over carefully; study the weak points and try again. Keep on trying until you hit upon a style that you feel certain will have the desired effect.

I have known men who, from long practice, were skilled in the art of constructing powerful business-getting letters, to ponder for hours and destroy many copies in an effort at shaping up just what they wanted for a strong letter with which to fit a specific purpose.

The power of business-letter writing as a silent factor in salesmanship is second only to the oral method.

To any salesman who will intelligently explore the field there awaits a golden harvest. Begin now while the subject is fresh in your mind. In place of using the conventional advance cards, that outlived their usefulness before their invention, invest a dollar or two occasionally in the services of a public stenographer, and keep your customers in touch with you by heart-to-heart, elbow-to-elbow business-getting and business-holding letters.

It will please and surprise you amazingly to see how quickly and effectually your work will take on new life. All that is necessary to germinate it is a little time employed from among the many idle hours on board the train or about hotel lobbies, coupled with the slight investment of a few cents, and a larger one of sense.

CHAPTER XVI.

Getting the Price.

The highest delights are often found by turning the back on inviting by-paths and facing cold duty.

It is hard to redeem the salesman who is under the narcotic of price-cutting.

The habit of making your own prices on your employer's goods is a moral kink in your selling education, a hold-back on your advancement in the profession, and a sink-hole for the profits of your house; and if you cannot break yourself of it, better far that you quit salesmanship and become an auctioneer; then you can have unlimited latitude to indulge in the pastime of tobogganing on a sliding scale of price-making where no harm can be done.

The most inexecusable fault in any salesman is the lack of ability to get the price.

If you will always keep in mind the principle of not allowing your customers to make your price, you will find how easy it is to make sales at the prices with which your goods are marked.

There are shrewd buyers everywhere who have learned that if they can put the price on the other man's goods they are morally certain of getting the best end of the bargain.

When a customer enters your sample-room and informs you that your competitor has offered him the same article you have just shown him at a lower price than you named, you should at once settle it with yourself that you will be establishing a dangerous precedent in falling into the hands of that customer, if this reported cut in price is met without careful investigation. And even then you should generally stand firm and refuse to meet this competitive attack. The salesman who sells the right goods to his customers in the right way has no need to do business at a loss on any article, or to allow his competitors or his customers to make his prices.

It is a good thing to remember the old rule that a good buyer never calls attention to the fact of prices being higher in one place than another. If a higher price has actually been named than he could buy the same article for elsewhere, he quietly drops it, slips away to the store of the man who made the lower price, and places his order there.

Testing the Salesman's Nerve.

In nine cases out of ten, when a buyer questions your prices he is merely testing your nerve as a salesman. If you should yield just once, and your house be lax enough to permit it, you are done for on price-getting with that buyer as long as you travel that territory.

The weak-kneed salesman who is unacquainted with the mind of the average buyer imagines because he is not strong himself on his own goods and prices, that the buyers on his territory will share his uncertainty. If they do share it, it is because of his reflected weakness, and not on account of his values.

All through the various phases of salesmanship, faith runs like a silver thread. If a salesman's faith is weakened with dread and doubt, he must blame his failure on his lack of confidence, and not on his goods.

When you start out with a new line of goods at the beginning of a season, and your faith is abundant, how easy it is for you to drive your points home and clinch your arguments with every article shown. No room for price-cutting then!

Now, as a matter of fact, the prices of the goods in your house are pretty generally right. An off price now and then, even on a marked article, is perfectly liable to occur, but it is nothing to be alarmed at. Your house could not remain in business and pay you the salary you are drawing, if it were always under the market on everything it had to sell.

Price Not So Important.

While you are looking with an eye to picking the easy sellers in your line, don't forget that price in merchandising does not cut so much figure as it did ten years ago. The buyer's argument then was price and quantity; now it is selection and quality. The merchant is out of date who goes about the market wearing that old price bugaboo around his neck. There is little room for doubt that his shelves are filled with shop-worn "bargains," in place of up-to-date merchandise.

On a certain occasion a big and pompous dealer from the West came into our store, and in a loud voice said:

"I'm looking for the man who makes prices."

The sales manager was called, and explained to him that no in the place was empowered with that privilege. "Our prices," said he, "are the same to you as to others."

"But," answered the merchant, "I have always heard it stated that you were high-priced."

"You are willing to trust to your own knowledge of values, are you not?" asked the manager.

He said he was, and expressed a desire to go through the house. Stopping on one of the floors where he thought it would be a good place for the merchant to start in to buy, the manager launched into a brief, terse argument, in which he cut loose from cheapness—emphasizing merit—laying stress on inherent worth both of style and quality.

That buyer placed an order for fifteen hundred dollars before he left, and came back for more goods each season afterwards, always acknowledging that that argument on quality had been worth a great deal to him in his own business.

I have known salesmen to be so weak on price that, when they discovered an article in the line that was overvalued from among hundreds of others of exceptional value, all they could do was to go about the place and hound everybody they came in contact with about it, as if the whole future of the house and themselves depended on immediate adjustment of the matter. Their argument was that if a customer should happen to run across it, it would prejudice him toward the entire line. Nice compliment to their customers' knowledge of values, wasn't it?

Knowledge of Values Counts.

For the edification of just such salesmen, let me emphasize right here that buyers do not turn down a house of standing because of a price or two being out of the way. Every buyer has certain houses on his staff that he likes to favor. Before going to market he makes a mental blue-print of the amount of goods he intends to purchase, and about how much he will leave with each house. In visiting the various places he is in the habit of frequenting, his chief attention is given to selection on style—not price. He picks out patterns in one house that he did not see in another, and vice versa. If, perchance, he actually discovers the same article in two places at different prices, and he has already purchased it at the higher price, he simply cancels his order for that one thing and places it with the other house. But on no account does he condemn the entire plant because of that experience. So there is no need of fear that your trade is going to leave you on any such pretext.

Enlargement of the heart is responsible for price-cutting on the part of some salesmen. They permit a buyer to work on their sympathies with stories of the quantities of goods he can use if the price is right. He pleads his case so eloquently and with such ardor that the salesman forgets that successful salesmanship depends upon his ability to lead his customers—not on following them. Leaders are finders; followers get but leavings.

"Clouds are helped by winds to rise. Be not a cloud; strive to be the wind whose will the clouds obey."

Price-cutting is Character Weakness.

The spirit of accommodation is all right in its place, but it amounts to an offence against your house when you take the liberty of displaying it at the firm's expense. It is easy to be generous with other people's resources, unless your character is free from kinks. Price-cutting is character weakness. Did you ever think of it in that light

What right have you to reduce the price of another's goods purely of your own volition?

No more right than you have to go behind the cashier's desk, put your hand in the money-drawer, and take out the same amount you lop off in a cut price and give to a customer.

Sounds severe, does it not? It is the truth. Truth hurts sometimes, but when it hurts most it does the most good.

You are paid to sell goods at a profit.

The Sheldon definition of salesmanship is the best I have ever heard—

"Power to persuade people to purchase at a profit."

Not simply to purchase but to purchase at a profit.

Your salary is based upon a percentage of your sales, plus traveling expense. When you cut prices, this percentage does not fluctuate with your cuts. It goes on just the same whether you are steady on prices or not. The basis of profit to you remains the same. If your house fixes the percentage on the profits of your sales instead of the actual sales, that is a different proposition. That is the safest and surest remedy for price-cutting; it makes the fiddler dance to his own music.

Minus a Safety-Valve.

The house employing many salesmen without a profitfiguring department is like a steam boiler without a safety-valve.

Strange as it may seem, salesmen who have enjoyed the widest liberty in the conduct of their firm's affairs abroad, and whose basis for salary has been changed from net sales to progt on sales, decidedly prefer the latter method. It leaves no gaps in the selling-fence through which the salesman is tempted to wander into by-paths. It is always easier to keep your mind on one object than on a dozen. When that object is the sale of goods at a profit, it is easier of accomplishment with the course positively defined. The man is yet undiscovered who can successfully watch all the attractions going on at once in a five-ring circus.

If, however, your house is still operating on the old plan of percentage on sales, and there is no limit to your latitude (don't put the coat on, now, unless it fits; this chapter is intended for that class of salesmen for whom instructions have but little restraining influence), stop for a moment to consider your house. It pays you your salary. It is the head of the business family of which you are a member. True, you could go elsewhere and secure a position—almost any one could. That is the meanest argument you could use. The question is, Have you no filial business regard for the head of your business family?

WELL-THUMBED EVIDENCE.

A short time ago a well known trade paper received a substantial advertising order from a concern which had formerly used space very sparingly. Later, the sales manager of that concern while conversing in a social way after business hours with the trade paper's advertising representative, explained his reason for the increase of advertising. He said that while making a personal trip over the territory of a sick traveler he entered the private office of a large retail merchant from whom he got only occasional and sparing orders. But, before leaving, he noticed that the most well-thumbed article on that merchant's desk was the current issue of the trade paper in question. That decided him.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, August 27, 1908.

The weather has been very favorable to cheese production for the last ten days or two weeks and as a result arrivals are showing an improvement in quality. The advance in price checked the export business for a short time, but now enquiries are beginning to arrive. Many of the large English houses have advanced their prices, and are now able to sell the Canadian product. The English people have always been known as good feeders and a rise in price is not so apt to deter them from buying as perhaps it would in some other countries. The quality of the cheese now being shipped is exceptionally good and this fact is helping the sale immensely on the British market. Dealers say that although times are not so good the demand for Canadian cheese keeps up, therefore they propose covering their wants, although they have to do so at advanced prices. Taking into consideration the fact that the taste for cheese in England is more deeply seated than it is in America, we would naturally look for more uniformity in demand in the English market despite the peregrinations of price than we would see in America. Here we find the demand is exactly relative to the price. Americans do not consider it so essential as a food as the British people, therefore high prices are liable to limit sale.

P. B. McNamara, commissioner at Manchester for the Department of Trade and Commerce of the Canadian Government, says:—"So far this season Canadian cheese has been neglected in the north of England, which is due to the fact that domestic cheese was cheaper than the Canadian." Continuing, Mr. McNamara said that the wholesale and retail trade have the impression that cheese prices are being held up by forces which they cannot control, and they are content to let it alone, or at any rate to deal with only compulsory quantities. Since this opinion was expressed, however, the English buyers have become convinced of the genuineness of the Canadian situation, and are now taking the Canadian product at Canadian prices. The wary manner displayed by the English buyers during the entire season seems to be attributable now to this impression that some artificial force was bolstering up the price here, and they disliked to pay a fancy figure due to any such causes as this.

Receipts of cheese for the week ending August 21 amounted to 78,281 boxes, as against 75,306 boxes for the previous week, and 79,521 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. Shipments of cheese from Montreal last week amounted to 70,574 boxes, as against 65,493 boxes for the previous week, and 60,759 for the corresponding week of last year. Total shipments from Montreal since May 1, 957,286 boxes as against 1,106,883 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

The local market is firm and there is a good demand. Westerns are quoted at 12¼c to 12⅜c, and Easterns at 12½c to 12⅝c.

From all appearances it looks as though the British people want our butter regardless of what they are obliged to pay for it. When the high prices first went into effect it checked the inquiry from the other side, but now Englishmen are evincing interest in our butter in spite of the present high prices. This is a compliment, indeed, to Canada, when we know that Siberia and Australia are pouring their products onto the English market in great abundance. The Siberian receipts are a record, and it must not be lost sight of that this butter is getting better as regards quality, and is becoming more suitable to the English market. At the present time, however, it is not in the same class with the Canadian product, but it is pointed out that this immunity which we enjoy in the high grade lines may not last forever, as improvement takes place all along the line. At the present time Siberian butter offers the best value of any butter in the market for the bottom price.

Throughout the Eastern Townships there is a feeling that the make will not be as large as was anticipated. It is rather difficult to arrive at a reason, because when the factory men are asked they shrug their shoulders and do not advance any definite reason. Among the trade the same impression prevails, and it is thought that the same conditions will prevail which we experienced last fall when there was not a sufficient production to supply home demands. Some people who profess to have made a more than casual investigation claim that the number of cows slaughtered last fall was larger than is generally thought. In view of a perspective shortage in the local market a few choice lots have been going into storage. If the price in England continues to go up there ought to be a chance for someone here who has the goods to deliver to make some money.

Receipts of butter for the week ending August 21 were 14,681 packages, as against 19,485 packages for the previous week, and 14,780 packages for the corresponding week of last year. The local market is steady, with finest creamery quoted at 23½c in round lots, and 24c to 24½c in a jobbing way. Exports of butter last week were 4,031 packages, as against 4,678 packages for the previous week, and 3,688 packages for the corresponding week of last year.

Toronto, August 26, 1908.

Conditions in the Canadian packing industry do not present features much different this week from those noted in last reports. The British market is reported a little more steady and the situation is a little more encouraging, with offerings of 52 and 53 shillings for Canadian bacon, but even at this there is not a great deal of encouragement for Canadian packers to ship over large quantities. The continued low basis of this market at this time of the year, when packers expect to do the best business, is very disappointing. At present, also, there seems to be no more encouragement in the outlook.

The only redeeming feature is continued good business at home. Demand continues active and shipments to various consuming points in the country have been quite heavy.

This business, of course, is not large enough to keep the factories running full capacity, but even at that they are not being offered any more hogs than requirements call for. Two factors account for this, one, the fact that the harvesting operations which still continue in Ontario, are keeping the farmers busy, and, again, the prices offered are not particularly tempting. The price is about 25 cents lower than was offered a week ago, $6.15 to $6.20 being the offering for general run in Toronto. The quality of hogs offering is fair.

Consumption seems to have fallen off materially in the United States, leading to complicated conditions, as is evidenced in the following summary from the New York Journal of Commerce:

"The past week has witnessed a considerable break in hog products owing to continued decrease in consumption, both home and export, and to lack of decrease in stocks, though receipts of hogs are still moderate. The packers have failed to support the market, and there has been a good deal of liquidation, said to be of outside longs, but as there are not many longs outside the packers it is believed that a good deal of it was for the packers themselves, in view of the improved prospects of the corn crop, which gives promise of a lower basis for hog products on the new crop. There is no question that packers are sorely disappointed over the continued lack of demand, which they have been promising the trade during the dull summer, but there are no prospects of improvement abroad or at home, as the public is not consuming as much salted meats as expected, as a result of the extremely high prices of fresh meats, and consumption of both is far below the normal, owing to hard times as well as high prices. It has been thought the past week that packers have been actually getting out of their stocks on hand, as they see little prospect of better prices during autumn, except in the South, for ribs on a big cotton crop. At any rate they have permitted the decline, though the bulls claim that they have allowed the weak outside longs to liquidate on as low a basis as possible before they came in to take their load off their hands. The supply of hogs has been larger than expected, as well as the demand for the product smaller, although still behind a year ago and lighter in weight."

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Locally the demand has been fairly good, and prices have been maintained. A weaker feeling has prevailed in the foreign markets for Canadian bacon, but so far this has not affected the local market price. Other lines are steady and unchanged in price.

PROVISIONS — Moderate demands and moderate supplies make the market somewhat easy this week. The usual summer lines are still selling well, but the others are a little on the quiet side. Long, clear bacon has gone up a half-cent a pound and lard has advanced a quarter-cent. There is a rumor abroad that beef and lamb prices will decline before a month's time, but pork lines are expected to remain firm at present quotations.

BUTTER—This line remains in price at last week's quotations and the butter market is very firm, due to conditions prevailing all summer. Packing for winter is being done by all buyers, large and small. Very little is put up for export, and the high prices of last winter should be impossible in the face of the amount that is now being put away for future use.

EGGS—Supplies are low, and very few eggs are arriving from the country. Those which are coming in are suffering from shrinkage. September will be here before any great quantities of eggs arrive, and it is to be hoped that a larger proportion of them will be good than has been the case this month. Eggs are now selling at 21c.

CHEESE—Quiet business is being done in cheese, and the old quotations remain unchanged. This line is showing a little more life than for some weeks past, but the cool weather will have to come before any noticeable change comes over the market.

Young ducks are an unknown quantity, and consequently show an easier price. The other lines remain unchanged in price.

THE HIGH-WATER MARK in Low-water Times

That's the record of

to August, 1908.

While other cereal concerns have cut down advertising and show a decreased business, Shredded Wheat is advertising more extensively than ever and shows an increase in sales of many thousand cases over the sales for corresponding month of 1907.

The reason? You know it if you know Shredded Wheat. No other cereal food can match it for strength-giving, body-building material, for economy, or for wide culinary uses.

No other grocer makes a larger profit on Shredded Wheat than YOU do—no "deals," no premiums, no "sugar," no bribes. The same old policy—A Square Deal for a Square Dealer.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour Continues Strong With Prospects of Much Higher Prices—Cereal Business Active and Encouraging.

Following the forecast of an increase in oat products last week comes a warning this week of the likelihood of much higher flour prices this fall and winter. John Washburn, vice-president of the Washburn-Crosby Milling Co., one of the largest milling firms in the United States, said the other day: "From the present indications it is safe to believe that the general range of quotations on all grades of flour will run higher than even last year, which, it will be remembered, was an unusual year on account of prices. It is generally expected now in the east, as well as in the west, by flour merchants, that the price of flour will be lower this year. I am prone to believe that they will be disappointed and that these parties will be obliged to pay more for flour this coming fall than they paid last."

Local millers verify this view to some extent, though rather more conservatively. Taking everything into consideration, however, it seems safe to say that there will be considerable increase over present prices. Whether they will go above last winter's prices is a question which cannot be answered at present.

Business in cereals continues exceedingly good for the summer season, and prospects for a good winter's business are bright.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Wheat prices have had a little flurry, but this has not affected flour quotations. The demand during the week has been more brisk, but continues to be for small lots. This condition is due to the speculatian as to the volume of new crop and its effect on prices, therefore, buyers are waiting to satisfy their curiosity. Prices remain the same as were quoted last week.

ABUNDANT FRUIT CROP IN ESSEX

Peach Yield Enormous and is Bringing Big Returns—The District Developing.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Chatham, Aug. 25.—All reports indicate that this year's fruit crop in Essex and Southern Kent will be one of the greatest in the history of that section. This is especially true of the peach crop. The yield this year promises to be enormous, orchards being simply overloaded with the fruit. Farmers who failed to replant after the disastrous frost of a couple of years ago are now wishing they had done so. The big returns which are promised this year will probably lead to an increase in the fruit acreage in Essex next year, and particularly in the acreage devoted to peaches.

The returns from a comparatively small peach farm are apt to strike the ordinary cereal farmer as enormous. For instance, last year one grower refused $11,000 for his peaches as they were on the trees; and, picking and handling them himself, netted in the neighborhood of $13,000. And last year was not a peach year by any means.

Much is being done in this section in the direction of better handling of the fruit. The Chatham Fruit Growers' Association, for instance, is an association of growers who are co-operating for the purpose of getting into touch with newer and better markets, and particularly with the Northwest. Leamington growers are also alive to the possibilities along the same line. A visit to "Fraser's" the other day is educative, as giving an insight into the extent of the fruit output of Leamington and vicinity, and the handling of it. "Fraser's," be it known, is a fruit station on the new W. E. & L S. electric line, just outside Leamington. Though the only building is a neat little warehouse put up by the railway to accommodate the Erie Fruit Co., Fraser's is nevertheless a lively place. Here, anywhere between 200 and 500 crates of melons are put up and shipped every day, while some days as many as a thousand baskets of tomatoes are despatched. Winnipeg, Montreal, Collingwood, Guelph London and Orillia, are only a few of the destinations. From the platform one can see in all directions the fruitful fields which are being ravished, and in the distance is the glistening lake. Wm. Hilborn and Geo. Ross supervise the shipping at this point. Besides tomatoes and melons, green peppers are being largely shipped. Earlier in the season early vegetables and early fruits were handled, and now peaches are in season, together with a long series of later fruits. And Fraser's, on the electric line, is only one of many similar stations, on electric or steam roads. which are sending out Essex fruit to all parts of Canada.

THE MANUFACTURE OF CONDENSED MILK

A Grocer Representative Pays a Visit to a Modern Factory and Describes the Processes in the Condensing of Milk and Cream — Cleanliness Very Evident.

Considerable interest is being displayed at present in the condensed milk business, which is becoming one of Canada's important manufacturing industries, and this, too, within the space of a year. Since this time last year no less than four factories have been erected in Eastern Canada. The most recent of these is that of the Canadian Condensing Company, Ltd., at Chesterville, and on the invitation of the management a representative of The Grocer went through it last week, knowing that a few words on how condensed milk and evaporated cream are made would be of especial interest to the trade at the moment.

The factory of the new concern is a most modern one, the ground floor being of solid concrete, and the walls and ceilings of the whole building of metallic composition, enamelled. The space at the disposal of the manufacturers amount to 8,800 feet.

Every morning farmers from all around Chesterville, which is one of the best-known dairying districts in Canada, bring in their milk to the plant, which has a capacity for turning out 20,000 pounds of condensed milk a day. All milk must be in by seven o'clock in the morning, when operations begin.

How Milk is Received.

An elevated driveway makes it possible for the farmers to deliver the milk on the first floor above the ground, where it is received in what is known as the receiving vat, which will comfortably hold 1,200 gallons. Thence the milk is conducted into two copper kettles, each of which holds 250 gallons. The milk is first treated here before going to the condensing pan, being heated.

The next step is the drawing of the milk into what is called the vacuum pan, an invention which is rather puzzling to a layman.

The object of this pan is to boil the milk without scorching it. As is well known, water will boil much more quickly in a vacuum than in a receptacle in which the liquid is exposed to the air. So with milk.

If the factory is running on condensed milk, sugar is added at this stage, which gives the milk its keeping qualities. In the case of cream, however, absolutely nothing is added to it, and nothing taken away, the milk being simply condensed through the action of the processes through which it passes.

Following the manufacture of evaporated cream, the next move is the removal of the milk from the vacuum pan, whence it is conducted, through pipes, to 100-lb. cans on the floor below. These cans are capped and placed in a rotating tank, known as a cooler. Water is then allowed to pass uninterruptedly by the outside of the cans, which are kept revolving by mechanical action. After a certain period, when the milk is quite cool, it is sent upstairs to the canning room. Here the cans are automatically filled, and here also was noticed something of unusual interest.

A Solderless Can.

This feature is a recently introduced sanitary can, the top of which is not soldered, but clamped. It has been found that the clamped top gives much better satisfaction, to consumer and manufacturer alike, and it is being adopted by many firms. This can is sanitarily treated, and the non-use of solder does away with the possibility of scorching or burning the milk or cream when the cans are being capped.

The cream is next placed, in twenty-eight case lots, after each tin of the 1,344 which are comprised in a 28-case lot has been capped, in the sterilizing machine, where the lot is subjected to steam heating in an absolutely steam proof vat or tank, or oven, which describes it better, for a certain period being kept all the time at a uniform temperature.

Then the oven is flooded with water, which, however, cannot get into the cans because they are capped, and this water, being quite cold, quickly cools the cream. The sterilizing process gives the evaporated cream the necessary keeping qualities.

This is the last step in the manufacture of the cream, expect that it is put into a "shaker," when it is cased and ready to be stored, in order to ensure there not being any coagulation, which might take place were not this step taken as a precaution. The cans are labelled in the usual way, and then packed four dozen to the case, when they are ready for thirty days' storage, after which the cream is ready for shipment.

In making the condensed milk, after passing through the vacuum pan, it is put through the cooler and then goes to the canning room, and it is then labelled, and in due course is ready for shipment.

One thing strikes a person on going through such a factory as that of the Canadian Condensing Company, Ltd., and that is the absolute cleanliness which reigns supreme. This, of course, is necessary. The cans in which the farmers bring in the milk are all cleaned and sterilized before they are returned to them.

The company mentioned in the foregoing has just completed the digging of an artesian well 826 feet deep, while they have a surface well over 200 feet deep. These give them all the water they require for the cooling processes necessary in the making of the milk and cream.

To be prepared for emergencies this plant is in possession of a complete butter-making outfit, so that the milk could be used for butter should it be impossible at any time to use it in the manufacture of condensed milk or evaporated cream.

The officers of the Canadian Condensing Company, who will put out Imperial Brand Evaporated Cream and Royal Brand Condensed Milk, are: President, S. H. Ewing, Montreal; Vice-President, O. D. Casselman, Chesterville; Directors, A. H. Ewing, S. Carsley, F. Orr Lewis, J. C. Tory, Montreal; W. B. Lawson, Chesterville.

The John King Co., Fort William, has sold its retail grocery business to Lalonde & Co.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Increasing Consumption of Canadian Melons—Native Grapes and Late Apples Appear Good—Cauliflower the New Vegetable Feature—Interest Opens in the Fish Markets.

Peaches and melons appear to me dividing the attention in the Western markets, and melons have all the interest in the East. A striking feature of the fruit market is the increasing hold melons are taking on the Canadian public. The public, too, is discriminating to some extent and are asking for the better qualities. Canadian rockyfords are quite as good as those imported from California or the Southern States, and may be grown in almost all sections of the country. They are very plentiful this year.

The better grades of Canadian peaches and plums are now being offered on the markets. Crawfords are going at a fair price for immediate consumption, but the St. John freestones are firmer, no doubt due to the fact that they will not be so plentiful as the other varieties. Pears are coming to the fore rapidly. Imported fruits are still ready sellers, but as they are of late growth, their season will soon be at an end. New apples are seen in sample lots only, and Canadian grapes are already being offered.

Celery of second growth in small quantities and late corn, are the only lines out of the ordinary showing among the vegetables. Some few cauliflowers are seen, and the other lines are much the same as last week.

Fish lines are very interesting just now, the sea varieties appearing to displace fresh water lines in the Ontario markets, and the Atlantic giving all the new features in comparison with the Pacific, which latter has been holding the interest for the month past. The oyster season is on, having opened this week, and other fall and winter lines have made their appearance. Smelts and pollock are new lines in the interior, and may be popular sellers, especially the latter, as the price is said to be right.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—There has been considerable activity in the fruit market during the past week. Prices have declined in many lines, owing to the advancement of the season. Canadian pears for preserving are being offered at 40c to 60c per basket. Canadian plums and peaches for the same purpose are being quoted at 50c to 75c. Montreal melons are lower, now being obtainable at $7 to $9 per basket. California peaches are slightly easier, but pears are, for the best grades, stronger, having advanced 25c. Other lines are unchanged in price.

FISH—Haddock and cod are in fair supply this week. Halibut is arriving somewhat slowly. Lake trout and whitefish are coming in slowly, but it is expected an improvement will take place after September 1. Brook trout, fresh pike and dore are still scarce, but these also will be in better supply after the first of September. Smoked and prepared lines remain dull. Boneless lines are showing a little more activity. Pickled and salted are very quiet. American lobsters are now offering, but the price asked is high. Oysters are slow.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Splendid business is being done this week, with plenty of supplies, especially of native fruit lines.

Prices are easier all round, with freer receipts of fruit. Standard peach lines are beginning to arrive and better Canadian plums and pears are offering. Niagara grapes are a new arrival, and are here in fairly large quantities. Late California fruit—peaches, pears and grapes—still hold their own, and being put up in fancy packages attract the attention of the prospective buyer. Native melons in enormous quantities are on the market this week, and, judging from the number of sales made, their consumption must be increasing at a pretty high rate. They are of first-class quality this season, and the prices asked are reasonable. Astrachan apples by the basket are fairly plentiful, and some few barrels (the first of the season), were shown on the market. The other lines—bananas, watermelons, oranges and lemons—are good sellers.

Second-growth celery, from nearby points and from New York State, is being offered, and cauliflower is a new line on the market. Green corn is still being offered, but the quality is hardly as high as during the past few weeks. Other lines at unchanged prices are fair sellers.

FISH—Increasing in interest is this market. New sea lines are arriving now and appear to be ousting our own fresh water fish, although the latter lines are hard to obtain, and, consequently, are not free in supply. Fresh haddock, cod, halibut and mackerel are now in, and new smelts from Bathurst, N.B., are a novelty. The first consignment of pollock for this season has come to Toronto. It is a fish somewhat similar to cod, though a little firmer in the flesh. Selling about four cents cheaper than cod, it is likely that quite a demand for pollock will arise during this season. The oyster season opened on Thursday, and dealers are anticipating good business ahead. With the exception of mackerel, which has advanced in price, all lines are at last week's quotations.

WANT DATE ON CANNED GOODS.

What they consider to be needed reforms in canned goods and other lines, in connection with the retail grocery trade, are promised by the Milwaukee Retail Grocers' Association. At a meeting of the organization last week it was declared that a movement should be put on foot by the association to secure a law requiring that the date of packing be stamped plainly on all canned goods, in the interests of the retailer and consumer. With such a law in force it is contended by the officers of the association that it would be next to impossible for concerns to palm off old stuff on the unsuspecting dealer.—New York Journal of Commerce.

ADVERTISE YOUR BUSINESS.

Make your advertisement different from its neighbors but let the difference be a reflection of the store itself and not a reproduction of its owner's eccentricities. There may be a wide difference between the individuality of the establishment and the personality of the merchant. The advertising should represent the business, not the man.

MANUFACTURERS OF ADVERTISING MATTER.

Many a dealer who is sure he ought to advertise his store more and better, but who is concerned over the question of expense, should realize that many aggressive manufacturers of widely advertised specialties and standard articles offer him excellent advertising in return for the slight effort of distributing it.

Some dealers who are not buying automobiles and who wonder how their competitors can buy them have under the counter or down cellar packages of expensive printed matter that would increase their sales if it reached the hands of the right people.

It is advertising matter of a good quality, much of it, full of force and selling arguments and well illustrated. If handled properly it would not only sell the article that it talks about but would bring people to the store who would not otherwise come.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information of Interest to Clerks and Grocers About the Goods They Are Handing Over the Counter.

The Value of Cocoa.

Cocoa is prepared from the cocoa bean, which is the seed of a tropical tree. About twenty-five beans go to a pod. The quantity of cocoa secured depends on three factors—the curing and roasting of the bean, and the blending of the cocoa nibs. The bean is cut out of the pod, and allowed to ferment for a day or two, while still wet. Planters who are most skilful in the process of fermentation, are the ones who produce the choicest beans, and get the highest prices for them.

The roasting process takes considerable skill, as the flavor of the cocoa depends very largely on the beans being roasted exactly right—neither too much nor too little, and uniformly. The third factor in high quality is the way in which beans from different localities and with different qualities are blended to make a harmonious and delicious cocoa.

Some manufacturers seem to disregard these factors of quality in a desire to produce their cocoa at a cheaper cost, but it pays to give the closest and most careful attention to the quality of the bean, the roasting and the blending. Another point on which the public need education in order to get the most out of the cocoa when they have bought it, is in the matter of cooking it. All starch needs cooking, and there is a certain amount of starch natural to the cocoa bean, as there is to most other vegetable products. Cocoa should therefore be boiled for about five minutes. This will be sufficient to cook the small quantity of starch in the cocoa, and will bring out the flavor to a degree surprising to those who heretofore prepared it by simply pouring boiling water over it, and have then considered it ready for the table. Such cooks waste a large part of the value of the cocoa. As we all know, milk and chocolate are good combinations, and of late years there has grown up an enormous demand for an eating chocolate, based on this combination. Milk chocolate is not only exceedingly palatable, but many times more nutritious than beef, eggs, or any other food, and it is no wonder that both for confectionery and to sustain sportsmen and others who must have nutritious food in small bulk, the sales of milk chocolate have grown to such proportions.

Cocoa and chocolate are the cheapest foods known in proportion to their nutritive value—a fact which the general public has so far failed to grasp.

Salt a Chinese Monopoly.

China, for a country that is just waking into real life, is a very rich country. The income to the government from salt alone is something like $9,000,000.

Salt in China is produced from salt wells and sea water by boiling and evaporation. The evaporated is granulated and is not considered of as good quality as that obtained by the process of boiling. The annual consumption of salt in China is estimated at 1,512,000 metric tons.

The salt tax is exclusively a government monopoly. All the salt produced must be sold either to the government or to licensed merchants, who purchase the right to supply certain areas of consumption. These merchants receive salt certificates, empowering them to buy and sell certain quantities of salt. The salt tax, as fixed in 1905, is 1 tael per picul (71.6 cents per 133 1-3 pounds).

The salt tax is considered one of the principal revenues of the Empire, and it is estimated that it amounts to 13,500,000 haikwan taels (about $9,000,000 per annum, to which, according to some authorities, should be added salt land tax, salt head tax, salt land rent, and the salt pan tax.

The retail price of salt varies in the different parts of the Empire, but averages from 25 to 60 cash per catty (1.6 to 3.8 cents per 1 1-3 pounds). The importation of salt into China is prohibited by treaty.

Valencia Raisins.

A very popular kind of raisins which derive their name from the Province in Spain where they grow.

They are cured by dipping the ripe bunches of grapes into a hot lye, prepared of wood ashes, oil and salt, and afterwards the raisins are finally dried in the sun.

There is a stoneless variety of these fruit, rather smaller in size, but no great quantity of these come to this country. —Grocery World.

CAME DAILY FOR OIL.

Chicago Boy Looted Cash Drawer While Grocer Went Into Basement—Is Sent to Workhouse.

The game that Anton Irman worked upon Grocer John Schramek, 922 Thirty-fifth street, was worthy of a better cause. For some time past Irman, who came from Chicago, provided himself with spending money by calling daily almost at Schramek's store with a kerosene can, having the grocer go into the basement where he kept the oil to fill the can, and meanwhile helping himself to the contents of the cash drawer.

This happened so often that Schramek began to believe that the place was bewitched, never suspecting the smooth Chicago boy. He appealed to the police and Detectives Seehawer and O'Gorman were given the case. They examined the premises, and suspecting Irman because of his daily visits for oil, gave the grocer instructions about the thief's capture.

The next time Irman called, Mrs. Schramek locked the front door from outside while her husband went into the basement. The police officers were then called and found Irman with several clearing-house checks which he had taken from the drawer. It is a peculiar fact that he never took cash, but clearing house checks. On a charge of vagrancy Irman was sent to the workhouse for ninety days.

When the Fall Rush Begins

you will need every convenience that will increase the efficiency of your business organization—every device that will eliminate unnecessary work, reduce liability to error, cut out friction and lost motion, everything that will make the wheels run smoother. In a word you will need the

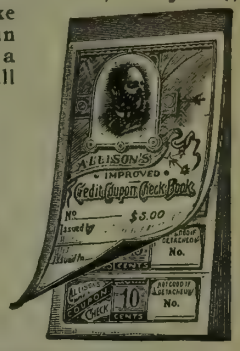
and the time to install it is NOW, before another day has been lost.



Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

"IT IS IN THE AIR"

How often one hears that phrase applied to some condition of the public mind! A good many things get into the air, thus wasting the best parts of the originals. You may take the finest Tea in the world, for instance, handle it loosely and carelessly, leaving it open to the light of day and the dust and much of its fragrance and rich flavor disappears, while impurities creep in. In

we have a "sealed book," an air-tight guard against all foreign substances, while the captivating flavors are retained—imprisoned for the consumer.

WOOD'S Packages are all TEA—the purest and the best.

KOPS' ALE

NON-ALCOHOLIC

Last season was our introductory period in Canada and KOPS' ALE was well taken up by both trade and public.

This year will witness a great demand for this wholesome beverage and we are shipping to supply early orders.

KOPS' ALE is pure English brewed ale, made from finest Kentish hops and malt, containing all the tonic properties of alcoholic beer without the undesirable after-effects. It is a money-maker in prohibition towns, as well as in unrestricted places.

Make yourselves familiar with KOPS' ALE.

FOR about two centuries the entire coffee supply of the world was obtained from the province of Yemen, Southern Arabia, and exported from this old city under the justly celebrated name of Mocha Coffee. 875 A.D. up to 1690 A.D. this was the only source of supply, when Governor General Van Hoorne introduced the Coffee plant into Java, which still retains its pre-eminence as producing the best coffees in the world.

BRADSTREET'S

Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000. Offices Throughout the Civilized World
Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence invited.

Handle Canned Goods That Are Recognized Leaders.

A modern philosopher has discovered that "The more aims you have in life the less likely you are to hit anything." Concentration is one of the secrets of success. There is a wealth of wisdom in this for the merchant. Concentrate your efforts on selling well-known lines and you'll be ahead at the end of the year. Don't load your shelves with a dozen brands of uncertain Canned Goods and keep your customers forever experimenting.

Canadian Canners' Peas Have Created A Big Trade for us

And they will do the same for you. We particularly recommend our Grade No. 2 SWEET WRINKLE PEAS. They are deliciously sweet and tender, and rapidly win new friends wherever introduced. They have a constant and ready sale all the year round. They are genuine business builders and can be sold at a good margin of profit.

Our Peas are packed in four grades as follows:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

Canadian Grocers Making Merry

Vancouver Grocers' Outing

Annual Picnic to Bowen Island a Jolly Affair—Something About the Officers of the Association.

The annual picnic of the retail grocers of Vancouver, which took place on Thursday, August 13, was a very jolly and successful event. It was held at Bowen Island, about six miles from the city, an ideal spot, and the steamers Belcara and Britannia were kept busy all day. Nearly all the grocery stores were closed, and with excellent weather a thorough holiday was enjoyed. Refreshments were served in plenty on picnic tables, and the capable committee saw that everyone present was well provided for.

The programme of sports was lengthy and gave opportunity for competition to everyone, young and old. And everyone took part with enthusiasm, and the general off-hand spirit contributed in a great measure to the pleasure of the occasion. After the baseball game between the retailers and the wholesale travelers, when the former were victorious, it was remarkable the extra number of grocers on the field. No one had the courage to own up to being a traveler, and many went so far as to secrete their U.C.T. badges so that there would be no visible means of identification.

THE VANCOUVER GROCERS AT BOWEN ISLAND.

The Clerks' Ball Game.

There were several entries for the marriageable young ladies' race, but when Luther McTaggart announced through the megaphone that Frank Wright and Treasurer Hunter were among the unmarried, several more entries were made immediately. Frank Wright took a position of vantage half way down the course, and even though a couple of the young ladies fell right close to him, tripping over grass blades and shadows, they were not blamed. Mr. Hunter, at the end of the course, handed out the prizes, and looked as if he thoroughly enjoyed seeing the young ladies blush. When the announcer gave out that the secretary was also in the unmarried class, there was a streak for the landing, but as there was no boat he could not escape. When captured, he acknowledged the soft impeachment.

Without doubt the pie-eating contest was the funniest thing going. A blueberry pie was given to each contestant, and they were blueberry boys before they got through.

Mr. Scott, the popular Davie Street grocer, was induced to enter in the fat men's race. He ran seven steps and then entered a protest. He acknowledges with downcast eyes that he weighs 270 pounds, and thought he should have a handicap in accordance with his weight.

Fun in the Races.

In the ball game between the clerks and the proprietors, the former had an opportunity of showing the bosses that while they might know something about running a store, they knew little about the most popular pastime of the day. Maybe they did not rub it in!

Too much praise cannot be given to the committee for the smooth way in which the programme was run off and the rapid time it was done in. Neither was there an accident in any way. Special mention might be made of F. Welsh, F. McDowell. Frank Wright, W. H. Walsh, E. Pooke and T. J. Hunter, Other members of the committee were W. J. Andrews, L. McTaggart. A. O. McColl G. Hobson, W. Clark, D. Laverock and W. J. C. Hunter.

London Grocers at Springbank

Celebrate Last Wednesday Half-holiday With a Merry Outing—Some of the Funny Events of the Day.

Great as was the success of the Retail Grocers' Association's banquet last winter, and of their excursion to Detroit a few weeks ago, both sink into insignificance when compared with their picnic at Springbank on Wednesday afternoon last. Close on five thousand people attended the outing and from start to finish the fun was fast and furious, not an idle minute being passed. The feature was the grocers' baseball game—North vs. South—for a trophy presented by the Lea Pickling Co., Simcoe. When darkness put a stop to play the Southsiders led by a score of 12 to 5. The game will be finished on Wednesday next. The line-up was: South—May, left field; Young, centre field; Janes, right field; Trebilcock; first base; N. McLeod, second base; O'Dell, third base; Vincent, short stop; Parker, pitcher; J. McLeod, catcher.

North—Luck, left field; Hayes, centre field; Bird, right field; Falkner, first base; Donohue, second base; Morgan, third base; Henderson, short stop; Boug, pitcher; Shaw, catcher.

A Record Baby Show.

There were forty-one entries in the baby show and none of them twins. The Judges—Wm. Turnbull, W. V. Corrigan and E. J. Eccleston—awarded the prizes as follows: First, Margaret Tarling; second, Clara Parker; third, Howard Pollick.

A melon-eating contest, in which 64 youngsters competed, created lots of fun. The winners were: First, Geo. Nichol; 2nd, W. O'Rourke; 3rd, J. Murray.

The pillow fight was another comical feature, the prize winners being E. Glen and E. Winder.

Ed. Ryan, the popular treasurer of the association, and Mrs. Cartledge were excruciatingly funny in the three-legged race, and although they did not come in first, they were awarded a special prize.

The Day's Prize Winners.

The winners of the other events were:

Boys' race, 100 yards—1 Morris Wolfe, 2 George Sweney, 3 Tom Brodison.

Girls' race, under 10—1 Winnie Trudell, 2 Clara Barned, 3 Margaret Hene.

Ladies' race—1 Miss McCormick, 2 Eva Falkner, 3 Mrs. Branton.

Salada Tea race, 100 yards—1 F Willis, 2 F. Parker, 3 J. Young, 4 F. W. Paul.

Girls' race, under 15, extra—1 Edna Routledge, 2 L. Bere, 3 Minnie Austin.

Grocery drivers' race—1 O. Falkner, 2 H. McDonald, 3 W. Putnam.

Red Rose Tea race, for ladies — 1 Mrs. Fenn, 2 Mrs. Webb, 3 Mrs. Branton.

Clerks' race—1 O. Falkner, 2 W. H. McGuffin, 3 E. Rogers.

Comfort Soap race, for ladies—1 Mrs. Shaw, 2 Mrs. Vincent, 3 Mrs. Traver, 4 Mrs. Morgan, 5 Mrs. H. English.

Throwing baseball, ladies—1 Miss Aggie McKeown, 2 Miss Mabel McKeown, 3 Mrs. Boxhall.

Flag race—1 O. Falkner, 2 L. Gooderham, 3 C. Hayes.

Grocers' race—1 G. Henderson, 2 T. Vincent, 3 G. Tupholme.

Ladies' and gentlemen's three-legged race—1 H. Osborne and Miss Dicker, 2 C. H. O'Brien and Miss McKeown, 3 J. May and Miss Hodgins.

Lady clerks' race—1 Miss L. Oldridge, 2 Miss Eva Falkner, 3 Miss Irene Clark.

T. J. HUNTER.
Treasurer Vancouver Association.

Travelers' race—1 W. B. Corigan, 2 J. H. Boyd, 3 C. Garvey.

Sack race—1 E. Winder, 2 W. R. Putnam, 3 T. Allsopp.

Boxing contest—1 Frank Nicholls, 2 E. Rogers, 3 W. McLeod.

Ed. Smith, dressed as a police officer, was awarded first prize for the best comic costume.

Some Helpful Travelers.

Among those who assisted materially to the success of the outing, acting as judges and otherwise making themselves useful, were Joe Boyd, of Red Rose Tea; H. B. Corrigan, of Lipton's; Clem Garvey, of John Garvey & Co.; McKinley Millman, of Elliott, Marr & Co.; Jno. Dillon, of A. M. Smith & Co.; Wm. Turnbull, of E. Adams & Co., and Walter Nichols, of Sunlight Soap, who, as manipulator of the megaphone, shouted himself hoarse before he could be prevailed upon to give up the duties of announcer.

Chatham Retail Merchants' Picnic

First Annual Outing at Erie Beach Last Thursday a Marked Success.

Pessimism among Chatham merchants has received half a dozen black eyes and a knock-out blow. Henceforth, they feel equal to tackling anything. For their first annual picnic, held on Thursday, August 27, was a howling success.

When a small gathering of retailers some six weeks ago, with sundry misgivings, decided to hold a picnic, not even the most sanguine of them dreamed that it would be the biggest outing of the year. Yet it most emphatically was. The outing brought to Erie Beach, Chatham's new summer resort on Lake Erie, the largest crowd it has ever known. Chatham, during the afternoon, was practically dead and deserted; while there was not a trolley car which left the city during the entire day southward bound which was not crowded to the limit with excursionists, literally "hanging on by their eyebrows."

The Grand Parade.

The big start was made at 1.30, following the grand parade up and down the business section of King Street. Edward James Dore, of Hamilton—better known as "Eddie"—led off in the parade. The Mayor, aldermen and fire department followed, after which marched the two broom ball teams, followed by the Kent Mills Band. The Rube Band also furnished music at times indescribably weird, and, though the personnel of the organization is, for obvious reasons, being kept a secret, it is hoped that some day the names will leak out, that the public may be able to fittingly reward the musicians for their fantastic rendering of "The Wearin' of the Green" and "How Dry I Am."

The parade was concluded by the clerks, fully 250 marching in line in white uniforms and caps. At the C. W. & L. E. powerhouse, where two cars and one trailer were waiting, there was a big rush, and even when the cars were filled to their uttermost limit, a big crowd was still left for the next car service.

There was a small mishap en route for Erie Beach. At a kink in the road just inside the city limits, the trailer abruptly left the track, and had to be abandoned in favor of another car. The bands livened the wait with appropriate music.

Though the crowd was consequently delayed, and did not reach Erie Beach till the afternoon was half over, Eddie Dore, Grand Mogul and High Muck-a-Muck of the affair, lost no time in getting down to business, and ran off the long list of sporting events in a style calculated to make local amateurs turn green with envy.

The Winning Grocers.

The new diamond at the Beach proved a good one, and a snappy baseball game between the grocers and a picked nine opened the afternoon. Johns, for the picked nine, pitched excellent ball, while Gemmill, for the grocers, was in the game every minute, handing out a bunch of curves and drops that puzzled the batsmen. The following was the line up: Picked Nine—Glassford, Perrott, Johns, Brackin, Kimmerly, Welch, Harper, McDonald, Taylor. Grocers—Wilson, Burnie, Dyer, Clements, Taylor, Gillies, Sterling, Gemmill, Head. The grocers won by a score of 3 to 2, in a five-inning game.

Then came the broom ball contest, between the grocers and the other merchants, which set the crowd wild. The players were all well known business men, and their antics in trying to shoot the football into goal with their brooms were intensely amusing. Once more victory perched on the grocery banner, the contest resulting in a score of 1 to 0. Here is the line up: Grocers—Parrott, Anderson, Andrew, Northwood, McQueen, Gerber, McCorvie and Jacques. Merchants — Wanless, Parrott, Ball. Lailey, Meynell, Brisco, Somerville and Hodges. The teams were captained respectively by President Wm. Anderson and Secretary H. G. Hodges, of the Retail Merchants' Association.

Then followed a big list of race events. Some thrilled with keen suspense, others overflowed with amusement. All were well contested, private betting among a number of dead game sports adding to the interest. The baby show was another interesting feature of the afternoon's programme.

The Afternoon's Contests.

The following summarizes these contests, with the winners, first, second and third:

Committeemen's race—Harry Northwood, H. G. Hodges, Wm. Anderson.

Girls' race—Bertha Larabee, Ruth McDonald, Edna Clements.

Boys' race—C. Rumble, H. Donovan, R. Glassford.

Young ladies' race—Maude Conibear, Flossie Thomas, Ida King.

Ladies' race, over 35—Mrs. Holdaway, Mrs. Longley, Mrs. Hay.

Baby show—Baby Hay, Baby Kennan, Baby Truax.

Shoe race—T. Taylor, F. Zink, H. Gillies.

Grocers' race—P. B. McQueen, Wm. Anderson, H. W. Jacques.

Men's race, over 40—J. O'Neill, Thos. Lailey, Geo. Holdaway.

Barbers' race—Chas. Mitchell, S. Lawrence, Thos. Higley.

Farmers' race—J. O'Neill, J. Webster, A. McMullen.

Consolation race—Mrs. Rigby, Mrs. Holdaway, Mrs. Morrison.

Open race, 100 yards—J. Webster, W. Eagan, O. Link.

Matched race, between Earl Kimmerly, Fred. Brisco and H. W. Jacques—Won by Fred. Brisco.

Clerks' race—W. Eagen, S. Parrott, H. Gillies.

Ladies' race, 75 yards—Mrs. W. Hay, Mrs. Rigby, Ada Longley.

Matched race, 100 yards—Webster, Eddie Dore.

Butchers' race—Duff, Mounteer, Harwood.

Guessing score of picked nine and grocer clerks' ball teams—Mrs. Joe. Walker, Mrs. H. Gowan, Miss E. McCubbin.

A. C. Trudell, John Glassford, Chief Pritchard and Wm. Potter judged the babies.

A Jolly Crowd.

With every newly arrived car the crowd grew, till the beach was one mass of jolly, sweltering humanity. Never in the history of Chatham had the merchants such an opportunity to get together, fraternize and enjoy themselves. Lots of amusing things were to be seen in addition to the sports. Earl Kimmerly, in his striking make up as a fair young Dutch widow, brought a host of admirers to his feet, while the rube band repeated the phenomenal hit they had made during the parade earlier in the day.

Most of the picnickers brought their lunches with them, and as evening drew on the beautiful grove just behind the pavilion was rapidly converted into a big lunch room. Tea, coffee and milk were furnished free, as long as they lasted.

Dancing in the Evening.

During the afternoon the Kent Mills Band, N. H. Stevens' recently adopted family of 16, filled the vicinity with a symphony of sweet sounds. In the evening Robinson's Orchestra struck up and added to the charm of the soft summer night. Straightway there was a rush for the dancing pavilion, and the floor remained crowded till the last note of the music died away. Gradually, as the hours wore on, the crowd thinned out somewhat; but many did not reach their homes till extremely late—or, rather, early.

Hardworking Merchants.

The merchants worked like Trojans to make this, their first picnic, a success. They succeeded beyond their wildest dreams. Eddie Dore lent invaluable aid, organizing the parade and running off the sports in a style which showed him an adept. In addition, the committee, comprising Wm. Anderson, Harry Northwood, T. Walter Poile, Ald. Harry Andrews, H. G. Hodges, Geo. W. Cowan, Wilfred McCorvie and A. D. Westman, with a large number of volunteers, did telling work. Credit is also due to Cecil Moore, Garnet Brackin, Earl Kimmerly and Fred. Sommerville, who organized the clerks. Prizes were generously contributed — more than enough, in fact, for the extra big list of sports.

It was a triumph. But—in the words of a well-remembered Canadian statesman, "Just wait till you see us next year."

Edward B. Goodacre, of Watt, Scott & Goodacre, Montreal, is holidaying at present.

The Hamilton Grocers' "Hump"

A Jolly and Unique Outing Crowded Full of Original Features Last Wednesday Afternoon.

The annual outing of the Hamilton grocers was held this year at Oaklands, the idea of having a good time by themselves was conceived by the regular picnic committee of the Grocers' Association, who labor so hard every year at Niagara Falls to furnish their customers and lady friends with the best picnic ever held in Canada, their labors being so arduous that there is really not much pleasure in it for themselves, and so they decided to have this special outing for a little jollification on their own account. In fact, it may be described as a great big stag party, no ladies being invited, and this year's trip was the greatest ever. Travelers, wholesale men and brokers accepted the invitation to a man, and when noses were counted there were about 200 in the party—and in saying they had a big time, is drawing it mild.

Some Notable Guests.

Among some of the notables present were: Mayor Stewart, Ald. Dickson, Ald. Sweeney, Commodore John Lennox, R. T. Steele and representatives from all the jobbing houses and factories who do business in the food line.

H. M. battleship the Merry Widow, in ordinary life, a stone hooker, was engaged and was crowded to the masthead with as jolly a lot of fellows as ever put out in a boat.

The Sports List.

A good list of games was run off, the first being a ball match between the grocers and travelers, which the grocers won by a score of 12 to 6. A pop race, shoe race, novelty race and a high pole vault were among the events. The latter was being contested keenly and a new record made, that daring athlete Merv. Summers, making a leap that astonished all the beholders. Geo. Hunt was the champion in the shoe race, and Geo. Cann took kindly to the pop in the pop race. But the man who took the cake for an all-round sport was Hamilton's only "Bay" Hill. There would be no Hump without "Bay." He was the life and soul of the party.

Refreshments Next.

After the sports were over the party returned to the battleship, where an ample supply of refreshments was prepared and handed out to them by the caterer, Jake Ellsworth. Following this the prizes, which were very valuable (?) were presented to the lucky ones by R. Tasker Steele, who, in his usual happy manner, kept the crowd in good humor until they felt like more refreshments.

The Trip Home.

Following this the ship stood off for the piers and on the way a grand display of fireworks was given, which was much enjoyed by the residents at the Beach. An excellent musical programme was placed in the hands of Prof. Zara, who had on board his Italian orchestra. Solos were sung by some of Hamilton's best singers, among others Capt. W. G. Reid, Wm. Smye, R. Tasker Steele, Wm. Hazell, Geo. Allan and B. Chrysler. The preamble to the invitation was very pressing and certainly proved an incentive to draw the boys to the wharf.

The following Brantford grocers were present and took part in the fun: Ald. J. M. Burns, Fred. Hand, Ed. Church, Clark Moore, Art. Coulbeck, Dick Gowman, A. W. Matthews, J. Kew.

The officers in charge were: Commodore, Jno. Forth; Vice-Commodore, W. Smye; Midshipmen, H. P. Boyd, J. M. Summers; Gunner, "Bay" Hill; Able-bodied Seamen, A. G. Bain, John O. Carpenter, Geo. Cann, J. Lampman, J. Main; Deck Hands, B. Chrysler, A. Lavis.

PETERBORO CORRESPONDENCE.

September 1.—Charles Rishor, wholesale grocer, Peterboro, issued a writ against John E. King, Lasswade, Hastings County, claiming $298 as the amount of his account against King. The latter was apparently in financial difficulties and decided to leave Lasswade for Western Canada and made an assignment. Mr. Rishor heard of his intended departure and the time of it, as well, and when King was passing through Peterboro on the C.P.R. excursion train for the West, he was met by Deputy Sheriff Hall and Police Officer Meharry, During the consultation which followed at the office of the plaintiff's solicitors it was learned that King had made an assignment and his progress westward could therefore not be hindered. A settlement will likely be made.

J. S. Ferguson, who has been employed as bookkeeper for the firm of F. J. R. MacPherson & Co., plumbing contractors, and stove dealers, has purchased the grocery business belonging to W. C. Tully, corner of Murray and Aylmer Streets. Mr. Ferguson intends carrying a full line of groceries, confectionery, cooked meats and school supplies. He took possession last Monday.

Mrs. McCabe, grocer, who has for many years kept a grocery store on Lansdowne Street, has erected a handsome new brick dwelling and store combined on the corner of Lansdowne and Lock Streets.

Mr. McNichol, traveler for Minto Bros., of 'Melagama" Tea, has just returned from spending a very enjoyable holiday quietly in the country.

T. Wheeler Jones, late assistant teaman in Kearley & Tong's Colombo (Ceylon) salesroom, sailed for Canada on the Philadelphian on August 16th, from Southampton, Eng.

IS NOW GEO. E. BRISTOL & CO.

Old Hamilton Wholesale Firm Takes New Name.

The firm name of the old wholesale house, Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, is no more. Geo. E. Bristol & Co. is the new cognomen, and the change recently made involves some interesting history.

Geo. E. Bristol, the head of the present firm, entered the wholesale grocery house of Lucas, Park & Co., Hamilton, in 1871. His enterprise and business ability made a marked impression and in 1881 he was taken in as a partner. On the first of January, 1893, Mr. Park retired and the firm became Lucas, Steele & Bristol. In 1906 Mr. Lucas and Mr. Steele retired and the business came altogether under Mr. Bristol's management, though the old firm name was retained.

The business has gone on prospering under Mr. Bristol's management, and the old name until the present, when, it was felt that it would be advisable to bring the name more into conformity with the feature of Mr. Bristol's personal ownership, and the name has been changed to Geo. E. Bristol & Co. The same staff of ten travellers, a number of whom have been with the firm for over 25 years, remain, as does also the office staff, with the managers of the sample room and office.

Geo. E. Bristol's experience in the business and his connection with Hamilton trade interests as well as his activity and aggressiveness along modern lines have made him one of Hamilton's most prominent citizens. In social, athletic and fraternal affairs he has always taken an active interest. He is a Past President of the City Board of Trade, a member of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club, and of the Hamilton and Thistle clubs, and also of the Toronto Club. He is a member of the Church of England Synod.

Mr. Bristol is a thorough grocer and has been a figure of importance in all matters pertaining to wholesale grocery interests in Canada for many years. The Grocer tenders its best wishes for a continuance of success under the new name.

NO FRENCH SARDINES.

Fishing Season Has Proved an Entire Disappointment.

Henri Jonas, who has just returned to Montreal from a business trip to Europe, states that the pack of French sardines this year will be nil, as the fish have not run at points where they are usually looked for by fishermen. Many of the factories have large orders on their books which they will be obliged to cancel, as the fishing season has proved a disappointment right through. In Portugal the run of fish has been somewhat better, and the pack there will be more satisfactory, especially since the season does not finish until October 31, which gives packers in Portugal a month longer to operate than the French houses have.

Smaller sizes of French prunes will be more plentiful and cheaper, prospects being for a very large crop. The larger fruit, however, will not be so plentiful and in consequence of the scarcity, quotations will be firmer.

Mushrooms are reported very scarce still.

Macaroni manufacturers are bemoaning the scarcity of Russian wheat.

FIRE IN MONTREAL WAREHOUSE.

Gunn, Langlois & Co. Suffer $50,000 Loss on Monday Evening.

A nasty fire which might have done damage to the extent of half a million dollars broke out Monday evening at 6.10 in the fifth storey of one of the cold storage warehouses of Gunn, Langlois & Co., produce merchants, St. Vincent and St. Paul Streets, Montreal. Coolness displayed by John A. Gunn, head of the business, and his staff, resulted in the loss being kept down to about $50,000. Of this $20,000 was done to the building, while stock suffered to the extent of another $30,000.

It was in one of their large cold storage warehouses that the fire broke out, and starting on the fifth storey it was rather difficult for the firemen to get at the flames. Once they were reached, however, they were soon under control, and the chief damage was done through the water, which flowed down through the five storeys of the building.

Fireproof walls and doors prevented the spread of the fire to the adjoining warehouses, which were heavily stocked with butter, cheese, eggs and other provisions. Had the stock and machinery in the St. Vincent Street warehouse been reached fully $500,000 would have been lost.

Insurance fully covers the loss.

TOBACCO BUSINESS CONTINUES GOOD.

Despite the financial depression reports are heard with gratifying frequency of greater business having been done in some lines than ever before. The tobacco business, especially, has been comparatively free from depression and this is very amply evidenced by the statement of Joseph Cote, Quebec, who claims that his tobacco business has increased in greater proportion this year than any other year in the history of the company. This firm is extending business in the line of pipes, having in stock a large variety of imported and domestic. They are also showing one of the greatest ranges of imported and domestic cigars and cigarettes of any firm doing business in Canada. Such admirable conditions may be in a measure due to the character of the goods, the sale of which generally has not fallen off much, as stated before, but it also speaks well for the progressive methods of the firm.

HANDLING AUSTRALIAN STOCK FOODS.

A new concern, S. K. & T. C. Windsor, with headquarters in Australia, and offices in New Zealand and England, have opened a branch at the corner of St. Vincent and St. Paul Streets, Montreal. This company puts up Oxol cattle foods, etc., Australian preparations for horses, cattle, sheep and swine. The firm has advertised very largely in the southern hemisphere, and, to aid the dealers, intend to give their goods equal publicity in Canada.

J. S. Ferguson, lately employed by F. J. R. MacPherson, Peterboro, has purchased the grocery business managed by W. C. Tully in that city.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Vegetables—Declined.
Fruits—Declined.
Sugar—Decl ned 10c.
Cheese—Declined.
Fish—Advanced.

Montreal, Sept. 3, 1908.

Business during the week has been good, in consequence many lines having declined, and lower prices quoted creating interest among buyers. Among the declines, the chief is sugar, which failed to answer to the bullish operations of some of the New York manipulators and they have been forced to accept lower prices or go without any business. Locally, however, there has been considerable activity in this market. The price is 10c lower. Vegetables and fruits have declined, which may be expected at this time of the year, as the native products are arriving in free supply now. Fish has advanced slightly, owing to supplies arriving less freely. Quality, however, of the fish arriving is above the usual. Teas have been rather dull during the week. Beans have not been in as good demand and have commenced to weaken in price. A local dealer said he regarded this as a fair augury of returning good times, because beans were largely consumed by poor people when they could not buy more expensive food. However, the introduction of foreign beans has relieved the situation, as these are arriving freely. Wholesale grocers report a good week's business, and this especially so in the country, where the grocers are apparently coming out of the trade lethargy which has prevailed for some time.

SUGAR—Last week the New York refiners tried to stimulate the market by reducing prices 10c all around, and their example was immediately followed by the Canadian refiners, who are now quoting 10c less than the prices of the previous week. The raw market, in view of the prospective shortage, should have been maintained if business had been brisk. This condition, however, did not materialize, therefore, the dealers in raws have had to offer better prices to attract trade. This has been an extraordinary year in many respects, with many apparent disruptions of economic laws. It was thought that with the shortage prices would rule high, but this assumption was based on the belief that the quantity consumed, or at least required, would be as great as ever. This anticipated condition, however, did not follow, as people are practising economy in the matter of sugar, as well as everything else, so the refiners and raw sugar dealers find their comparatively small stocks more than ample for their needs and more than equal to the demand.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Trading in Barbadoes molasses during the week has been confined to small lots of grocers' grades, and the total has been somewhat small. This condition is in harmony with the small stocks which are held. The demand up to the present time has been good, and until the last week it looked as though the supplies would be totally inadequate and even with much smaller buying the supply, it is probable, will be short, and an advance may yet come. Syrups, likewise, were in small demand during the week. Prices are unchanged.

TEA—Locally there is no change in the Japan tea market, and transactions are more than ever of the hand-to-mouth character. The home market is reported quiet, with a slight tendency to weakness on third crop low grades, owing to poor quality. Ceylons, Pekoes and Pekoe Souchongs are in good demand. Ceylon greens are also more active this week. Other lines are neglected. Prices have not changed since our last quotations.

There has been a good demand during the week, and one large wholesale house reports that this is especially so in the high grades. This market, however, has kept up wonderfully well during the entire season, so that additional business will mean an exceptionally good turnover.

DRIED FRUITS—This market is in a very unsettled state and the California market is not receiving so much attention, owing to the fact that buyers are displaying much interest in the European markets, which, from all reports, seem to be in a position to supply wants at advantageous prices. In all probability a large proportion of the prunes consumed in this country this year will be of the Bisnia variety. This source of production has on several previous occasions relieved the situation when there has been a shortage in American production. This year the production in the United States will be only sufficient to supply home requirements. Some contend that the Bosnia prune is as good as the California product, while others say it is inferior. The chief point of superiority in the American product is the excellence of the packing, which certainly so far has been unexcelled.

Watt, Scott & Goodacre, in their weekly market report say on Sept. 1: "Currants—Quality of the crop so far housed is good, and quantity, after providing for increased retention, will be about the same as in 1907, which was sufficient for all purposes. There will be little opportunity for speculation, as quotations are protected from receding by the purchase price of the Chartered Co., and from advancing by the fact that the crop is, as above, a fair average one. Valencia Raisins—Earlier in the season the crop gave promise of being much larger than will now actually result. Dry weather set in and curtailed the quantity, also affecting the size of the grapes. The future trend of the market will depend on the demand, an axiom, but, in view of general business conditions this year, demand is more than ever an uncertain quantity. While not looking for much lower prices than present speculative offers, we believe that early requirements should be covered, but that business should be confined to such. Malaga Raisins are offered on about the same basis as last year. Sultana Raisins—We think crop warrants lower prices, and can only recommend present covering for early shipments."

BEANS—This market is subsiding into a less active state than a month or six weeks ago when there was considerable stringency. At present the demand is somewhat limited. The minimum price of Ontario primes is now $2, instead of $2.10, as at our last quotations. The highest grades are still held at $2.15.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—A large importing house made the following statement regarding the situation in tapioca; "Tapioca has rather suffered from the general trade depression this summer, and the buying has only been from hand-to-mouth. Stocks on the spot are small and nobody has been inclined to order to arrive. Advices from the east inform us that for the past half-year shipments feom Singapore and Penang are short of last year by 700 tons, notwithstanding which stocks here are small, which makes holders firm." Tapioca locally is very slow, and there is little demand for it. This fact is the result of the depression, because it is not an essential article of diet, therefore it suffers with all other luxuries in hard times. Locally rice continues strong, with a fair demand.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Tuesday the new pack prices of vegetables and fruits went into force, and this resulted in a brisk demand, as the prices are lower than last year's quotations. There is an active inquiry for canned salmon. American meats are neglected, while Canadian products are in good demand.

TORONTO—Demand for fruits and vegetables is fairly active, and the coming into force of the 1908 pack prices on Sept. 1 is expected to stimulate this. Salmon and meats are reported slow.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, September 3, 1908.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Firmer.

Teas—Stronger.

Canned Goods—New prices in effect on fruits and vegetables.

Reports from wholesalers seem to indicate this business is picking up a little this week. September, the beginning of the Fall season, is ordinarily a good month and ought to be this year. The farmers, too, are getting through with their harvesting operations and should be beginning to buy pretty freely. All this should prove an incentive to better business.

The interest of the markets has been centred during the week on sugar and canned goods. Sugar has been going out a good deal more freely since last week's decline and with the usual large September demand this business should continue good. Other markets are steady though there is a general firm feeling throughout staple lines.

SUGAR—The market in raws is rapidly assuming a firmer tone after the sagging condition of the past couple of weeks. The following paragraph from Willett & Gray's report gives a summary of the situation as it stood at the beginning of the week:

"The decline has extended further than was generally anticipated, and an opinion, based on the experience of many years, would be that prices should be not very far from the bottom, particularly as new crop beet sugars are now quoted near the cost of production, where there will be strong resistance to further decline. But the future depends upon the amount of pressure exerted by holders. All cane sugars in sight will be needed before the new Cuba crop is available in quantity and present prices can only be maintained by refraining from forcing sugars upon refiners, already well supplied, until needed."

Since the above was written the situation in raws has firmed up materially. So much so that an advance of 10 points was made in refined in New York on Wednesday. From every quarter come reports of anticipations of good demand during the present month, and, taking all features into consideration, an advance in Canadian refined within a short time would not be surprising.

Present quotations are as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES — Little interest is displayed in these goods and present prices are steady. Reports from primary markets note the certainty of higher prices during the Winter.

TEA—Dealers report rather better business the past week than for some time past, a condition which they heartily welcome. Locally the markets are fairly steady, though cables during the week noted some strengthening on the better grades of Ceylons.

Thompson Bros.' weekly circular, dated August 20, says regarding the general situation at that date:

"Although the total offerings of tea from all sources have only reached 63,309 packages, as compared with 67,937 packages in 1907 and 70,441 packages in 1906, about the normal supply for the time of year, importers of low-priced tea have had a most difficult market to contend with, and to make sales have been obliged to submit to a decline of fully ½d. to ¾d. per pound on all common liquoring teas, irrespective of grade. Medium and ordinary qualities have also suffered to some extent, but on the other hand good and fine of every class have been freely competed for and closed firm at the best."

COFFEE—Local business continues good, with prices unchanged.

DRIED FRUITS—Little business is passing and until the new arrivals in three or four weeks' time, little interest will be displayed. Prices are unchanged.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Business is rather quiet, with no features of interest to report.

SUGAR CO. IN RECEIVER'S HANDS

The Toronto dailies of last Wednesday contained an item to the effect that the Ontario Sugar Co., of Berlin, had been placed in the hands of a receiver. The item noted that the appointment was made on the application of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation, who hold a mortgage on the property, executed on February 2, 1903. The Bank of Nova Scotia is said to be one of the principal bondholders of the Ontario Sugar Co.

Those knowing the facts of the case state that the matter arose as the result of an application for a winding-up order by parties interested in the business. This is said to have been forestalled by another party with friendly motives.

The application came before Judge Latchford on Friday, Aug. 28, and was referred to Justice Falconbridge to be heard on the 15th inst.

Those who know seem to be of the opinion that the proceedings will not go much farther.

The Kent Farmers' Produce Company held their annual meeting at Blenheim, on Saturday, shareholders being represented in goodly numbers. Following the re-organization last Fall, the concern, which handles beans and other produce very extensively, has had a very successful year. The directors of the past year were re-appointed.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kin of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look-out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

The Uses of Chemical Preservatives

Addresses by Leading United States Canners at the Recent Food Experts' Con vention at Mackinac Island—Say Preservatives Not Necessary and Hint How to Eliminate Them and Obviate Increased Costs.

At the recent conference of food experts of the United States at Mackinac Island, Michigan, referred to in The Grocer some weeks ago, there were those who spoke in favor of the limited use of chemical preservatives. But a paper by Sebastian Mueller, second vice-president of the H. J. Heinz Co., of Pietsburg, declaring chemical preservatives unnecessary, attracted wide attention because of its radical character. The fact that the matters treated in the address are of particular interest to Canadian canners and to the trade generally justify its reproduction. Mr. Mueller's paper, in part, was as follows:

"Before the passage of the National Food and Drugs Act, when the bill was under consideration in the hands of Congressional committees and manufacturers were being heard upon the subject of artificial preservatives, the general claim was advanced that tomato ketchup made in the usual way could be preserved against fermentation with one-tenth of 1 per cent. benzoate of soda.

"That such a position is untenable and incapable of support may, I think, be very easily demonstrated by an investigation of the ordinary practices in vogue to-day among ketchup makers who depend upon other than so-called natural preserving agents for the protection of their products. In fact it has been demonstrated through various court proceedings in the State of Pennsylvania that certain leading brands of ketchup, labeled as containin~ one-tenth of 1 per cent. benzoate of soda. contained two and sometimes three times the quantity stated on the label.

Quantity of Preservative Needed.

"Now, all men of practical experience in the preserving industry know, or should know by this time, that ketchup made with the usual thin body and low solids will not keep after being opened if only one-tenth of 1 per cent. of benzoate of soda has been added, regardless of whether the ketchup has been made from canner's pulp or from ripe tomatoes fresh from the field. It will not even keep while sealed in its container unless it has undergone a process of thorough sterilization. The quantity of benzoate of soda necessary to preserve such ketchup is nearer three-tenths than one-tenth of 1 per cent., a statement which I believe will be agreed to by any manufacturer of ketchup who may be here to-day, or by any manufacturer in the country if he will admit the actual facts based upon his practical experience.

"The fact that some ketchups can be found to-day—notably on restaurant and hotel tables—that bear benzoate labels and are in a state of fermentation may be taken as an evidence of the correctness of this contention. If the ordinary, artificially-preserved ketchup found in restaurants anh hotels keeps sound and sweet for several weeks under the conditions usually prevailin~ in such places, it will be safe to conclude that the quantity of benzoate used in it is greater than the prescribed regulations governing its use.

"Another point that I wish to touch upon is the question of increased cost through the elimination of preservatives, which it is claimed must result. To make tomato ketchup from whole, ripe fruit direct into bottles from the cooking kettles and other products in similar manner admittedly costs more than certain other materials and methods; but aside from this there has been no material advance in the cost of our own finished product other than is attributable to the scarcity and high cost of country labor, some crop shortage and the higher cost of factory labor, ingredients and packing materials.

Handling Pulp.

"Admitting that pulp made from canners' waste can be purchased for less than that made from sound, ripe, whole tomatoes, there is little advantage in carrying whole tomato pulp in barrels. Practically every ketchup manufacturer of consequence has his glass bottles into which the finished product is to be put all made and in readiness before the arrival of the tomato season, and it is neither an impossibility nor a great difficulty with ordinary facilities to bottle all the finished product while the season is on. The only additional investment necessary in advance is for labor and the cost of other constituent elements of the finished product; but even if it is desired to pulp the tomatoes and manufacture the ketchup later this can be done successfully without the aid of an artificial preservative. The pulp can be placed in lacquered cans of about five gallons capacity and sterilized, and by this method of handling it will keep in its natural state in excellent condition for a year or more, if it need be. In fact, it will keep just as well and remain as sweet as the regular canned tomatoes of commerce.

"To meet in advance any contention regarding the increased cost of this method, I wish to point out that through the continued rise in the price of cooperage during the past five years, spirit barrels, which are the only suitable wood containers for pulp, cannot be purchased and delivered at the factory for less than $1.75 each, on the average. Such a package after having been used for pulp one season, is really not fit for the same use a second time, and therefore deteriorates in value to about 75c, leaving the sum of $1 to represent the net cost of the wood package. The purchase price of a five-gallon can is 25c each delivered, making the necessary receptacles for 45 gallons of pulp cost, at the outset, $2.25; but these, if properly cared for, will last from two to three years. To deal with the matter broadly, we will assume that they will last only two years, making the actual cost per year $1.12½, against the cost of $1 for the wood packages, and the saving in freight on pulp shipped in tins as against wood, and the saving of the cost of preservatives will ordinarily fully make up for this difference and even more than make up when the distance is at all great.

Canned Pulp vs. Barreled.

"Besides this, the quality of the finished product is far superior in color and flavor when put up from canned pulp than when made from barreled pulp—not to mention the important advantage that canned pulp does not require an artificial preservative.

"The fact that all principal cook nooks include in their recipes for pickles alum to harden and preserve them led me, and no doubt has led many others, to regard it as a harmless substance. I held to this belief until in the fall of 1906, when Dr. Wiley informed me that it was even more injurious than any of the other well known preservatives. Experiments made in our own laboratory since that time have proven to us that alum is not only a powerful astringent, but also an anti-ferment equal to, if not greater, in its effects than benzoate of soda. We learn further that scientists generally consider its astringent properties as most serious and unite in saying that its use in all food products should be prohibited.

Using No Preservative.

"As a result of this information we decided to eliminate alum from our business, and on or about October, 1906, we finally discontinued its use, We naturally experienced some trouble at first, especially with sweet pickles, but this we soon overcame, as we did also with sour pickles; and we have been making both successfully in glass and bulk since the date mentioned. Incidentally it will be of interest to know in this connection that our bulk pickles, which represent nine-tenths of our total pack, seem to keep equally as well as the smaller sealed packages.

"It is particularly unfortunate that through the use of alum and other artificial preservatives false and erroneous standards have been set up for the consumer of condimental foods, who has come to regard the peculiar properties brought about by these agents as natural, and who must now, by a slow and laborious process, be educated to the true facts as they exist and to a recognition of a better and more wholesome standard—a work which must largely devolve upon the members of this association."

Mr. Mueller was seconded by L. S. Dow, also of the H. J. Heinz Co., who told in a paper of the "Successful Preservation of Condimental Foods Without the Aid of Chemicals." Mr. Dow said in part:

"Five years ago, when representatives of our company addressed you at St.

Paul, and again four years ago at St. Louis, we, in common with all manufacturers of condimental foods, regarded with some degree of doubt and uncertainty the practical outcome of the movement against artificial preservatives, which was then being initiated. We had at that time no information as to the injuriousness of sodium benzoate—there had been little information on this subject—and it was rather through our knowledge of the grave abuses permitted and made possible by its use that our sympathy and co-operation were at first enlisted in the movement to abolish it.

"When the effect of this substance upon the human system was pointed out by men of notable scientific attainment—men whose opinions we regarded as beyond question—our efforts were redoubled, with what result you all know. I need not at this time recount to you our success, which was made step to step until when we met with you a year ago, we were able to state that artificial preservatives—including alum in pickles—had been finally eliminated from the last one of our products, namely, bulk sweet pickles—this in the month of May immediately preceding that meeting.

"Thus we say that the last year has been less one of experimentation. It has been rather one of experience. Experience with a complete line of condimental foods, sauces and relishes, all pure in the strictest sense. A full year of experience with the heat and cold of changing seasons, of wide distribution at home and abroad—including the trying climatic conditions of tropical countries wherever civilization exists and the food of civilized man is known and consumed. A year of experience with the average grocer, who sometimes is less careful of his surroundings and of his merchandise than those engaged in the manufacture of perishable goods might wish. We are here to-day to tell you that this experience has been one of pronounced and unqualified success.

"It may be known to you that our goods are sold under the guaranty to the consumer of full purchase price refunded if, for any reason, they fail to please; a policy broad enough to bring home to us every cent of spoilage loss from every source, wherever it occurs, either at home or abroad, and under this sweeping guaranty our losses in all directions and on our entire product have stood during the past year practically without variation—amounting to less than one-quarter of 1 per cent.

"This is a success that has fully and finally established our confidence in the pure food theory as applied to all fruit and vegetable products, and it is our earnest hope that the experience which we come here to relate may serve to strengthen the confidence and the faith of the gentlemen of this association and to influence as well our still doubting and hesitating competitors.

No Excuse for Delay.

"We feel that the time has now passed for producers of condimental foods to plead for delay in the enforcement of the laws through fear of loss and business ruin. We hesitated to make the change at first, it is true. Our business was so vast and far-reaching, our responsibility was equally upon goods sold ten thousand miles away and upon those marketed near at hand. A mistake meant so much—not only in direct loss, but to the reputation that we have built up through many years of striving, that we naturally inclined to slow and careful procedure, but we feel that now the problem is solved, not only for ourselves, but for every interest concerned.

"We have demonstrated and we point to our product as indisputable evidence, that the question of condimental food purity is simply one of suitable materials, clean methods, the proper and sufficient use of natural preservatives, exactness in preparation and the application generally of reasonable skill in the preserving art. We are, furthermore, glad to know that the experience and accomplishment of our company alone need not be taken as evidence of the soundness of this theory. Other progressive manufacturers have accomplished like results—notably, with pure ketchup, which has so frequently and so confidently been classed as among the impossibilities—in fact, the chief impossibility.

No Secret Preservative.

"It would seem also that the time has arrived when we ought reasonably to expect a discontinuance of the misrepresentation that has been current during this evolution period. The statement has been freely circulated that we have discovered some powerful, secret preservative. We have, but it is not the kind our detractors would have you believe it to be. It is one that we have known for many years, but never learned its full efficacy until the time came to depend upon it wholly. It is a secret, moreover, that we are quite willing to impart for the benefit of all interested—namely, the best raw material available, the highest degree of cleanliness in people and utensils, and the highest degree of sanitation in plant and surroundings that we are able to attain. The claim that we use a secret chemical agent is too absurd to merit serious attention. As a matter of form, we will place ourselves on record here as denying it unqualifiedly and absolutely, and we submit that we could hardly risk our reputation and standing by coming before this body under false pretenses.

"It is stated that we can only use a very small bottle for ketchup. Our regular trade packages are 8-ounce, 12-ounce and 16-ounce—the last mentioned a full pint in capacity, which is the largest size in regular commercial demand of any of the numerous brands in the market.

"It is claimed that our ketchup does not keep—that it ferments in the stores and in the hands of consumers. There is still enough of our 1907 pack scattered about the stores in your home towns to enable you to fully convince yourselves of the truth or falsity of this assertion.

"Finally, it is claimed that we are not in the ketchup business anyway, that we make very little, and that, in consequence, our experience is of little value. During the period 1906-7 we made and marketed exactly 12,432,000 bottles, or 1,036,000 dozen, and not a drop of it contained artificial preservative. This may, of course, seem like an insignificant product to some of our friends, but, on the other hand, it may cause them to think twice before repeating the statement referred to. In giving you these figures, we make them public and our friends are welcome to any comfort they can find in them.

"We are not accustomed to quote statistics relating to our business, but during the period referred to we have also made and marketed without artificial preservative many millions of pounds of fruit butters, fruit preserves, wet mince meat and of sweet and sour pickles.

An Untrue Contention.

"One more point that we wish to make before passing is against the contention that great cost is involved in experimental work looking to the elimination of preservatives. The statement was made in the autumn of last year, before the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington, that several manufacturers had expended and lost as much as $10,000 each in their efforts to put up certain products without benzoate of soda. This does not accord with our experience, and it does not seem altogether reasonable. We can safely say that the cost of experimentation on our entire line and covering a period beginning as far back as ten years ago, has not amounted to $10,000—including all spoilage loss both on goods in our factory and in the hands of the trade, that have arisen in consequence of the experimentation—and in making this statement it should be taken into consideration that our business is possibly the largest of its kind.

"In this connection it may be noted that the preserving of food products is a comparatively recent industry in America, only having grown to its present proportions in the last few years, during which time it has attracted capital without corresponding experience. This lack of experience was not of great moment so long as errors resulting from loose or improper methods could be concealed by the use of a convenient chemical substance, but with the elimination of this, manufacturers of foodstuffs—like those engaged in other manufacturing pursuits—must study deeper into the foundations upon which their business is constructed. Successful food preparation of any kind must be scientific and exact, and so the preserving art requires education and skill, coupled with close and intelligent supervision in all its stages.

"Moreover, no preserving work should be attempted with improper raw material or in a germ laden atmosphere, amid unsanitary surroundings, with indifferently clean utensils, by careless workpeople."

MAPLE PRODUCTS IMPROVING.

A bulletin just issued from the laboratory of the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa furnishes an effectual answer to the cry that pure maple products can no longer be secured on Canadian markets. The bulletin shows not only that the greater part of such goods offered for sale are absolutely pure, but also that the percentage of pure goods is rapidly increasing during late years.

The department has analyzed samples of both maple syrup and maple sugar, 71 of each, which were taken indiscriminately from vendors in different parts of Canada. Out of the 71 samples of maple syrup, 62 were found to be genuine, 6 were adulterated, and 3 were declared compound. Of the samples of sugar, 62 were genuine, 8 were adulterated and 1 was considered doubtful.

A noteworthy increase in the percentage of genuine samples is shown in comparing, say, the last three years. A test of maple syrups in May, 1905, showed a percentage of 59 genuine; May, 1906, showed 52 per cent genuine, and May, 1907, 77 genuine, while the samples tested in May of this year, showed a percentage of 87 genuine.

The samples of maple sugar in May, 1905, showed a percentage of 83 genuine; in May, 1906, 85 per cent.; in May, 1907, 72 per cent., and this year 87 per cent. genuine.

The results of the tests, as indicated in the bulletin, are decidedly complimentary to the producers of maple goods in Canada, and should bring the industry into better regard by the public generally.

WHY NOT BETTER FRUIT JARS?

A letter from an Ontario subscriber, which appears on another page, draws attention to a matter which deserves attention. He points out the unsatisfactory quality of fruit jars which are supplied the Canadian trade, and inquires why manufacturers cannot improve these goods.

This is a matter which comes to the front every year at the preserving season, but inquiry among grocers elicits the fact that the jars this year seem to be even worse than usual. It is not an unusual thing to find two or even more jars in a dozen defective. Usually the trouble lies in the zinc top, which is ill-fitting, or in the glass thread on the top of the jar, which is also frequently defective. Again, sometimes the bottom drops out of a jar when it is lifted from the case. To cap all this the jars are badly packed, coming in such flimsy cases that it is scarcely safe to handle them with ordinary care.

The matter is causing a great deal of trouble to grocers all over the country, and it would seem that it would be in the interests of the manufacturers to improve their product.

NORWEGIAN LINE TO CANADA.

Lately Canada, and Montreal in particular, has received considerable free advertising, owing to the attitude of New York and other American Atlantic seaports regarding the capture by Montreal of the grain-carrying trade. While this discussion is proceeding, European shipping countries are seeking to improve their transportation relations with Canada. There is a well-founded rumor that the Cunard people, also the White Star Line, will be represented soon in Canadian waters. The Manchester Liners are improving their service between Canada and England, in view of enlarged business prospects. The Canadian Commissioner at Christiania, Norway, reports a new line in process of formation between Bergen and New York, which will greatly facilitate transportation matters between Canada and Norway. He says: "The new steamship company will be started with a share capital of 10,000,000 kroner, £550,000, at 200 kroner each. The line will open with two steamers of 8,000 to $10,000 tons, with a speed of 17 knots, covering the distance between Bergen and New York in eight days, and will be built for a combined passenger and goods traffic. The scheme, which is attracting general notice in the business world, is partly based upon the enlarged traffic conditions which are likely to result from the completion of the railway trunk line from Christiania to Bergen in 1910. There is reason to believe that Swedish capital also will be interested in the undertaking."

IMPORT TRADE BETTER.

The import trade at the port of Montreal has taken a turn for the better, and after falling behind each month the returns for last year, is showing signs of finishing the balance of the season at a favorable comparison with the same period of 1907. This improvement is especially important, when it is remembered that it does not represent the trade conditions of the city of Montreal alone. It represents practically the whole of the Dominion. What happens to the Dominion happens to the port, because the inward and outward trade through the port is such a large proportion of the whole foreign trading of the country, and the returns can be said to be a good gauge of the prosperity of the land. Therefore when Montreal shows an improvement in exports, the whole country is sharing in the general gain.

At present the increased activity is in all lines, so that the improvement may be considered general. It is anticipated that as the revenue collected in Montreal has not fallen below a million a month, the total collections will amount to $14,000,000, which is about the same figure as was the total for 1906. As last year was an abnormal one, this tie with 1906 is very satisfactory. It must not be forgotten that the season opened up with disadvantages that 1906, or the following year, did not have to contend with, and in addition there has been restricted buying all the way through. When consumers have been frightened, it is a tedious matter to make them regain their confidence again. The fact, therefore, that despite the general restriction in buying the present year is equal to 1906, is a matter for general congratulation, and an object lesson to those who were unaware, or who have forgotten in their extreme timidity, the real solid strength of Canadian trade.

The improvement now showing in the import trade is reflected in the stimulation in the consuming demand that the home industries are feeling in every direction, the industrial activity, is greater, while orders going through the wholesale firms are assuming larger proportions every day. Consumers who have been economizing, are now commencing to spend more freely, and in their turn dealers are booking ahead more liberally. The demand generally is improving, and the increase in the customs collections for Montreal is but one indication of a general return to natural conditions.

STRONG MOLASSES MARKETS.

Strong markets for molasses are ruling everywhere, and conditions appear to warrant an advance, which may be expected by retailers any time now. There is a marked scarcity of Barbadoes molasses in the Canadian market, as compared with last year, while there has been no falling off in the demand. The yield this year was 15,000 puncheons less than in 1907, which placed shippers in a predicament at the commencement of the shipping season, and, as there were no stocks carried over from last year, the scarcity was pronounced as the season drew near a close. At present holdings are quite below normal, and as no more molasses will be forthcoming from the West Indies until the end of next April at the earliest, it is likely that high quotations will rule in the near future. An outstanding feature of the situation at present is that Newfoundland houses are looking for supplies in Canada, and some sales have already been reported. At this time of year this is unusual, Newfoundland as a rule importing all the molasses her people require by direct steamers. In the past sales have been made to the Island colony in the spring, but it is years since there has been any demand on Canada in the fall. With our stocks hardly more than two-thirds of what they were in September last year, it is unlikely that we will be able to do much toward supplying Newfoundland.

THE WESTERN WHEAT CROP.

[Special Despa ch to The Canadian Grocer.]

Winnipeg, Sept. 2.—The Free Press published to-day the following estimate of the crop of the present year :

"The estimate of the western wheat crop is 17 bushels per acre on 6,000,000 acres or 102,000,000 bushels. On August 10, nine inspectors started on their rounds to examine the crop and the last one finished his work on August 29. In addition to the many thousands of miles traveled by rail the inspectors drove 3,445 miles through the actual crop.

"The acreage seeded to wheat in the spring of 1908 was undoubtedly over 6,000,000, probably from 30,000 to 40,000 acres in excess, but in making the estimate the Free Press has thought it needful to allow for a large acreage destroyed by gophers and damaged by hail, for the areas, not large in any one section, but a considerable total, where the crop was ploughed down for heat damage, and the other areas where late wheat has been too badly frozen to be worth cutting. The estimate of yield is based on 6,000,000 acres, though it is possible this is too small. As to the average yield the Free Press average, made up from the averages given for each line of railway covered, was exactly 18⅝ bushels, but as many points had been visited before the frost came it has been necessary to allow for frost damage. Again there will be some shrinkage in yield from the fact that many farmers are cutting too green. It is felt, however, that in allowing 1⅝ bushels per acre, the Free Press has made provision for any damage that may occur from any cause whatsoever.

"The oat crop is estimated at 35 bushels on 2,600,000 acres, or 91,000,000 ; barley at 28 bushels to the acre on 855,650, or 39,958,200.

"When all possible damage has been accounted for the Canadian West has to-day practically assured 102,000,000 bushels of wheat.

"Realizing the tremendous importance to the country at large of accurate reports the Free Press inspectors have spared no pains in verifying in every possible way the figures given out. Roughly speaking, over the tremendous railway mileage covered, the crop has been inspected every 25 miles."

WINTER APPLES LIGHT.

E. J. McIntyre, of Niagara on the Lake, one of the best-informed apple dealers in Canada, was in Toronto this week and called on The Grocer. Mr. McIntyre has just completed a tour through the apple belt of Ontario and is full of information in regard to this year's crop.

In the apple-growing counties of central Ontario, he says, the yield of early fruit is good but winter apples are very poor, the crop being not more than one-tenth of the usual yield. In Eastern Ontario also, it is said that similar conditions prevail though the Winter fruit is perhaps in better supply, being estimated at about one-third of the ordinary yield.

The one encouraging feature about the reports is the fact all reports speak favorably of the good quality of the winter fruit. This, Mr. McIntyre says, will tend to do a good deal toward eliminating this year the trouble in packing and false marking, which was so evident in Canadian apples last season. With such small crops, however, export business this winter will be necessarily small.

The general price offered, Mr. McIntyre says, is from $1 to $1.25, which is rather surprising in view of the small crop. Buyers seem to be sticking to this price, not on account of any arrangement but evidently because they are not anxious to repeat the losses of last year. Little activity is evident in the business just at present.

In New York State, on the other hand, Mr. McIntyre says the apple crop is plentiful and Canadian apples will have to meet these in competition in the British markets. This is decidedly different to last year's conditions when the United States buyers were swarming into Canada buying up our apples. Mr. McIntyre reports pears as a plentiful crop and of excellent quality. Grapes, too, are a good crop and will probably be quite cheap.

THE BEAN CROP IN KENT.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Chatham, Ont., August 31.—The bean situation in the County of Kent is much different from what it was two months ago, or even less. Then, the outlook was for a crop excellent in quality and exceeding in quantity the average crop. To-day the probability is that the crop will be at best only a fair one.

With the protracted hot spell of several weeks ago, the beans forged ahead rapidly. Some of them, indeed, commenced to ripen before ever the beans were fairly formed in the pods. Some of these dry pods, picked at the time, haven't a single bean in them.

The coming of rain promised to stop this course of things. The rains, however, while excellent for other crops, were unfortunately a little too heavy for the bean crop, which is, as a result, reported in many sections to have suffered considerably.

Toward the north, where only a small acreage was sown this year, the beans, on account of the land being higher and the water draining off more easily, are reported to be of good quality. In the south, however, the rain has done much damage.

Buyers are still optimistic as to the crop, claiming that good weather will yet set it right ; but growers in many sections declare that beans, particularly in the southern part of the county, will fall considerably short of the usual crop.

What Good Roads Mean to the Retailer

Impassable Highways Divert Business From the Local Stores to the Mail Order Houses — How Merchants May Further Their Own Interests by Supporting Movement for Good Roads.

Whether the retailer in the country town realizes it or not, the question of good roads is one with which his interests are closely allied. It is quite possible that in the past the relationship between the extent of business in a town and condition of the roads leading to that town has not been fully understood, hence the apathy, or, at best, half-hearted sympathy exhibited by business men towards projects having for their object the systematic improvement of the roads.

Few subjects deserve such attention by the country merchant as that associated with providing good highways leading to the town in which he does business.

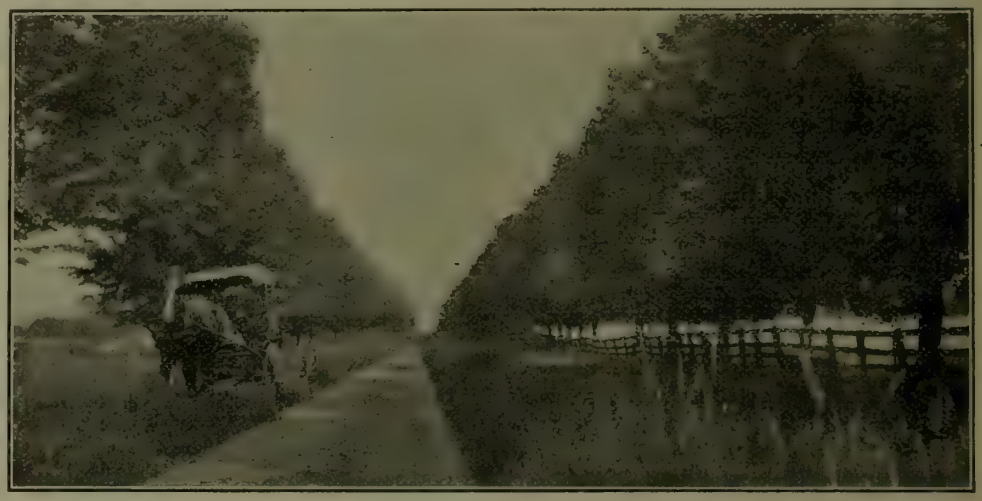
It must be obvious to every such merchant every time the roads are in a condition which prevents farmers' wives and daughters from coming to town, the opportunity of doing business which their presence there would afford is lost, and may it not be quite possible that some of the growth of the business done by city mail order houses with persons resident in the country may be traced more or less directly to the fact that poor roads make journeying to town a hardship to the women of the family, at least.

These are points in this question which have a direct bearing upon the business of the country retailer, and they seem to justify the statement that these retailers are under a responsibility to themselves to further to the extent of their ability any movement towards better roads which may be promulgated.

Fortunately for the retailer, though it must be confessed, most frequently without the active support from him which should have been accorded, a great deal has been done along this direction in Canada, and there are indications that in some quarters at least, the importance of this project in its local as well as national aspect, has been appreciated.

The direct benefit accruing to the retailer alone constitutes sufficient reason for his active interest in the good roads question, but there is an indirect benefit, which, after all, perhaps furnishes the strongest argument in favor of his support of this project.

Good roads mean more prosperous farmers. Every dollar spent in improvement of highways adds many dollars to the wealth of the farming community served by it, in the increased facilities which good roads afford for successful farming.



In the Summer this Road Will be Pleasant, but the Growth of Grass and Flat Character of the Roadway Will Make it Almost Impassable in Spring and Fall.

An Inexpensive but Serviceable Road in Hastings County. It has been Gravelled and Proper Provision Made for Drainage.

Good roads are essentially a business proposition. They represent an investment which will bring handsome returns by increased property values, and facilities for transacting farm business at a greater profit. When a loan company is asked to advance money on farm property, the class of roads leading to the farm is one of the prominent considerations in appraising its value. A farm with good highways approaching it will sell more readily than will one which has to be reached over neglected and badly constructed roads. Quoting a recent statement by the president of a leading Canadian bank, "Our counties and townships in the older parts of the Province are, as municipalities go, comparatively rich, and there is no obvious excuse for roads which in the spring and autumn, for many weeks together, are of very little use."

Good roads are of vastly more importance to the development of any country than is commonly attributed to them. A vague impression prevails that railways have superseded them, and that so far as industrial, commercial and social progress is concerned, the condition of the common road is of little consequence. A more indefensible position could not be taken. Railways mean, above all, further development, and that development demands the improvement of country roads as feeders to the railway, and for communication with the adjacent country. Every nation that has achieved supremacy has been a builder of roads. Good roads are not merely an index of, but a means towards national greatness.

In Ontario alone the rural roads are costing more than $2,000,000 for maintenance, but while this is the actual expenditure, there is, in addition, a tremendous toll of time and energy wasted in traveling over bad roads; energy which would be spent profitably were the country's highways in good condition. This and the many other inconveniences of bad roads, handicap farming to an extent, the sum of which is seldom realized.

Conditions Getting Better.

There is, however, an improvement in progress, and during the last few years a great deal has been done. In Ontario many counties have adopted a system of county roads, and this has invariably been followed by the existence of very much better conditions. The Government, in order to encourage this movement, set apart $1,000,000 to be used as grants to counties taking advantage of the provisions of the Act passed. By this Act the Government pays one-third of the cost of improvements effected in counties working on the county system.

In places where the farmers themselves, as the class most directly benefitted, are not sufficiently appreciative of the advantages represented by good roads to interest themselves in an effort to secure them, merchants will be consulting their own interests by heading a movement with this as its object. It may be that public sentiment has already been partially awakened and that the efforts of merchants to crystallize such sentiment into action will meet with a ready response.

It is possible that an association has been formed, but if there is no such organization the retailer should lead in organizing one. His business will be helped through his being identified with the movement, and he will benefit even before his efforts and those of his neighbors have resulted in the improvement of the highways.

It has indeed become generally recognized that this matter of roadmaking can no longer be carried on by means of the antiquated system under which the farmers supplied their labor. It is admitted that the work must be done in a scientific manner and under the direction of both the Provincial and the county authorities.

Here is where the retail merchant comes in. He usually occupies a position of prominence and authority; he has special opportunities for impressing right views upon his community. He could, for instance, utilize his display windows for exhibiting the difference between good roads and bad ones. Photographs of the old-fashioned dirt road and of the modern highway can be obtained at small expense, and if displayed in the window, with appropriate printed matter, will attract wide attention. Nor will they in any way interfere with the display of merchandise. On the contrary, the photographs will attract people to the window, and after the spectators have absorbed the ideas presented in the views they will turn their minds to the merchandise.

One such man can accomplish a great deal if he is energetic and enthusiastic and appreciates the far-reaching effects which will accrue to the business of a town leading to which is a system of good roads, easily traveled in all weather conditions.

NEED BETTER FRUIT JARS.

Letter From Prominent Retailer Calls Attention to an Important Matter.

The following letter, which reached us this week, touches a question which will be of a good deal of interest to the trade generally. The matters referred to deserve attention.—Editor.

"Editor Canadian Grocer,

"The fruit jar season is with us once more and with it the ever-recurring complaint of bad jars, bad zinc rings, and bad cases. Is it not time that the Canadian manufacturers of this indispensable article were beginning o show at least a semblance of a desire to give the public a good article for their money?

"Has the time not arrived when they in return for a protective tariff that enables them to laugh at all outside competition, should give us a jar that we would not be ashamed and afraid to recommend to our customers?

"That no conscientious merchant can recommend the present output of our Canadian fruit jar factories is a fact I think, that no one connected with the business will deny, and instead of improving as time passes, they seem to get worse season by season.

"A few days ago, I sent out one dozen of pint jars, and the next day had to send six zinc rings to take the place of that number that were useless. To-day from one dozen quart jars, three of the zinc rings were returned, showing defects that rendered them quite unfit for use. The fact is that it is almost a daily occurrence to have defective jars returned. Then there is the matter of the cases. A glance at any shipment of fruit jars, as they are taken from the dray, some upside-down, because the bottom has fallen out, others with the sides off, and others in a complete state of collapse, ought to be a spectacle that would make the manufacturers thoroughly ashamed of themselves, if they were not blinded by their desire to get as much as possible out of the people and give as little as possible in return.

"When one sees the output of the American factories with their neat and substantial cases, and well-finished jars, showing both care and workmanship, and compares them with the slipshod work of our own factories one is forced to conclude, no matter what he may think politically, that it is up to the people to demand either the removal of the duty on fruit jars or a speedy improvement of the methods of the Canadian manufacturers. Yours truly.

"WILLIAM ANDERSON.

"Chatham."

FOR VISITING GROCERS.

The Red Rose Tea Co., Toronto, offer a special invitation to grocers visiting the Exhibition this and next week to make their office, 3 Wellington St. East, their headquarters during their visit. Visiting grocers will be welcomed and made to feel at home, both at the office and at the company's booth in the Manufacturers' Building at the Exhibition, where Red Rose tea is being served every day during the fair.

Ald. C. H. Crysdale, one of Oshawa's leading grocers, was in Toronto on Thursday, at the beginning of a holiday jaunt, and called on The Grocer. Ald. Crysdale is taking a great deal of interest in the movement to secure a better suburban service for the towns adiacent to Toronto, and has been appointed a member of the committee representing the eastern towns.

WHAT TO DO IN SEPTEMBER

Useful Hints for the Retail Grocer for the Early Fall Month -Some Seasonable Lines and Their Display.

September spells for the business world the beginning of the Fall season, and after a somewhat lethargic Summer the business man should plan to put more ginger into his work to attract a larger share of trade.

The grocer should not be behind hand in planning for a larger share of trade in his business, and the means of doing this is to study his business, his constituency, and how best he may improve his chances. One method of attracting trade, and an essential one, is the keeping of the store and stock up-to-date. Although it is true that there is nothing new under the sun, it is also true that change enlivens trade. The store premises, the shelves, the windows, all can be made to look more attractive than during the hot, clammy weather of the Summer months. A rearrangement of the stock will help some in this regard. To see a well-groomed grocery store on the way down town in the morning involuntarily starts the thought that the grocer knows his business, and what is more to the point, the store will be spoken about at home when the supper hour comes round.

Some Seasonable Lines.

Now, presuming that the grocer has brightened up the store premises earlier in the year, he will, if wise, see that the wantable and seasonable grocery lines are conveniently displayed. "This is September," he says, "and, let me see, this is a preserving month, and there will be vegetables and fruit to be put down for Winter use." A window display of glass jars and sealers, with spices, etc., set about in attractive groupings will then be in order, and such a display will certainly make the housewife stop to admire. Perhaps the corresponding window might be set out with vegetables and fruits fit for canning. There is a great range, especially of the former—gherkins, red and green tomatoes, red and green peppers, white onions and many other small vegetables which can be arranged in some striking designs, for their colors, too, will add to the attractiveness of the window picture. Fruit, being of a more perishable nature, could not so well be taken from the original packages, but they might in their cases and baskets be set in the background to serve a useful as well as ornamental purpose.

New canned goods are now on the market and attractive shelf displays could be made of them. Then the various kinds of breakfast foods are put up in packages which lend themselves to good display. These, too, might be placed to advantage, for though the season is early for warm cereals in the morning the grocer with an eye to the future will see what a good advertisement these goods can be to him. Flour, too, is a good line to bring forward, for the housekeeper may for a change think of providing some homemade baking to take the place of store goods. Many other window and shelf displays might be made with seasonable lines, but the displays should be changed every week. If this is done the window pictures will be looked for by the frequent passer-by, and should in the end bring new customers to the store.

Paying Departures.

There are some goods which are looked upon as being not distinctively grocery lines, but which add to the appearance of a grocery store and from which a profitable trade may be derived as well. Confectionery is one of these; flowers and plants another, and fresh fish still another. Separate departments devoted to these goods and a rotation of window displays will tell the people the lines you carry, and will help also in the sale of staple lines; for the customer buying candies, say, will see something else that is wanted and if the prices are right and he receives courteous treatment the grocer will have added a new customer to his list. People are often impelled to enter a store by what they see in the window, and having entered, buy something else not seen from the street. Shrewd merchants take advantage of this peculiarity of both men and women and put one thing in a window to sell another.

Some grocers have found the addition of a baking department a profitable movement. The line, for one thing, is a drawing card and a trade winner in itself, as well as leading to increased business in other lines by drawing attention to the goods. Women, especially, are interested, and if not immediate purchasers will soon become so. Such a department offers something to talk about, being a little out of the ordinary line.

For Rainy Days.

The time never was when there was no work to be done in a grocery store, and the grocer should take a pride in keeping his store bright. That means that the back of the counter should be as clean as the front, and the hidden stock as neat as that which is exposed. Rainy days, when customers are not so numerous, should be busy days for the grocer who wants work to do. A certain manager of a Toronto grocery house—and by no means a small grocery store—was found the other evening just before closing, sweeping the floor; taking his turn with the dozen clerks who at that time were packing orders received during the day. That man was not too proud to show consideration for his clerks and to help keep the store clean; and there was in consequence a loyalty noted in the very air of the establishment.

Cleanliness is next to Godliness. There are many grocers who to-day wonder why the other fellow does more trade. The goods are the same in quality and price, but the appearance of the two stores is different. One is inviting, the other all disorder. That tells the story.

Grocers have to try a great variety of ways to attract trade, but nothing much can be done unless after careful thinking and planning. Look at your store, your stock, the other grocery stores in your neighborhood, and see where you can improve the appearance of your premises. And then study your customers, their wants, and what they are likely to need in the future, taking into consideration the seasonable lines. Your own plans and methods will evolve from this thinking, and your business will show in gains the result of your foresight.

USING SPRATT'S DOG CAKES.

Harold H. Hughes, of F. Hughes & Co., Montreal, selling agents Spratt's Patent, Ltd., London, will be in Toronto in the interests of his firm during the week of the coming Bench Show held in connection with the Canadian National Exhibition. The dogs at the show will be fed on Spratt's Patent Meat "Fibrine" Vegetable Dog Cakes. Spratt's dog foods are becoming very popular sellers with the trade and sales are increasing wonderfully. They show the dealer a fair margin of profit.—Advt.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN ENGLAND.

Stephen Wingrove, of London, England, proprietor of Spratt's Animal Foods, was at the Windsor, Montreal, for a few days recently, and in an interview with a representative of The Grocer, talked interestingly of conditions in England. He stated that there was a certain measure of depression, but they were no worse off than many other countries, which are also suffering from the same cause. Mr. Wingrove stated that the passage of the Patent Bill will have a wonderfully beneficial effect on the prosperity of the country. Heretofore it has not been necessary for those holding English patents to manufacture in England, but now, in order to hold a patent there, it is necessary to manufacture on English soil. For many years the English people have been using goods of foreign manufacture, which could have been made in England if it had not been for the patents, which gave the sole right to persons who wished to manufacture in some other country, but who used England as their market. In this way the Government has been affording protection to foreigners and keeping their factories running, whilst her own were idle. The passage of this bill looks like the thin edge of the wedge of business reforms of many kinds.

Like nearly all Englishmen who travel through the Empire and have business interests in the various parts, Mr. Wingrove expressed himself in favor of closer commercial union and adequate protection of the Motherland against foreign countries. In this connection he mentioned the plan of the German Zollonerein, which unites the various semi-independent states of the German Empire against foreign commercial invasion and results to the mutual benefit of each. Mr. Wingrove, who has been attending a meeting of the board of directors of the American Spratt's Company, of which he is chairman, left some days ago for Quebec, where he will spend a few days before sailing for home.

Vancouver Grocers Arranging for Pure Food Show in November—Looking After Fruit Interests at Saskatoon.

VANCOUVER.

August 28.—Chilliwack creamery butter is reaching this city in better condition, owing to the installation of increased facilities for handling it at the creamery. Until recently, the butter was shipped soon after making without having been cold storage treated, with the result that it was rather soft when it reached here, the transportation being by boat down the Fraser River. Now, however, it is put in cold storage at the creamery, and when it is received by the distributing agents, it is very firm. This butter is one of the leaders on the market, and the cold storage treatment will give it a better quality for the coast markets.

The first large consignment of the product of the Chilliwack Canning Company is now on the market here. This company includes in its output all the small fruits, and has installed the largest drying and curing plant for prunes that is in the province. As pointed out in a special article in The Grocer a few weeks ago, the demand for fresh prunes has been such that there has been no need for the dried article, but in Chilliwack, removed somewhat from the main lines of transportation, there has been a surplus of prunes of the finest quality. These will now be taken care of, and this winter the first cured prunes in any quantity will be sent out.

Small fruit, especially raspberry growers, will be interested in an invention of V. Sibley, of Lillooet, B.C. This is a refrigerator box for use in cases when the quantity is too small for a carload. Not only is the minimum quantity of ice used, but mould is prevented, in short, the failings of previous similar inventions have been overcome. When picked, the boxes can be placed right in the refrigerator, and no further deterioration is possible until the berries are removed. This will save loss especially when the fruit is fully ripe. It will enable the grower also to hold his product if the market happens to be stocked. The box is intended for the handling not only of berries, but of all perishables, such as fish, butter, etc.

Fruit canneries are now busy, and at Peachland, 2,000 cans of peaches are being turned out daily. The plant of the Kelowna Canning Company is active with the tomato crop. This company has also an aerated water department.

There is every indication of the public market being a success, thr patronage so far coming fully up to the expectations of the clerk. As it becomes more generally known, both among the farmers and the consuming public, it should become an important institution. The itinerant Chinese vegetable and fish peddlers have been restricted to certain hours to further the ends of the market, and a test case of the by-law is now before the courts.

McKinnon & Sutherland, the pioneer storekeepers of the Lardeau district, are closing up their business there and will devote their attention to their store at Revelstoke.

William Blair has opened a store at Stony Creek between Quesnel and Fort George, in the Caribou. Many settlers have taken up land in the vicinity, the Indian population is large, and many travelers pass that way, so a brisk trade should be done. He already has stores at Wing Dam, La Fontaine and Slough Creek, all Cariboo points.

The Vancouver grocers are beg nning to arrange for the annual pure food show, which will be held in the Dominion Hall, from October 12 to 17, one week. The show last year was very successful, and it is expected that this year's event will be something out of the ordinary. W. J. C. Hunter, secretary of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, has the matter in hand, and to him any communications should be addressed.

SASKATOON.

August 28.—Business in retail stores is quite busy at this time of the year. Harvesting operations throughout the district are pretty well over and preparations are now being made for threshing. Good orders for threshers' supplies and provisions are coming in and this, with the usual trade, makes the stores quite brisk.

The housewife, too, is now in quest of her preserving kettle, amongst other requirements. Most of the grocers have a tempting array in the line of ripe and preserving fruits. This week there is a large quantity of California fruit on the market. This includes Bartlet pears, Crawford peaches, Kelsey plums, silver plums, Gross plums and crabapples. Ontario basket apples are also on sale. Peaches are selling at $1.50 per case. Pears, $2.50 per large case. Crabapples, $2.75. Plums, $2. Washington apples, $2 per box. Fresh tomatoes, $1.25 per basket.

In connection with the fruit business here the city council are considering the passing of a by-law to further protect the wholesale jobbers in this line. It was brought to the notice of the council by the Rogers Fruit Co. that fruit was being brought into town in considerable quantities and peddled off by people not paying a business license under the city by-law. When the new by-law comes into force it will give the resident fruit dealers a better chance to hold the trade.

Halifax Tomato Combine a Failure—Low Sugar in New Brunswick—Quebec Farmers Should Improve Potatoes.

HALIFAX.

August 29.—Local-grown fruit is now coming on the market in large quantities. The early varieties of apples are of fine quality, but the demand so far is very light. Pears are plentiful, but plums are scarce as yet. Green corn is down in price and during the week some of the retailers were disposing of it at three dozen for twenty-five cents. Tomatoes are wholesaling at 30c per basket. Eggs are very firm and are quoted at 23c. Butter is in very good supply and the demand is fair, but prices are high.

The tomato combine in Nova Scotia is not meeting with the success that was at first anticipated, according to some of those who were not included in the deal. The latter say that they are getting all the tomatoes that they can handle, and that prices are just as low as they were at the same season last year. The dealers in the combine always have lots of tomatoes on hand, and it is stated that owing to the fixed prices their sales are not as large nor as quick as heretofore. In fact, it is claimed that some of those outside of the combine are able to undersell those in the inner circle. It is the small grower promptly marketing his stock who has killed the deal.

William E. Crowe, one of the best-known retail grocers in Halifax, died suddenly at his Summer residence at Rockingham, during the present week, from a severe hemmorhage. He was at his store on Tuesday in apparently good health, but on Wednesday was taken seriously ill and soon passed away. He was a son of the late John F. Crowe, who for years carried on a grocery business in the Provincial Block on Gottingen St., and on his retirement some twenty-five years ago his son (the deceased) carried on the business under the name and style of W. E. Crowe & Co. He built up a fine trade, and was highly esteemed by his business associates. He was a prominent Oddfellow, and a member of the Sons of Temperance. A widow and one son survive. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon and practically all the Gottingen St. merchants were to be seen in the cortege, and in tribute to Mr. Crowe's memory the stores on that street, with which his name is so indissolubly connected, were closed.

ST. JOHN.

September 1.—While business has been very good in grocery circles of late, collections are reported as very unsatisfactory.

A number of changes in market quotations have been chronicled during the past week. Sugar has declined 10c a hundred for standard and 40c for Austrian. Quotations now are, $4.80 for standard and $4.40 for Austrian. These are the lowest figures at which sugar has been sold since last March, when the price was the same. Since that time standard had advanced 20c and Austrian 50c. The dealers do not look for any further decline at present.

Ontario patents are firm and some millers talk of advancing the price. An advance in Manitobas is anticipated. Middlings are scarce and high.

Cheese is higher, the weather having been against a large make. Quotations now are: 13¼ to 13½ cents a pound.

Quotations were received last week on new stock California raisins, etc. Apricots; peaches, prunes and raisins are all higher.

New Canadian onions are being offered for delivery the second week in September. The trade has been supplied lately with Valencias in crates, the price being about 2 cents. The Canadian stock will be a little cheaper.

Generally speaking, the crops in New Brunswick this year have been very good. An abundance of hay has been gathered in; oats and buckwheat are well advanced, and with the recent rains the root crops have improved wonderfully. Berries of all kinds have been plentiful and at present the canners are busy handling large quantities of blueberries.

Native apples are on the market now and reports indicate that the crop has been a good one.

A marked change is noticeable in St. John retail grocery stores in that lady clerks are rapidly superseding the men. A few years ago lady clerks were unknown in grocery stores here, now the store that has not one or more lady clerks is an exception. In talking with several of the proprietors where ladies are employed, they claimed that lady clerks were in many ways preferable to men. They were equally as quick, and as a rule neater in appearance and in the care of the stock and store fittings. They are more dependable, keep better hours and seem to manifest a greater interest in the business than the average man clerk. Of course they cannot do the heavier class of work necessary around a grocery, but in every other department of work they are considered perfectly satisfactory. There seems no doubt whatever but that the lady clerk has come to stay.

D. H. Ross, Canadian trade commissioner in Australia, was in St. John last week for a few days and met many of the business men interested in export trade and talked over matters with them. W. E. Anderson, Secretary of the local Board of Trade, endeavored to make Mr. Ross' visit pleasant by pointing out places of interest and introducing him to leading merchants.

The "Two Barkers" have made quite extensive changes in their main store on Princess Street. Their warehouse, adjoining the retail store, has been fitted with a plate glass front for displaying heavy goods, and the interiors and exteriors have been brightened with a fresh coat of white paint.

The name of W. Frank Hatheway, M.P.P., is being mentioned in connection with the Conservative nomination for the Federal House as the representative from the city and county of St. John.

MONTREAL.

September 4.—There is a good chance in the Province of Quebec for the farmers to improve their potato production. A leading grocer, who does a large business here, stated that they were buying New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island potatoes in preference to the Quebec variety, which, he stated, could not be depended upon. The Quebec potatoes are not as good keepers as those brought from the Maritime Provinces, therefore it becomes more of a hazard to stock up with the "home" product.

Malcolm MacDonald, 227 McCord St., who has been in the grocery business for many years on Notre Dame St. West, has taken a new store at the above address. Mr. MacDonald is one of the veterans in the business.

A. D. Fraser, of Fraser, Viger & Co., has returned to town after a holiday spent down the Saguenay and other Gulf points.

A new grocery has been opened at 360 Centre St., by J. F. David. This store is commodious and up-to-date in every way, and the prospects for the establishment of a good business at this stand seem very good. We wish Mr. David success.

Just at this season of the year vegetables and fruits may be used to good advantage in window decoration. Quite a number of windows may be noticed throughout the city where this is being done. Tomatoes, on account of their brilliant color, make very good decoration, and some very attractive designs can be worked out with them. This sort of window display requires considerable ingenuity and originality, because the finished windows are flat, and must, therefore, be well arranged and colored like a picture. One especially deserving of comment was noticed on St. Lawrence Boulevard. It was arranged as follows:—In the centre of the window there was a melon, and radiating, like the points of a star, were arranged ears of corn. Between the points of each ear there were tomatoes. This design was repeated three times across the window, and the whole was carried out on a background of green beans.

A. Davidson, of Fraser, Viger & Co., St. James St., leaves shortly for a trip to the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Davidson's trip will be one of business and pleasure combined.

C. H. Catelli & Co., manufacturers of macaroni, are about to move into more commodious quarters on William St., at the head of King St. When established in their new place, and when the new machinery which Mr. Catelli purchased while abroad is installed, this plant will be the most up-to-date on this continent.

Felix Bigaouette, who formerly kept a grocery store on Lagauchetiere St., E., corner St. Elizabeth, has opened up an agency in Montreal for Bassara temperance ale and porter. Mr. Bigaouette, who is head of the new Bassara Trading Company, 176 St. Denis St., is one of the old guard of French-Canadian grocers in Montreal, and his friends will be glad to see him succeed in his new venture.

An interesting baseball match was played in Montreal, Saturday afternoon, between teams from the factories of S. H. Ewing & Sons, and Herron, Leblanc, Limited, resulting in a victory for the former nine by a score of 19 to 6.

RICHMOND.

September 1.—The organizer of the Retail Merchants' Association spent two days in town trying to establish a branch here, recently, but did not succeed this time.

The movement to organize a local Board of Trade met with a like fate after several attempts. These failures seem to point to a pronounced lethargy among our merchants with respect to matters of a public nature.

The Agricultural Fair will be held on September 15 and 16. Such celebrations as these are beneficial to our local traders on account of the many visitors which they draw to the town.

H. P. Wales, general merchant, has placed his business on a cash basis and reports the change as highly gratifying in every way. When interviewed regarding this matter he said: "It was the best move I ever made, because the credit customers were replaced by new ones who had the cash to pay for good goods at a little lower prices."

Two carloads of Acadia granulated sugar have been brought into town this summer by a Montreal wholesale grocer. This sugar has been distributed among the grocers at carload prices, and this has led to a very considerable cutting of prices, as, one local jobber seeing the trade slipping from his grasp, began retailing to everyone by the single bag at five cents lower than carload prices.

The first grapes of the season were brought into town by P. J. Girard.

Some grocers are being approached regarding the possibility of establishing a furniture factory here. Mr. Cotton, late manager of the Victoriaville Furniture Factory, is trying to dispose of the stock in the enterprise among the business men of the town. Every additional industry means additional trade for the grocers, therefore, they are all welcome.

It is surprising what small things sometimes turns the tide of trade in various directions. Good sidewalks are an asset to any grocer, as people are always seeking pleasant paths in which to walk. Richmond will soon be admirably supplied with granolithic walks, which will replace the old wooden ones.

Business has been very good since the beginning of August and collections have also been much better. Business here has been equal to last year's, and the falling off has been chiefly in fancy goods and toys, but this has been made up by larger dealing in groceries and foodstuffs.

BARRIE.

September 1.—Thomas Colwell, grocer, of Dunlop and Mulcaster Streets, who about nine months ago bought out Robt. Beath, is advertising a clearing-out sale of his stock and means to retire from the grocery business for good.

The banana trade in Barrie this year has been one of the worst that our merchants have ever had, due chiefly to fact of the Italian merchants who have been bringing direct cars of this fruit from the Southern States, and retailing the fruit at a less figure than our Canadian merchants can themselves buy for. Combined effort on the part of various merchants to buy together a quantity and distribute it among themselves has also proven a failure, the smaller merchants having an idea that the promoters were in for a graft game.

Jno. J. Jamieson, an old Barrie boy, who has succeeded in making a mark on the road, is building a fine double brick dwelling on Collier Street, and intends moving into the same in about three weeks' time. He also reports that as usual he has sold his carload of Quaker brand fruits and vegetables in Barrie.

Never before in the history of our local apple men has the early apples been such an abundant crop, good sample and so cheap. Why, last week a merchant, to help a farmer out who had brought a load of apples into town and had sold all but one barrel from a sum ranging from 70 cents down to 40 cents, gave him 25 cents for the last barrel, which was a very fair sample of the "Duchess" variety. The prices, however, which the buyers are paying are at an average of 60 cents a barrel for No. 1 varieties.

Plums in this district are at their best this week. Thornbury, Clarksburg and Stayner shippers are quoting the smaller varieties at 20c to 25c a basket, while the Bradshaw and other larger plums are selling at 25c to 30c.

LONDON.

September 2.—The destruction by fire on Saturday of the London Pork Packing Company's establishment puts out of business for a time, at least, one of the biggest food-producing concerns in the Province. The large factory was located about a mile beyond the eastern limits of the city, and out of reach of the city's water system, and although firemen were sent out with an engine, they could do little with the meagre supply of water available, and the flames burned themselves out. The loss will be heavy, but is probably covered by an insurance of about $150,000. The concern was established several years ago by an Anglo-Danish company, which has also a branch establishment at Port Huron. The premises will be re-built at once, but meantime about eighty hands will be out of employment.

A movement is on foot among east end storekeepers to close their places of business every Wednesday afternoon all the year round.

Local grocers' clerks talk of organizing an association, the object being to promote good fellowship. Nelson Miles has the matter in hand, and the proposal is meeting with every encouragement.

Two men are now in the county jail awaiting trial on the charge of playing the "short change" game at Glencoe, and certain local grocers believe the prisoners are the same men who tried a similar scheme with them. Their plan of operation was this. One of the men would buy some small article, and throw down a $10 bill in payment. When the change came the other man would protest that it was useless to break the bill, and would himself produce the change for the article purchased. Then the first man would take what he could from the change given him, hand the clerk back the rest and ask for his $10 bill. This game worked almost every time.

Miss Ethel McNeil, who has been cashier for T. B. Escott & Co., wholesale grocers, for over five years, was most agreeably surprised this week when the employes of the firm came into the office in a body and presented her with a very handsome traveling bag. The address was read by Mr. W. Eardley, and expressed the regret of the employes of the firm at the removal of Miss McNeil from the city. The presentation was made by W. K. Smith.

ST. THOMAS.

September 2.—Business was somewhat slow last Saturday, caused mainly by the largely patronized Wabash and G.T.R. excursion to Detroit. It is estimated that the three Saturday railroad excursions took twelve thousand dollars out of the city, and the grocers are out the best part of the amount, but would not be if they unitedly insisted on doing a cash business.

Butter, especially dairy, was in great demand on Saturday, and sold for 28c. Eggs retail at 20c per dozen, and are quite plentiful. Potatoes are getting easier and the recent rains have helped the later varieties.

The new firm of butchers in imitation of the other chain store companies' methods, are cutting the price of sugar, but the grocers are not up to the present doing likewise, the recent declines do not warrant such action and the demand is certain with such plentiful fruit supplies and the people do not expect the grocer to work for nothing.

The Italian who was fined two dollars for peddling bananas without a license over a month ago, and who agreed to take out a license, has not yet done so, but still does business. They bought 94 bunches last Saturday and sell more than all the grocers combined, and yet pay no business tax.

The grocers during the hot spell have not attended the Retail Merchants' meetings, but now that the season is about over no doubt they will do better, as there are many matters in which they are vitally interested requiring attention.

Some of the grocers have taken space in the Horse Show programme. It promises, as last year, to be a big success, and the committee are offering prizes for the merchant who has the best dressed Horse Show window.

KINGSTON.

September 2.—Like the mirage in the desert leading on the weary traveler to expectations of having a drink (I don't mean commercial men, of course, they don't have to look any distance for such) so is the grocery business to mechanics, farmers, and such. If a young man from the country has a few dollars and a farm and wants to start a grocery he has only to strike a city, and the wholesale man or his help will hold up pictures of fortunes made in, oh, such a short period, and the poor victim falls into the trap. Business men of honor should advise men who are well off on the farm to remain there.

A few of our grocers are putting wagons on the market selling fruits and vegetables, and consequently in direct opposition to our market gardeners. I expect some day to see a gardener go down with a wagon-load of groceries, candies, peanuts, chocolates, etc., in order to even up.

Many farmers have solved the sugar bag question. They can't get 6 pecks in the sugar sack, so they put 4, and sell at so much a bushel. The best solution to the question which has been asked so often by correspondents, in my way of thinking, is to use a larger bag and fold the top and sew, still having only the 100 lbs. Why not use a cotton sack, which would always find sale? You can't give the jute sacks away.

"Hello, Jones! What ye gittin' for butter?" "Oh, 28." "I've put mine to 29." "Yes, well when I put mine up it will be to 30 and I guess I will do it soon." Grocers nowadays work harder than they used to to make a dollar; profits are cut down and salaries are larger and banks don't want any overdrafts and I predict many ship wrecks if better profits are not secured. The men who are making money are those who don't care a cent what the other fellow is doing, but go ahead and give good value and get good profits. They don't run around from door to door looking for trade, and they don't keep their stores open after the proper hour to close, and thus become pirates in the trade. Early to open and early to shut will make grocers happy and clear of the rut. Yes, get out of the rut; don't keep open after your opposition closes. Good people will look down on you.

"Hello, do you know who's speaking?" "Well, I can't see you, but it sounds like Tom Wilson's baritone voice." "Yes, that's me. I am coming up to have tea with you." And Tom generally puts you down for a few chests of value unheard of before.

J. .V. Samwell, lately with Galbraith & Co., and formerly with W. G. Craig & Co., is going into the brokerage business, and is open for a few good agencies. He has lots of push and good business qualities, and has a bright future ahead of him.

STRATFORD.

September 1.—The Retail Merchants' Association seems to have fallen asleep for the summer, and the grocers' section, especially, is at a standstill. It is with a certain amount of envy that we read of the festal doings, friendly outings, picnics, etc., being held by the retail grocers of other places, and London particularly, seems to be in the front in this happy condition of affairs. While the generally fair business feeling has much improved among our grocers, and the wholesale price-cutting in staple lines has been practically abandoned, still there is a certain lack of harmony and good fellowship that should really exist among such a body of men. A practical suggestion right here that should be conducive of better times would be to have one good big jolly outing, with games, etc., say to Goderich or some other place, before the summer season closes. A pleasant half-day at the lakeshore would be a guaranteed success in every way, appreciated and enjoyed by all.

Export business in butter and eggs is rather quiet at present. One shipper accounts for this in the higher prices being paid in this district than in other localities. As much as ½c to 1c less per pound or dozen being paid elsewhere. Local business in these lines is very brisk, however.

H. A. Barker, grocer, has returned, after a two weeks' outing under canvas at Grand Bend.

A Wellington Street grocer had a rather startling display to attract the attention of passers last week. An empty vinegar barrel was partly filled with odd lines that were slow sellers, a wire netting placed over the top, and a card tacked on the outside with "Snakes" printed on it. Needless to say, it had the effect of arousing one's curiosity enough to take a look-in.

GUELPH.

September 2.—"Pure spring water, 5 gallons for 25c" is the latest offering from a grocery store in Guelph. Well! Well! What next! Spring water is so plentiful here that we could all handle it, but the yeast man tells us his doctor ordered him to boil even the spring water, or else to put a little drop of liquor in it. Now, we wonder who that doctor is who is trying to spoil trade for the poor grocers.

At the request of several grocers we have decided after closing off any Thursday afternoon bouquets, to, just as an afterthought, say all the grocery stores in Guelph were closed last Thursday afternoon but two. These gentlemen will now at least have to acknowledge that the half-holiday has been a success, but even at that we are prepared to meet them again in good fair argument.

BRANTFORD.

September 2.—The Brantford grocers who attended the Hamilton grocers' "hump," reported an enjoyable outing and a most pleasant time.

G. S. Winter is spending his usual two months' holidays at Bala, Muskoka.

Ernest Wall has returned after spending a pleasant holiday at Galt and Toronto.

Saturday saw another monster display of produce on the Brantford market. The farmers and gardeners started coming in early Friday evening, and Saturday morning the market had a very crowded appearance. Vegetables were very cheap, the prices gave every one a chance to buy without straining their purses, although buyers were none too plentiful. Butter was 27c; eggs, 22c, and in much larger supply than the previous week.

Brantford, as have all other cities where manufacturing is carried on extensively, has felt the pinch during the stringent period of the last ten or twelve months, with the result to the grocery trade that the people have bought sparingly, and no persons will be more pleased than the grocers to know that a review of the industrial conditions in Brantford shows that conditions are improving. While things may not be entirely satisfactory at present, local manufacturers are agreed that there is every prospect for improvement and that better times will come in the immediate future.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Sept. 2, 1908.

This week has been a quiet one in cheese matters, which, after the activity of the previous week, and the high prices which prevailed might almost have been expected. Abnormalities in trade are sure to be followed by reactions of greater or lesser degree, and this condition has followed the top-heavy market of last week. Prices are easier, country markets having gone ¼c lower. The prospects for the fall make are very good, as the weather is favorable just now, with prospects of a late and open fall. Canada's exports to England are decreasing, but what we do export we are getting a better price for, therefore, what we are losing in quantity, we are making up in price, in a measure. Every year Canadians are consuming more cheese, so the home market is taking large amounts which under previous conditions went abroad. There is one thing which is gratifying about the export trade, and that is the marked improvement in quality. This is due to a large extent, to the better methods of curing which are placing the Canadian product on a much higher plane with the English buyers. Now, however, that this recognition has been won in the British markets, it will become doubly necessary for Canada to eliminate any chance of too green cheese finding its way to the English people, otherwise the good impression, and its material value to us, will soon fade away.

There was a time when Canadian cheese would not have been considered a moment in comparison with Cheshire cheese, and yet during the last month the Canadian product has been selling at a price actually in advance of the home cheese. This fact is significant. Superior methods of transportation have contributed their share towards the accomplishment of this condition. Locally the market has become a little easier.

Receipts of cheese for last week were 71,454 boxes, as compared with 81,338 boxes for the same period of last year. The arrivals since May 1 to date are 1,161,793 boxes, against 1,343,531 boxes for the same period of last year.

The local market is quiet, with prices 12⅝c to 12¾c for westerns, and 12¼ to 12⅜c for easterns. Shipments of cheese during the week were as follows: 33,701 boxes locally, and 13,578 boxes at other points, making a total of 47,279 boxes, against 73,001 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total shipments since May 1, 1,004,565 boxes, against 1,179,884 boxes for the same period of 1907.

The butter market is in a good healthy condition, and indications seem to point to its remaining so for some time, as the demand for export business will in all likelihood brighten up, as England has to have her supplies from somewhere, and the Australian sources are falling short in supplies, due to a lack of rain in that country. Siberian, Irish and Dutch butter is arriving in fair supply only in the London market, and there does not seem to be much prospect of them increasing their output much. All of these factors tend to keep the price up, and therefore dealers are not looking forward to any great decline for some time to come. It is rather strange, to say the least, when we consider prices are higher in England just now in the middle of the productive season than they are in the winter.

There have been some complaints reaching this side of butter being spoiled by lack of proper refrigerator provision. This is regrettable, but is a matter which will in all probability be mended by the shipping companies as soon as they are aware of the fact that it will be greatly to their advantage to do so.

Shipments for the week were 1,090 packages, against 6,138 packages for the corresponding week of last year. Total shipments since May 1, are 68,981 packages, against 53,827 packages for 1907.

Receipts of butter for the week were 15,681 packages, as compared with 15,685 packages for the corresponding period of last year. The arrivals since May 1, to date, were 280,222 packages, as against 281,274 packages for the same period of last year.

In the country there has been an advance of ⅛c to ¼c. Finest creamery in round lots is quoted at 24c, and to grocers at 25c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, September 2, 1908.

"Scarcity of hogs" is again the cry of Canadian packers this week. The British market has advanced a couple of shillings, standing now at 58, and is much more steady than at last reports. This, with continued good business in the Canadian market, is stimulating demand somewhat, and the situation is rather more favorable than it has been for the past two or three weeks. With this, however, the packers have to face the fact of a very light supply of hogs, and factories are not running up to full capacity.

With offerings of $6.25, f.o.b., and $6.60 to $6.65 for hogs at factory, it would seem that the farmers ought to be willing to part with their hogs. Some attribute the light supply to the prevalent harvest operations, which, no doubt, do interfere to some extent with deliveries, but which cannot be accepted as the real reason. This week's situation brings us again face to face with the fact that the Canadian farmer is neglecting the hog-raising end of his business. What supplies are coming in are light in weight and not too acceptable.

In the last issue of the weekly Trade and Commerce reports, a letter from P. B. McNamara, Canadian trade commissioner at Manchester, dated August 15, makes the following statement: "As anticipated, the killings of hogs in Denmark have fallen off very considerably, and in Ireland and the United States the same thing seems to have happened. This has caused the price to go up, and made shippers and curers difficult to treat with except at higher prices. The large influx of visitors to London has stimulated trade there to a very great extent. Irish still leads the way and figures at the time of writing sizeable 68s-70s, Danish sizeable 64s-66s, and Canadian (which is now meeting with better inquiry) 56s-58s. It is thought this condition of things will prevail throughout August as there are no prospects of lower prices. Canadian packers would be well advised to give attention to this market in view of the improved condition of things, the future being very hopeful, and it is just possible that they may get back some of the money lost in the earlier part of the year when conditions were all against them."

These conditions were noted here even before the writing of the above letter, and packers did their best to take advantage of the favorable opportunity which offered for a few weeks. The conditions, the commissioner cites, however, were not at all permanent, and for the last three or four weeks the British market has been back pretty well to the basis it assumed during the early months of the year. Cables this week, however, note another improvement, and it is hoped that business may again be resumed on better terms.

BUTTER—The buying of butter for Winter use and the packing that is being done on all sides is helping to keep up the price, although farmers' separator is a little easier. The papers are crowded now with reports of the dearth of butter exports, but the prices prevailing here are too high to induce shipping to the Old Country, and besides, the local demand fully equals the supply no matter what price is asked. Unless some untoward circumstance should arise, butter should be cheaper on the home markets this Winter than was the case a year ago.

EGGS—In contradiction to the conditions which prevailed a week ago, eggs are now, and have been for some days, free in supply. The shrinkage, however, is great. The demand is keeping up well. Prices are a little easier, eggs now selling at 20c to 21c.

CHEESE—Improvement in quality continues to be shown in Canadian cheese. The methods of curing are better and the transit arrangements are on an improved footing. With it all, however, exports are decreasing. Of course this year the creameries cut a lot into the cheese factories' business and the make is not so large as was anticipated. The local business is reviving, but very slowly. Prices remain the same as last week.

The demand is good, all the hotels and restaurants buying up large quantities. Still there are many birds going a-begging. As a consequence, prices are down on all lines.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour Strong and Likely to Advance—Cereal Business Good, With Probability of Changes Shortly—Export Business on Low Basis.

Millers continue to talk this week about the probability of advances on flour this winter. The market at present is firm, exceedingly so, but not so steady as a week ago.

Dealers in cereals also confirm recent reports as the probability of high-priced oats and oatmeal this fall and winter. The bat market is rather unsteady just at present, and may fluctuate either way within the next few weeks, but ultimately, dealers say, they are certain to be much stronger.

Some export business in flour is being done with British firms mostly in comparatively small lots, though prices being offered for this business allow so small a margin that shippers are not very anxious.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—The flour market is somewhat stronger this week, but orders continue to be of the hand-to-mouth variety. The undertone of the market is steady. Everyone is looking forward to what developments will take place when new crop wheat reaches the mills. First wheat shipments were made last week. So far the buyers and sellers do not seem to be very near one another. If the statement that the American wheat crop will fall short of expectations is true, Canada may not have much wheat to export, and the European buyers who are holding back may find themselves in an awkward predicament. Prices remain the same.

FLOUR—The markets this week are exceedingly firm, and, with an excellent local business being done, the tone is very strong. Prices remain as at last reports, but may vary within the week. Local millers are doing some export business with British firms, but prices offered are so low that there is not a great deal in it. Considerable Ontario wheat is coming in to the millers, and this is of excellent quality.

CEREALS—Previous reports regarding the probability of high prices on oats and their product this winter are being verified. Prices remain the same this week, but may vary either way shortly. In any event, dealers say, a few weeks will see a much firmer market. Business continues good, with an encouraging outlook.

$1,000,000 OF LOBSTERS

Shipped From Halifax This Season—Large Business With London.

Halifax, September 1.—The Furness liner, St. John City, which sailed early last week, carried away a shipment of twelve thousand cases of lobsters for London. In spite of the inroads made on the lobsters stored at the Deep Water terminus, an equal quantity still remains for shipment and ten thousand cases more will probably arrive before the last shipment of crustaceans is made. No. 4 freight shed is filled with lobsters. About 75,000 cases have been shipped this season, and it is estimated by a lobster shipper that the value of the lobsters shipped from Halifax this season will be approximately one million dollars. The lobsters now reaching the city are chiefly from Prince Edward Island and Cape Breton ports.

SUCCESS FROM WINDOW CARDS.

A Montreal Grocer Tells His Experience —Some Hints for the Card-writer.

A Montreal grocer who has met with a large measure of success, states that he attributes his progress largely to the effective display cards which he has used. This form of advertising he maintains, will interest the prospective buyer more quickly than any other method. In substantiation of this statement he says: "If a person is passing a window and in it there is something which interests her she will, unless interested directly at the moment, pass by, but if this article has a card on it, stating the price, the chances are, if it is a bargain that the person in question will come in and make further inquiries. After this the probabilities are good for a sale."

Discussing this point it was suggested that the average grocer, perhaps, could not make his own display cards, and to get them printed would add another expense to the list. On this point, however, the grocer stated that the art of making creditable show cards was more simple than most merchants might suppose. Around nearly every grocery there is a clerk who has a gift for this sort of work, and the duty of keeping the windows well supplied with cards can be allotted to him. The necessary tools are simple and few, and the rest is merely practice. The first attempts may be somewhat crude, but soon they will begin to assume proper form. The ink is made by thinning ordinary lettering paint with turpentine, which comes ground in oil. It is necessary to ask for drop black ground in oil, as lamp black makes a grey color, and is liable to rub off. The brushes are known as camel's hair variety. No. 3 size, 1 inch, is best for the smaller figures and letters up to 2 inches high. No. 6 size, 1 inch, for larger figures and letters.

The stroke is always made with the flat side of the brush. The brush should be held loosely for obvious reasons. Bristol board, cut into appropriate shapes and sizes, should be used. First, until the eye becomes trained, the work should be laid out with a pencil, otherwise when completed, it may look lopsided. The pencil lines provide a guide so that the work can be accomplished more quickly. It is absolutely necessary to tell the story in the fewest possible words. This makes the card striking in appearance. A card which is too heavily laden with lettering requires too much time to read, for the casual passerby, therefore, it goes unread. Lucidity and brevity also have their advantages from the viewpoint of neatness. It is best to commence practice on a piece of brown paper, as the first efforts will in all probability, be failures. A corner of the store, or back room, may be arranged for the work. A sloping desk, which can be easily constructed of stray boxes, and the cover can be made to lift up, so that the tools can be placed away when done with them.

It is best to stick to a simple form of lettering. Don't experiment with too many styles, as the simpler the letters are the more surely is the message conveyed to the general public, whereas it may be lost in the vortex of too many flourishes. If the operator becomes very expert he can try his hand at mounting suitable and artistic clipped pictures from magazines and other sources and putting in with the brush a suitable background. Some of the pictures thus made are so well done that from a slight distance it is impossible to tell that the picture is pasted on.

AN IDEA FOR CANNED GOODS DISPLAY.

In a very well arranged grocery in one of the leading suburbs of Montreal may be seen a bright idea in the way of shelving. There are four round posts in this store, and each one of them has shelves encircling it. These shelves project far enough from the post all around to allow a tin of vegetables or fruit to stand on them. As the result, it appears to be a solid column of canned goods, as only the capital on the top of the column appears in view. This grocer states that it is surprising how much stock can be piled around the posts in this way, and the fact that each can rests on a shelf and not on its neighbor underneath, renders them accessible at all times. In cities where ground rental is high all sorts of schemes have to be resorted to to obtain additional space, and this offers a useful way of storing canned goods. All kinds of designs can be worked out, from a serpentine winding effect to a cross section pattern, like a barber's pole.

ORIGIN OF THE WHISK BROOM.

"Do you know," said an old blind broommaker of St. Louis, "that the whole broom trade of the United States, amounting as it does to many millions of dollars every year, originated from a single broom seed, planted by one of the greatest men that ever lived in America?

"A few years before the Revolutionary War a lady in England sent to a friend in Philadelphia, a little whisk broom, then regarded as a curiosity. She was showing it to Benjamin Franklin, who noticed near the end of one of the straws a single seed that, by oversight, had been left on the stem. He asked the lady's permission to take it off; then planted it in his garden, and by the end of the season was delighted with both the crop of straw and of seed. For two or three years every seed was carefully saved for planting, and when his crop began to assume respectable proportions he recommended the seed to his friends, told what use was made in England of the straw, and the manufacture of whisk brooms began. A long time was required to bring them into popularity, for hair brushes were then in use to do the work of the whisk broom; but by and by people began to find out that whisk brooms were better. At first they were used only to brush clothing, while hickory brooms and brooms made of willow and birch twigs were used on the floors; but the cornplant broom soon demonstrated its own superiority to either of the others, and the result was that by the beginning of the nineteenth century the corn broom had distanced its rivals, and in twenty years more willow and hickory brooms had been banished from houses and relegated to the rough work done on barn floors, decks of ships and similar places."

BOUNTIFUL WILD RICE CROP.

There is every promise of a bumper crop of wild rice on Rice Lake, Ont., this year. The straw is so heavy now that it is difficult to push a canoe through it. Harvesting will commence next week. With the present high price for rice, the Indians, who profit by it mostly, should make good wages out of it. The heavy crop of rice should make the wild ducks plentiful in that vicinity another fall. Rice Lake sportsmen are anticipating fine sport during the season, which opened on September 1. The parched rice sold last year for fifteen cents a pound—three times the price of seven or eight years ago.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Pickling and Preserving Lines Arriving Rather Freely—Native Fruit Displacing Imported Lines—Garden Lemons an Oddity.

The pickling season for fruit and vegetables is almost here. In fact some housekeepers are already laying in stocks. Pears and plums are the best lines among fruits, and gherkins and white onions among the vegetables. As yet very few green tomatoes and red cabbage is offered, and red tomatoes are not so plentiful as a short time ago. Red peppers are arriving on the markets in increasing quantities, and celery is again coming to the front.

Apples are being sold now in barrel lots, and immense quantities of peaches of all grades are being offered in the Ontario markets. The early varieties are plentiful enough, but the later lines in the Niagara District will only be about normal. Essex County, however, and Western Ontario generally report a good crop of all grades. Plums and pears will be fair in all grades, but not the bumper crop which the Spring and early Summer months promised.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Native fruits have declined in some lines, among which are blueberries, which are now being quoted at $1.25 for the 20-quart boxes. Apples are lower, being obtainable at $1.75 to $2.25 per bbl., Montreal. Melons are down to $3 to $5 per basket, of 13 to 14 melons. Blackberries are nearly done. In the market foreign fruits remain the same as at last quotation, with the exception of Verdelli lemons, which are now on the market at $3.75 to $4. The demand, generally, has been very good during the week.

VEGETABLES—There has been a very general depreciation in values all around, with the exception of cabbage, which is somewhat firmer now, being quoted at 50c dozen, instead of 25c to 40c, as at last quotation. Egyptian onions are practically off the market, very few now being obtainable. Vegetables are very much in demand, and it looks as though the past dullness, owing to too high prices, will be amply compensated for now, as supplies are arriving with a rush.

FISH—Haddock are scarce this week, and the price has advanced a little. Fresh cod are in good supply and those arriving are of superior quality. Dore, pike and lake trout are still scarce. Whitefish are now coming in more freely. There has been an improvement in the supply of brook trout, but the price continues high. There has been a little more enquiry for smoked haddies and kippers, and as the weather becomes cooler the demand will become greater. Labrador herrings are now quoted, and those which have arrived are of good quality. Green cod is also commencing to come in. There is a better demand for prepared fish, including skinless cod, in 100-lb. cases, dry cod in bundles, and boneless cod in blocks. Oysters continue slow in demand, but the market will improve with the advance of cooler weather. The trade passing during the week was good.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—A great range in both the price and the quality of fruit is noted on the market this week. Native lines have almost entirely supplanted the imported fruits. With the exception of oranges, lemons, bananas and watermelons, which may be regarded as staple lines, Canadian fruit has the call. California grapes in cases are still arriving and are finding normal sales, but the native grape lines are beginning to arrive more freely and may be expected to cut deeply into the business. Green grapes from Niagara are shown in small baskets and they look good. Pears of all qualities are coming in rapidly and almost every dealer has his own price. Plums, too, are at various quotations, and peaches may be obtained at various prices, from 25c to $1.25. Some splendid blackberries are arriving from the north country which compare very favorably with the earlier varieties. The great feature of the market, however, is melons, and they are present in all varieties and sizes. There was a drop in the price of melons early in the week, but they firmed up again with the great number of buyers who have been attending the market this week. All prices have declined a little since last quotation.

VEGETABLES—Almost all kinds of vegetable lines are now being offered. The early varieties are firming up slightly, but the later lines are declining somewhat in price. Potatoes are down and so are gherkins and generally all pickling lines. Cabbage is now sold in barrels. Cucumbers are of better quality than for some weeks past, while tomatoes look a little sounder. Canadian sweet potatoes are being shown in sample lots, and an interesting new line is the garden lemon, two baskets of which attracted much attention. Nobody seemed to know much about them. They are a lemon-shaped and colored vegetable from the north shore district, in the vicinity of Oakville. The skin is smooth and the inside looks as if related to the melon family. Evidently the taste for these garden lemons must be cultivated, for they did not strike the appetite of any person curious enough to taste them.

FISH—Practically unchanged are all fish lines this week. Supplies are fair and demand is better than during the past two months. Some of the fish dealers are handling blueberries from the Georgian Bay District, but if they were not so soggy, and if a little more care was taken in their picking, packing and shipping a better price might be obtained.

LARGE AND EARLY ORANGE CROP

Spanish Onions Dearer Than Last Year —Garden Lemons, a New Vegetable.

This year's orange crop, if present indications count for anything, will be an exceptionally large one. It will be gathered, too, a full month ahead of a year ago. Florida oranges may be expected to arrive on the Canadian markets on or shortly after the first of October. The quality of the fruit, too, is expected to be first class.

Lemons will be a fair crop, and but slightly above normal. They will be later than usual, though not very much later, and Canadians may expect to ask for them shortly after November 10.

The Spanish onion season in Canada begins towards the end of July or early in August and continues until March, when Egyptians come to the front to fill in the gap. Spanish onions are two shillings dearer than at this time last year, that is on fours, the size most in demand in this country. This is said to be due to the smallness of the crop; the other sizes being more plentiful and but little advanced in price. At present, owing to the markets being stocked with Canadian onions, there is little demand for the Spanish, so this advance is not much noticed. But later on there will be an outcry, and if the demand does not come up to normal there will surely be a decline, small crop or not.

A new vegetable made its appearance this week on the Toronto market and has aroused a large amount of curiosity. It is called the garden lemon. It resembles a lemon in color and appearance, with this difference, that it is larger, and the skin is smooth. It is related to the melon family in that the inside resembles a small-size cantaloupe, but the taste is somewhat akin to the egg plant. The taste is not agreeable on first acquaintance and must be cultivated. The lemon grows on a small tree or shrub and comes from the Oakville District. Here is a chance for the grower to indulge in experimental work if he feels so inclined.

A NEW FRUIT COMPANY.

The Imperial Fruit Company, Montreal, has been incorporated with a capital of $49,000, to carry on business as planters, growers and dealers in fruits, vegetables and produce, and to import and carry on its own vessels produce between Canada, the Bahamas and the West Indies. The directors are D. W. Campbell, F. Fowler, I. Hibbert, Jno. Wallace and R. C. Barry, all of Montreal.

HOW TO HANDLE BANANAS EASILY.

All grocers, and in fact everyone who has been compelled to handle banangs, knows what an awkward proposition they are to hang up. This is so because they have to be hung up while all the supporting is done from the top instead of underneath, and from a step ladder it amounts to virtually holding them out at arms length to hang them. This difficulty has been overcome by a Montreal grocer, who has a store which contains many labor-saving devices, due to his ingenuity. This device in particular consists of a small ratchet pulley block and paul, suspended from a hook screwed into the ceiling. With this ratchet the pulley is permitted to turn only in one direction. This fact allows the grocer to elevate the bunch to any height he wishes by pulling on the other end of the rope and as quickly as the strain is released on the rope with which they are elevated, the ratchet prevents the bananas from falling back.

A FEW STORE RULES.

Don't forget to commend the clerk when he does something well.

Never misrepresent your goods. Don't claim that they will do something that they will not. Besides, you may cause your clerk to practice such a rule to the extremes.

Don't let your store get a name as a "hang out." Disregard the idlers, don't converse with them; stumble over them two or three times and they will soon realize that they are in the way.

Take the clerk into your confidence. He hears more criticism of the store than you do.

Don't forget that your show window is your best salesman or your worst foe, as you make it. It is the only means passersby have of judging your store.

Learn the names of all your customers. Calling a person by name goes a long way toward breaking down that barrier of reserve which otherwise is so hard to get around.

Study every customer and cultivate his acquaintance. It will help you increase your sales.

Last, but largest, wear a smile; don't let a customer see a scowl or an expressionless face when he enters the place.

THE STORE WINDOW AT NIGHT.

The Guelph Correspondent Discusses a Seldom Considered Feature of Advertising.

"It's a howling success," said a prominent grocer to me to-night, and on inquiring what, he said: "Just what you see." He meant the idea of leaving his windows lit up at night. Well, to prove the fact, we stepped inside and sat and smoked a cigar, also counted the number of people who stopped and criticized that window and its contents; also heard some of those criticisms which were really good to hear. Some stopped, looked and went on without remark; a few women picked out articles to buy next morning, and others said I must tell So-and-so. I began to see where the howling success came in. Then along came some of the boys we know in the grocery business, and then that window went under a most rigid inspection, but no serious fault was found. The merchant counted 20 out of 45 people we saw that night the next morning as customers or purchasers, and then he really did not see half. Now, it really does not cost much, and the people in a city like Guelph are out sight-seeing in the evenings and have no place to go, except to the 5c shows, and what better idea than to have them entertained by your window display at so little expense to you. I being a little inquisitive, asked him, knowing him to be a large newspaper advertiser, which he considered best. He said: "Now, look here, young man," (I am glad he said I was young), "if you had a team of horses and both were doing all you required of them, which would you sell?" I told him neither, if I needed them. "Well, that is just my position exactly. My advertising pays both ways, and I always keep in the limelight some how. I consider we do the best grocery business in Guelph. We also consider our advertising helps us to do it, and if we had to give up one or the other we would be inclined to use our lighted windows at nights." From what I saw and heard I agreed with him and still think as he does. Both ways do certainly pay.

The grocery stock of Harry Elliott, Hamilton, is advertised for sale.

Mrs. A. Cassidy, Pembroke, has sold the grocery business she has conducted for the past twenty years to Wm. Engley.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information of Interest to Clerks and Grocers About the Goods They Are Handing Over the Counter.

The History of Tabasco.

In the Spring of 1866 a traveler, returning from Southern Mexico, brought with him a number of pepper seeds, some of which he presented to E. McIlhenny, of Iberia Parish, La. The latter, like many other Southerners, was very fond of hot condiments, and planted these pepper seeds, and, finding the fruit well flavored, made experiments with the peppers, trying to preserve them in such a form that they would retain their strength and flavor. During the Winter of 1866 he made a pepper sauce which his friends pronounced excellent, and its success induced him to plant more peppers the next year, and in the winter of 1867 the celebrated "Tabasco Sauce" first made its appearance in public. Having made a sauce that met his expectations, the next thing was to give it a name. Mr. McIlhenny finally decided upon "Tobasco," because the seed of the pepper came originally from the State of Tabasco, Mexico. The Tabasco pepper-sauce factory is known as the "laboratory," and no kitchen could have more attention given to it as to cleanliness in all its details.

The World's Tea Production.

The world's production of tea, at the present time, according to the Tropical Agriculturist, is about 682,000,000 pounds. This figure is based upon the quantity exported from tea-producing countries. In 1897 the total production was 556,000,000 pounds, a gain of 127,000,000 pounds in ten years; or 22 per cent. Changes have taken place in this decade in the source of exports. China, which was once the leading tea producer of the world, has lost ground, while India and Ceylon have increased their exports. Java has, likewise, gained even more rapidly than any of the other countries mentioned. In 1896 that country exported 9,568,732 pounds, against 27,760,000 pounds in 1906. The British colony of Natal, 1896, exported 792,100 pounds, and in 1906, 1,650,000 pounds. Apart from these two minor countries, India, Ceylon, China and Japan are the leading producers and exporters.

Safety Matches.

These were first invented about 1855 by a Swedish gentleman named Lundstrom, a Master of Arts, but also engaged in the world-renowned match factory of the Jonkoping Co., at the town of Jonkoping, in Sweden.

Safety matches may be defined as matches which will only strike on the boxes. The idea is a very simple but a very clever one. The inflammable ingredients are merely kept separate, one mixture being placed on the end of the match, while the other is spread on the sides of the boxes and called friction. The inflammable material into which the match is dipped ordinarily consists of the chlorate and bichromate of potassium, red lead and antimony sulphide; or, say, 40 parts of minium, 30 parts of antimony trisulphide and 6.7 parts of gum arabic. The friction or striking surface is generally prepared by mixing, say, 9 parts of amorphous phosphorus, 7 of iron pyrites, pulverized and sifted, 3 of pulverized glass, and one part of glue or gum, with the requisite quantity of water. It is therefore only on a surface smeared with the latter mixture that the former will ignite.

What is a Fresh Egg?

The question, What constitutes a "fresh egg?" was settled at the concluding session of the first congress of the French Milk Industry and Dairy Produce Societies, recently held in Paris.

After a lively discussion, joined in by 200 members of the congress, the following definition was agreed on:

"A fresh egg is an egg which, on being tested, is found not to have suffered in any way from evaporation, and which shows no trace of decomposition."

Valencia Almonds.

THE IDEAL STORE FIXTURE

"WALKER BINS"

There is a personal satisfaction in having a store equipped with Walker Bin Fixtures.

The beauty of their design and their elegant appearance are unsurpassed, and for this, as well as for the peculiar attractiveness of their display, they impress the customer and offer a continued and irresistible temptation to buy. Their compactness and convenience are appreciated by the clerk, who finds everything he wants, when and where he wants it. They are a joy forever to the proprietor, for he sees his sales increasing, his losses, from waste, dirt, insects and samplers, diminishing and his store service prompt and effective.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

BUILDING A DEMAND

A TALK TO PRODUCERS

IT is a well-established fact that if you can get the best class of people to use your goods, the mass of the people will speedily follow suit. Consequently it is a very wise policy for manufacturers to help retail dealers by advertising their products to the best class of consumers. The most reliable advertising medium by which a manufacturer may talk to the leading people of every community in Canada is THE BUSY MAN'S MAGAZINE. Its circulation is primarily a quality circulation. Every reader is in the "good buyer" class. There is positively no other publication which so thoroughly covers the Canadian field from one ocean to the other. If you are a manufacturer it will pay you to investigate.

WOOD'S PURE PACKAGE TEA

MAY QUEEN PRIMROSE
FLEUR-DE-LIS
THOMAS WOOD & CO., Importers
BOSTON AND MONTREAL

"IT IS IN THE AIR"

How often one hears that phrase applied to some condition of the public mind! A good many things get into the air, thus wasting the best parts of the originals. You may take the finest Tea in the world, for instance, handle it loosely and carelessly, leaving it open to the light of day and the dust and much of its fragrance and rich flavor disappears, while impurities creep in. In

we have a "sealed book," an air-tight guard against all foreign substances, while the captivating flavors are retained—imprisoned for the consumer.

WOOD'S Packages are all TEA—the purest and the best.

Natural Malt Vinegar

White, Cottell & Co.'s delicious vinegar may not have the prettiest label, or bottle. It is not perhaps the lowest priced, nor widest advertised. But,—here's the point—it is a pure (mark the word "pure") malt vinegar, perfectly brewed, of delicious flavor, rich, full strength and combines in itself all the attributes of a perfect vinegar.

The Handy Package———

Primrose Cream Cheese

Four points of merit

CONVENIENCE
PROFIT

The grocer selling package cheese will find in Primrose Cream Cheese a high-grade, full-cream cheese, mild and delicious at a moderate price. Essentially an economical cheese—it spreads like butter—and one which from the standpoint of usefulness appeals to every thrifty housekeeper. The discriminating grocer will find it in his best interests to push the sale of Primrose Cream Cheese; it means satisfied customers on the one hand and yields a handsome profit on the other.

Two Sizes—15 and 25 cents.

Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence Invited.

Handle Canned Goods That Are Recognized Leaders.

A modern philosopher has discovered that "The more aims you have in life the less likely you are to hit anything." Concentration is one of the secrets of success. There is a wealth of wisdom in this for the merchant. Concentrate your efforts on selling well-known lines and you'll be ahead at the end of the year. Don't load your shelves with a dozen brands of uncertain Canned Goods and keep your customers forever experimenting.

Canadian Canners' Peas Have Created A Big Trade for us

And they will do the same for you. We particularly recommend our Grade No. 2 SWEET WRINKLE PEAS. They are deliciously sweet and tender, and rapidly win new friends wherever introduced. They have a constant and ready sale all the year round. They are genuine business builders and can be sold at a good margin of profit.

Our Peas are packed in four grades as follows:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

TO THE TRADE:

England consumes nearly four times as much of

as of all others, save India, although she has been getting it only one-eighth as long.

"WHY?"

Mainly because, of all Western peoples, the English best know tea.

For the Same Reason

England consumes about 6 lbs. and Canada 5 lbs. to the United States 1¼ lbs. of tea per capita. Every English Grocer knows tea; he has made it a study.

How to Prepare Grocery Advertising

Advice and Hints for the Retailer in Using Newspaper Space—What is Really Good Ad. Copy?—The Part "Position" Plays—Some Seasonable Examples From London—Department Conducted by W. F. Ralph.

During a recent address before the Trade Press Association, at Chicago, R. R. Shuman, assistant editor of the Novelty News, summed up the question of copy preparation as follows:

"Now, what is good copy?

"It is simply a sensible, succinct, striking selling talk, with emphasis on the right points and only enough detail to excite the desire to possess the thing advertised, or, at least, the inclination on the part of the reader to make further investigation.

Adequate Space Necessary.

"An adequate space is a necessary part of good copy. The best page ad. ever written is not good copy when it crowded in 6-point type into a quarter-page. That ad. is like the fellow on the platform who talks well, but in a voice so weak that few can hear him; and on the other hand, a full page announcement that does not announce is not good copy, even though the size of the ad. forced a certain amount of attention. That ad. is like the big bellowing salesman who forces your attention by his stage presence and makes you hear him by force of pure lung power, but says nothing worth hearing when he does get your ear. The best salesmen are the ones who have a logically connected talk, clearly, briefly and convincingly presented, and the best ads. are the ones that do the same thing.

Hints on Type and Display.

"On the important matter of type and display, I wish to offer the following observations, which are my own purely, and which I do not present as being either universal or infallible. I do believe, however, that their application is sufficiently broad to make them well worth thought.

1. The successful ad., typographically, is the one that is easily and quickly read. The contrasts in heights and the predominance of curved outlines make it easier for the eye to grasp display lines in caps and lower case than in all caps, so the cap and lower case line is preferable to all caps.

2. At least one-third the space in each ad. should be white paper, as less than this does not afford the proper contrast or high light to make easy reading. In figuring this space, I count leading between the lines as part of the white space. In fact, I would lay it down as a general proposition that no part of any ad. should be solid, and that if copy compels it, 6-point leaded is better than 8-point solid.

3. Black against white is more easily read than white against black; hence, reverse plates are not good advertising.

4. As contrast is the soul of display, the one man who has his ad. set in light space in a trade paper usually gets a bigger money's worth than the other ten on the page who want the blackest kind of display. Emphasis, mind you, is a matter of contrast, not of big type, and a 6-point paragraph set narrow measure and surrounded by a wide area of white space will be read where a page full of circus type may be overlooked.

5. For the same reason under the present preponderance of borders of all kinds, the borderless ad. has the advantage of display when sandwiched in among a bunch of black boxes.

The Place for the Name.

6. The advertiser's name should follow, not precede, the thing advertised, because people who read advertisements are looking for things to buy, and the thing a man has to sell should be given precedence over name and address.

7. One series of type should be used throughout an ad. rather than mixing the series, as jarring type faces destroy the continuity of attention of the reader. Successful advertising is "easy reading" worth reading.

8. Display lines should be few. The best ads. have only one, or at least two. When a woman writes a letter and underscores two-thirds of her words, she emphasises nothing. It is not the loud voice of the orator that commands and holds attention, but the contrasts between oratorical and conversational, and the less frequently he makes the rafter ring, the more effective will be the climaxes when they do come.

9. One point made and clinched in an ad. is more valuable to the advertiser than forty points droned in a non-convincing monotone. This one point should be given emphasis in the type display, with the others held down in proportion to space limitations.

The Successful Advertisement.

"My next type is the successful advertisement. It is set in just enough space, not necessarily a full page either, because there is such a thing as using too big a space just as it is entirely

The Secret of Good Pickles Is In the Vinegar You Use

Every housekeeper aims to have her pickles crisp and hard till the last are used, and her great disappointment is when they turn soft after remaining in the vinegar a few months. This is caused by the vinegar not being strong enough to neutralize the water in the vegetable, and have enough left to keep the pickle crisp and firm.

By selling our customers from year to year the purest and best vinegar we can buy, our trade has grown until to-day we can safely say that we have the largest vinegar trade in London. Our special white pickling vinegar we recommend because of its great strength and absolute purity. Costs you a little more than some other kinds, but easily worth it when such excellent results are assured. Delivered in clean stone jugs at 75c gallon. This vinegar should be used cold for pickling.

Our Imported English Malt is the best grade we can buy, and being properly aged has mellow, fine flavor. The price per gallon is 75c.

It is easy to add an X to the vinegar you sell. We do not handle X grade. Our grades are XX and XXX Cider and White Wines, 40c and 50c gallon. These are the best of their kind and are excellent vinegars when properly used.

In spices we guarantee everything we sell to be absolutely pure.

A very high grade of English Mustard is another of our specialties at pickling time. Leave us your orders for silver skin onions, gherkins in all sizes and choice cauliflowers. Your 'phone orders for anything in the pickling line will be carefully filled. Call 1866 or 317. T. A. Rowat & Co., 234 Dundas Street.

possible to be too noisy or too emphatic in presenting your selling talk by word of mouth. This successful ad., then, has a space proportionate to the importance of the message it imparts, and the message consists of the simplest possible statement of informing facts and figures; tells the reader in logical sequence just what he wants to know, or as much as it is wise to let him know in advance, before actual negotiations are opened."

It's All in the Advertisement.

It is easy to understand how completely an advertisement may be killed by its makeup, but its position, whether at top or bottom of column, or in the middle, has really much less to do with the matter than you might suppose. Try the experiment of opening, at random, the well-filled advertising pages of any newspaper, and observe what portion of the printed matter attracts your attention most particularly. It is not always that which occupies a preferred position—so-called. Very likely it is a little advertisement, with no position at all, to speak of, but so cleverly prepared, and possessing so much individuality of its own that it overtops everything else on the page.

Some Seasonable Examples.

Seasonable advertising is the best of advertising. This fact is apparently fully recognized by T. A. Rowat & Co., the London grocers. We have received a number of pickling goods ads. from them, which are pretty nearly above adverse criticism. We reproduce several of these; among them, one ad. of the "reader" variety, that is, ads. which like ordinary news items, have only the headline displayed. The line of informative talk on the pickling question given in this ad., will undoubtedly increase the use of the better grades of vinegars and spices among London housekeepers.

The half-column display ad. reproduced would make a better impression were it to contain fewer displayed lines. It is a well-known axiom among advertisers that too much display rather weakens than strengthens an ad. The headline of this ad. is really a four-liner, and is, therefore, rather too long for the maximum of strength. The multiplicity of items, however, renders over-display unavoidable.

GALT CORRESPONDENCE.

September 8.—Labor Day was marked in Galt by a very successful celebration. Trades unions and bands were present from Preston, Guelph and Brantford. There was a big parade and an afternoon and evening performance at the park. One of the features of the parade was the immense float of the Goldie Milling Company, makers of "Star" flour. A big load of barrels had been prettily decorated and on the top was a band composed of youngsters. The float was drawn by four horses and attracted much attention.

Business in the grocery line has been good during the past fortnight. Sugar is moving out briskly owing to the preserving operations of Galt's housewives. Fruit is a drug on the market. The buyers have conceived the idea that before the end of the season prices will drop considerably and they will then buy. The grocers say, however, that there will be no drop, so that in all probability some of Galt's male population will be forced to do without the Winter's supply of peaches and such like.

The Galt market may now be numbered with the largest in Western Ontario. For some months past the market has been gradually increasing until it has now assumed immense proportions. And the best of it all is that all the produce is disposed of each market day.

Some time ago W. Jopson was appointed official collector for the Galt Retail Merchants' Association. Mr. Jopson devoted his whole time to collecting for merchants who were members of the association, and the plan has proved to be most successful. Many accounts which had been given up as hopeless, have been collected, and no friction has been caused between the creditors and debtors. The collector approaches those in arrears with a proposition that so much should be paid every week, and the sum mentioned is often as low as 25 cents. When the promise to pay a certain amount each week is obtained Mr. Jopson personally visits the party in arrears and invariably receives the weekly amount. The merchants are now coming to realize that had this course been adopted long ago there would be practically no creditors on their books. They recognize that their mistake was in selling goods on the instalment plan and then neglecting to insist on the payments when they became due. So successful has the collector's work been in Galt that Preston merchants have requested his services and hereafter a portion of his time will be spent in that town. Galt merchants are extremely well pleased with the success of their plan.

The picnic under the auspices of the Retail Merchants' Association was a financial success and the business men will undertake to have the picnic on a larger scale next year.

Will there be a drop in the price of canned goods this Fall? Local merchants say that there is no likelihood of a decline, but conditions point otherwise.

Musk and watermelons are a drug on the market, and they can be had for a song. Crawford peaches are arriving and are being disposed of at one dollar per basket.

Western Province Notes

British Columbia Fruits Finding Good Market in Vancouver—Saskatoon Grocers Have Been Holidaying.

VANCOUVER.

Sept. 5.—The largest single consignment of peaches to come into Vancouver was brought by the Princess Royal last week from Seattle. It consisted of 1,043 boxes and along with these were 150 boxes of apples and 120 boxes of grapes. Each box contains 20 pounds of fruit, and a cent a pound duty is paid.

For the first time since the Cowichan creamery was started it is running behind this year on its output. This is the more remarkable since the price of butter has always been good, and is now up another five cents and the creamery has such a good reputation that is unable to meet the demand. For the nine months ending July 31 the output was 135,268 pounds, as against 139,179 for the same period of last year.

John E. Mackin, of Kamloops, has organized the Western Cigar Manufacturing Company, which will take over and enlarge the business recently started by Mr. Mackin. Twenty men are employed.

J. T. Armstrong, who has been manager of Schubert's store, at Penticton, has gone to Ottawa on a holiday trip.

Because of a rapidly expanding business, G. W. Shideler, manager of the Fruitvale Broom Factory, at Fruitvale, near Nelson, B.C., is putting up an addition 36x16 feet and two stories high. When the building is finished there will be three machines working, and thirty dozen brooms will be turned out daily. A traveler will then be placed on the road, the Nelson merchants handling the output at present. The broom straw is brought from Illinois, but arrangements are being made to secure a supply from Oklahoma. Mr. Shideler has imported seed and is making a test of growing the straw at Fruitvale. The young crop is now over a foot high. If this experiment is successful, it will mean much for the district. A carload of straw costs about $1,000.

Mayell & Co., of Toronto, have now a local representative in Vancouver to place their coffees, spices, baking powders, etc., before the trade.

A new brand of macaroni on the market is that manufactured by Ferrand, Renaud & Company, of Lyons and Paris France. It is handled by Kelly, Douglas & Company, and if they have had it, it is only now coming well before the public. It sells at the same price as that manufactured locally.

The prices of butter and eggs have started on their annual climb for the winter altitudes. Local eggs are at 38c and 40c, with eastern No. 1 selected at 28c and eastern No. 2, from 23c to 25c. New Alberta butter is same as the local at 30c, giving a retail figure of 35c.

Joseph Crankshaw, proprietor of the famous salt beds on Carmen Island, off the coast of Mexico, is up north on a visit. Much of this product is brought to British Columbia by the new Mexican line boats, and Mr. Crankshaw is combining business with pleasure. He says that Carmen Island presents a phenomenon not yet satisfactorily explained by scientists. The salt is found in a large lagoon, about 1,000 acres in extent, cut off by a coral reef. It is many feet deep, and at low tide the work of digging is carried on. The strange thing is that at full tide the supply is daily replenished, making the deposit inexhaustible. It is found 99 per cent. pure, and all that has to be done is to wash it and dry it.

A Business Protective Association has been formed in this city to act as arbitrators in cases of business disputes and also to handle collections.

The American fruit market is not in such a good condition this year with the result that more fruit is coming from the South. Notwithstanding this, the British Columbia product is finding a ready market, and the demand is by no means greater than the supply. This, too, with the Okanagan producing about half as much again as last year. The markets in the middle west are enlarging all the time, as well as those in Great Britain and Australia and New Zealand. From Victoria large shipments are being made of apples and plums, and the report is that the fruit is ranking better than that of previous years. Prunes and crab apples are also beginning to arrive.

WHAT THEY THINK OF IT.

The following letters which came in entirely unsolicited, are samples of the kind words our subscribers are continually saying about the paper. It seems to be well worth the price to these business men:

'The Canadian Grocer is one of the best trade papers in existence to-day,'' said a Galt groceryman, when discussing affairs with your correspondent. ''We watch for it each week and find it a sure authority on conditions in all parts of the Province.''—Galt Correspondent.

''I want to congratulate you on your article, 'Men Who Sell Things.' This is the kind of matter to please both the wholesale and retail trade. I have our branch store managers reading this article closely, as well as recommending it to my traveler friends. Many of the latter are reading it closely.''—Bradley & Son, St. Catharines.

I certainly like your paper, The Canadian Grocer, and think every general merchant should be a subscriber to it for many reasons.—C. A. Elsley, Campbellville, Ont.

BRANDON.

September 5.—In the West those who can afford holidays usually have them in the retrospective at this date. A number of Brandon grocery celebrities went East this year. After a number of successful years in business here, Mr. J. F. Price visited his friends in St. Catharines, Ont., and he has returned feeling as fresh as a schoolboy. Our old friend, Frank Scott, has been down at the Petrolea old boys reunion, and although not eligible for the fat man's race, he has come back with quite an Olympian spring in his step. And so on, they are all gathering home and settling down for a strenuous fall and winter. There are still a few who say they cannot afford this annual holiday. It is not what money they spend, but what they get for it they ought to look at.

Writing of windows, how is it that so many of our grocers during the month of August have their show windows so unpresentable? Walking along Rosser Avenue and up the other business streets after a short holiday, your correspondent saw at least a half-dozen of stores having their windows dressed (?) with a crate or two of peaches and plums, a broken box of apples, a case of oranges and a few other straggling samples of fruit, such as one sees in the Italian quarter of an Eastern city. Usually the Italian has the advantage. What good does it do a high-class grocer to throw stuff away this way into his front window just to be in line with five or six others? Fruit must be sold, but that kind of display does not sell it. My opinion is that a single large glass dish with an assortment of seasonable fruit neatly arranged with a background of the dozens of articles suitable at that season for picnic parties and the home dinner table would bring in better business, a larger profit, and would sell more fruit.

Our markets here are much as usual at this season. Eggs and butter are scarcer and dearer, and if one can at anytime safely assume the role of prophet it would be pretty safe to predict 50c per dozen for eggs in February. Potatoes are plentiful, and after a light rainfall, through the summer, are of a better quality than last year.

Some Bright Stores at St. Louis de Mile End—Large Shipments of Nova Scotia Apples to London.

MONTREAL.

September 8.—The monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association. which should have been held Thursday evening, September 3, was postponed until the first Thursday in October. At this meeting the nomination of officers for the Association for the ensuing year will take place, and the remaining business concerning the picnic will be disposed of.

John Graham, corner of Drummond and St. Catherine Streets, has returned from a holiday spent at Bic, Que.

WALTER C. GODEN.

Late of The Red Rose Tea Co., who is Making Good in Insurance.

A. G. Brand, of Brand Bros. & Co., Glasgow, was in Montreal recently on his way to Quebec, where he will embark on the Empress of Britain for home. Mr. Brand enjoys the distinction of being the head of the first British house to buy Canadian wheat. The first shipment of Manitoba wheat went forward consigned to this house thirty-three years ago. The original shipping bill is kept in the Board of Trade at Winnipeg. Mr. Brand has just completed an extensive tour of the Canadian West, and is delighted with the prospects of the country.

A. Gravel, of Gravel Freres, corner of St. Catherine Street and McGill College Avenue, has returned from a holiday spent at Val Morin.

The warehouse of Meldrum Brothers, produce merchants, 587-591 St. Paul Street, was the scene of a slight fire on Tuesday night.

Walter C. Gaden, who for several years was the representative of Red Rose Tea in Montreal, recently won a silver service cabinet in competition among the forty agents scattered throughout the world of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, with which Mr. Gaden is now associated. Walter was always a hustler, and it is only to be expected he would win the prize in such a contest.

ST. LOUIS DE MILE END.

September 8.—There is one thoroughfare in Montreal, or St. Louis de Mile End, to be exact, which boasts of more grocery stores to the square yard than any other similar length of macadam in Quebec Province, at least. It is Fairmount Avenue, to which reference is made. There are grocers here by the dozen, and they seem to thrive, for all the stores are up-to-date and prosperous looking, and the proprietors say that they do a good business. St. Louis de Mile End is a suburb of Montreal, has been for years, but it is only within the past five years that it has been building up in a manner to attract notice. With the influx of people to the place there has, naturally, been much activity in a commercial way, but probably no other branch of trade has been so well represented in this development as the grocery. And it is very curious that so many stores should locate upon Fairmount Avenue.

Veteran and beginner alike are situated here. One of the oldest grocers in this part of the country is the proprietor of Swift's grocery and provision store, corner Fairmount and Waverley. For thirty-three years J. Herbert Swift has been at the wheel, the last five having been spent in his present location. He was on De Montigny Street, Montreal, for thirteen years. As might be expected, Mr. Swift has seen many changes, and he is likely, as he says himself, to "see many more," before he steps out.

A bright, clean store is that of T. J. Stevenson, known by the firm name of Kyle & Stevenson. Just a few months ago Mr. Stevenson suffered the loss of his partner, the popular "Billy" Kyle, who was drowned. It was a severe blow to the young firm, which had been established but a short time, but "T. J." was equal to the emergency. Many up-to-date ideas are in use in the running of the store, which is large and airy. There are two entrances, and one of the departments carefully looked after is the provision counter. A good idea noticed was a shelf all around the walls just below the ceiling, on which displays of cereals were made.

Another young grocer who is doing well is H. G. Smith. Only two years in business, he has two stores. One he looks after himself, at the corner of Fairmount and St. Urbain Streets, while a bright young grocer, R. Ferguson, attends to the other, corner Esplanade and Villeneuve. The second store was opened in April of this year. Mr. Smith was connected with Davies, Limited, Toronto, before he broke into the grocery business.

With a lively looking store in St. Louis and a general store in Grand Freniere, Que., D. Hamilton is kept clear of idleness. He has been located in St. Louis for four years, and says things are going well with him. He felt that a store in the city offered greater opportunities for development and forsook the active management of the country business to establish himself near the metropolis.

Quite a large trade is transacted by the Fairmount Market, corner Clark and Fairmount, of which T. A. Brunet is the owner, while Jos. A. Sansregret is another progressive retailer.

It is generally admitted by the grocers in this suburb that the people are good pay, the very poor class not being represented to any extent in the population.

HALIFAX.

Sept. 7.—The export business from the port of Halifax is now very brisk and the season is expected to be an unusually busy one. The first shipment of apples is going forward this week. The Furness liner, Rappahannock, is now loading fifteen thousand barrels for the London market. The steamer Soko-to will load five thousand barrels of potatoes besides a large quantity of flour, etc., for Havana. The Furness liner, London City, sailing for Liverpool this week, took five hundred cases of lobsters and seven hundred boxes of cheese.

The Pickford and Black liner, Sobo, which arrived from the West Indies yesterday, is now discharging six thousand bags of sugar.

Trade, generally speaking, is in a very satisfactory condition, and the outlook for a good autumn business is most promising. Good crops all round are bound to add a stimulus to trade and put money into circulation. The high prices, however, to a large extent, re-restrict business in a very large measure. Butter is considered to be far too high in price for the season of the year. The season has been an exceptionally good one for pasturing and as the natural result the dairy industry should have benefited. Some of the dealers are now asking 27 cents, retail for choice tubs of dairy butter, and 30 cents for creamery. The receipts of butter this week have been very light, but this is accounted for in a measure by the fact that many of the farmers were busy preparing for the Nova Scotia Exhibition now on in this city. Eggs are not coming in as plentifully as they should be, and a large amount of the stock marketed can only be classed as seconds. They are quoted at 23 cents. The demand is light at present, due probably to the consumption of small fruits.

The announcement made public here this week that the Government will pay one-third of the express charges on shipments of fresh fish from points in the Maritime Provinces to Quebec and Ontario, was well received. Halifax and other large fish centres in Nova Scotia will benefit greatly under this new arrangement. Most of the shipments of fish are sent from Nova Scotia to the American market, the shipments from the other provinces being comparatively small. Canso, Halifax, Digby and Yarmouth will all reap considerable benefit. It is supposed that the new arrangement will cover oysters, and if this is so, the Island dealers will benefit, as thousands of barrels of oysters are sent every season from the Garden of the Gulf to the Montreal market. The people of Toronto and the inland towns will now be able to get fresh fish.

Five vessels of the Lunenburg Banking fleet arrived here during the week and reported having catches aggregating five thousand quintals of cod fish.

Harvesting commenced last week in Prince Edward Island. Considerable oats have been cut and many fields are ripening so that cutting will be general in a short time if fine weather continues. The straw in some places is reported short but in others a fair crop is expected. The potatoes look well and the earlier varieties show a good yield of excellent quality.

The estate of W. E. Crowe, grocer, whose death occurred last week, has been appraised at $14,000.

George Mitchell, a former member of the Nova Scotia Legislature, and one of the most successful West India merchants in Halifax, died at his home in this city during the week, aged 63 years. For years he was a member of G. P. Mitchell & Sons, and about six years ago, when that firm was formed into a limited company, he was made president. The firm does a large business with the West Indies both in importing and exporting, vessels flying their own flag trading between Halifax and the Southern Islands. Mr. Mitchell was a man of fine qualities and his death is a distinct loss to the city in which he was born.

ST. JOHN.

September 7.—The recent drop in sugar is likely to be short lived, as dealers here expect the price to change at any time. Quotations on molasses show an advance of one cent as predicted last week.

The only other change in the price of staples is an advance of a quarter cent on lard.

In the produce market, potatoes, carrots, beets and turnips are coming in plentifully, and are now quoted at the following prices per barrel: Potatoes, $1.25; beets, $1.10 to $1.25; carrots, $1 to $1.25; turnips, 75c to $1.

Eggs are selling retail at 25c to 30c a dozen, and butter ranges from 25c to 32c a pound.

The wholesale tea warehouse of T. H. Estabrooks, on Mill Street, was broken into on Saturday, September 5, and $530 in cash stolen from the cash-box. Entrance was obtained through a window in the office. The police are working on the case and they report they have a clue which may lead to further developments.

Tons of small sardine herring have been washed up on the shores of Courtney Bay on the eastern side of the city by the high tides during the past few days. As the fish were left high on the shore, city workmen are being employed to bury them or dump them in deep water, as the odor has been anything but pleasant as decomposition set in.

W. Frank Hatheway, M.P.P., lacked only one vote of being selected as the candidate of the Liberal-Conservative party to represent St. John City and County in the Federal Parliament.

H. B. Schofield, of Schofield Bros., paper dealers, is spoken of as a probable candidate for the Liberal nomination in this constituency.

NEWCASTLE, N.B.

Sept. 7.—Miss Ellen Catherine, daughter of ex-Mayor Patrick Hennessy, one of the leading grocers of this part of New Brunswick, was married on the 2nd of September to Alderman Charles J. Morrissy, son of Hon. John Morrissy, Chief Commissioner of Public Works. Mr. and Mrs. Morrissy are spending their honeymoon in Montreal, Toronto and New York.

Two new grocery stores are being built in Millerton, the rapidly growing town, seven or eight miles from Newcastle.

Proposed changes in the Fredericton branch of the I.C.R. will make, it is believed, the main line run to Newcastle instead of, as now, to Chatham. The faster service will enable the people of Borestown, Doaktown and Blackville, who now buy largely in Fredericton to do their business here and at Chatham.

Hard times has found several of the local merchants but grocers are doing a good business still. J. D. Paulin, our newest grocer, has lately doubled his store-room and greatly enlarged his stock.

Miss Bessie McIntosh, of Harcourt, has removed her grocery, recently established, to the MacLeod stand, beside the I.C.R. station, one of the largest stores in Harcourt.

Andrew Dunn, the veteran grocer of Kent County, now 83 years of age, is in failing health. His business at Harcourt is now managed by his daughter, Miss Jessie P. Dunn.

Clarence Wry, grocer and butcher, has removed from Harcourt to Salmon River, Kent County.

Randolph & Sons, wholesale provision merchants, whose headquarters are in Fredericton, are building a new brick warehouse in Chatham, N.B., to accommodate increased business.

Campbellton badly needs a public market. The unsuccessful sellers of country produce now, after the merchants are supplied, peddle their goods from house to house, destroying the merchants' market. Peddlars require no license.

TRADE NOTES.

A curator has been appointed for D. Pelletier, Cedar Hall, Que.

D. Legault & Co., general merchants, St. Paul, Que., have been registered.

J. A. Bradley, grocer, Vancouver, has sold his business to Anderson & Ross.

The assets of J. Chabelle, grocer, Chicoutimi, are to be sold on September 11.

The assets of F. Tremblay, general merchant, Les Eboulements, Que., have been sold.

CHATHAM.

September 8.—That the Canadian Packing Company, recently burned out at London, are likely to locate here, is the chief item of news this week. Though at the moment of writing nothing definite has been decided, both Manager Rechnitzer, of the company, and Chairman Westman, of the Civic Industrial Committee, unite in stating that Chatham's prospects look good; though St. Thomas, Palmerston and other places are also understood to be after the industry. Among the inducements Chatham has to offer are understood to be a free site, a fixed assessment for a period of years, power from natural gas at $8 per horse-power, guaranteed, and ample fire protection. Still more important is the fact that Chatham is right in the centre of a great hog raising district. Hitherto the company is stated to have been handicapped by the fact that, located in London, it had to procure its supply of hogs from a considerable distance, the large proportion of them being shipped from Chatham. With the establishment of the factory here, there will be a great saving in freight. While Ald. Westman states that the point has not come up, there is no doubt that local financial men would not hesitate to take stock in the concern should that be desired. There being no competitive plant within a wide radius, this vicinity also offers an excellent market for the manufactured products. For years past a concern of this nature has been earnestly desired for Chatham, and the London company, in locating here, will not only secure the material advantages previously mentioned, but will head off competition that, in a few years, would otherwise be inevitable.

John McCorvie, head of John McCorvie & Son, returned last Wednesday night from a two months' trip to the Old Country. Mr. and Mrs. McCorvie and party took in the Franco-British Exhibition at London, visited Paris, Liverpool, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Belfast and the picturesque north coast of Ireland, as well as many other points of interest in the United Kingdom. Mr. McCorvie speaks in high terms of the Canadian exhibit at the Franco-British Exhibition. Incidentally, being a true Scot, he visited the field of Bannockburn, and Ayrshire, redolent with memories of Bobbie Burns, and brought home a big bunch of purple heather from the hills at Campbellton, near where his father and mother were born.

That undue enterprise has its boomerang qualities is emphasized by a complaint recently voiced in the local papers, against boys who, when delivering dodgers from house to house, secure prompt attention by ringing the door bell. Many housewives have complained against the practice, which, undoubtedly, in quite a few cases, defeats its own object. The complaint is one for merchants to at least consider.

HAMILTON.

September 8.—Talking about the Garden of Canada; if some of your readers could have seen Hamilton market last Saturday their thoughts would have certainly turned towards that oft-described spot, the Garden of Eden. There were loads and loads of luscious peaches, plums, pears, melons, grapes and vegetables of all kinds, grown in the highest state of cultivation. Just think of lorry loads of beautiful Crawford peaches, with an average quantity of 200 baskets to a lorry, and selling readily at a dollar a basket. Why, it kept the farmers busy counting their money; and the thousands of baskets of plums, selling at 15 and 20 cents a basket: and here's where the people who couldn't buy peaches got busy. Tomatoes, 2 baskets for 25c. Canteloupes, 25c a basket, with from 15 to 30 in a box; grapes, 20c; pears, 20c; potatoes, 25c; and vegetables of all kinds in the highest state of perfection. The workingmen of Hamilton are on easy street as far as the price of fruit and vegetables is concerned. One thing that militates against the retail grocer in this bountiful supply is the peddling system. When the farmer finds sales a little slow he gets his horse out and starts canvassing the city, and in his dealings he is worse than the ordinary peddler, who knows what his goods cost him, and usually wants a profit. In the farmer's case he is always open for an offer and very often makes the good housewife think that the corner groceryman is holding her up in the price of vegetables. At the last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association this question was fully discussed, and it was decided to take some action in the matter. It was found that the city council had recently passed a by-law prohibiting the sale of foreign fruits on the streets and it was up to the police to look after them. A committee was appointed to investigate, and the opinion is, from the make-up of the committee, that there will be "doings" in the near future.

JOHN FORTH.

President Hamilton Grocers' Association, to whom a Presentation was made Last Week.

The Association is in mourning for one of the "old guard," a pioneer member, who was always to be relied on, be times good or bad in the history of the Association; always ready with a cheery smile and a kindly word, and his hand in his pocket ready to help the Association in anything that would tend to benefit and uplift the trade. Truly, the passing of our old President, John Rowan, cast a shadow over the last meeting of the grocers. His sudden death came as a great shock to his friends here. After twenty-five years in the trade he had endeared himself to thousands of Hamilton people. He had recently been appointed bursar of the asylum at Woodstock, and while his friends regretted his removal from this city they were pleased at the recognition given to him for worthy service, by the Ontario Government. The grocers of the city extend their sincere sympathy to the family in their hour of bereavement. The funeral, which took place on Saturday morning, was very largely attended.

That exceedingly affable but bashful young man, John Forth, the President of the association, was made the recipient of a very handsome present at the last meeting. As chairman of the Picnic Committee he distinguished himself as never chairman did before and in recognition of his ability and the arduous duties he performed the members decided to mark the 1908 picnic with a dot of approval by presenting the chairman with a handsome Morris chair of old oak design, which Mr. Forth duly appropriated after making a very touching speech in which he referred to the kind assistance of his colleagues.

LONDON.

September 8.—Business continues fair both wholesale and retail, and dealers, as a rule, have little to complain of.

A report that the Lake of the Woods Milling Company is negotiating for the purchase of a mill for the purpose of grinding a blended flour in this city, is denied by the local manager, J. C. Middleton. The company is simply erecting a warehouse near the C.P.R. for the purpose of storing a few carloads of flour for distribution throughout Western Ontario, and the idea of securing a mill here has never been taken into consideration.

As a result of the delay of a train on the Grand Trunk on Saturday morning, some local grocers were for a while without a supply of sugar, and many housekeepers were in a quandary to know what to do with fruit they had bought in the market. With one exception, the wholesalers were without sugar, and a canning company feared trouble with a large consignment of fruits which were too ripe to keep over. The train was delayed for about twelve hours.

STUDY THE CUSTOMER.

A good deal of advice is given to grocers about being attentive to customers, and in most cases this is quite applicable, but occasionally a case occurs where the grocer loses sales and even customers by being too attentive. The writer's attention was called to this the other day. He was talking of trade matters to a grocer, a good grocer, too, when a lady of prepossessing appearance came into the store. Immediately the grocer was all attention, put on a smile of welcome and started in to talk. The customer was one of those quiet, business-like women, who knew what she wanted and how she wanted it. It was quite evident that she detested any fuss, and yet that grocer in his eagerness kept on suggesting this and that, and telling the good qualities of each in a way that was absolutely amusing. In the end the lady left the shop apparently annoyed, with a small sale that left the grocer disappointed.

To an onlooker the mistake was obvious and yet that grocer couldn't see what was the matter. He had simply used the same methods and selling talk with this customer as he did with other less reserved women, with whom it worked admirably.

The lesson in the mistake is, the salesman must study his customer as well as his goods. There is such a thing as giving too much as well as too little attention, and if anything, this tendency to, well, slop over, is the more serious.

THANKSGIVING ON MONDAY.

The announcement of Monday, October 19 as Thanksgiving Day, which came from Ottawa last week, will be received with particular satisfaction by Canadian travelers, and by the retail trade generally. The date chosen is an advantageous one for several reasons. First of all, it will give the traveler another day at home instead of forcing him, as occurred in most cases with the old fixture, to spend the holiday in idleness somewhere on the road. In the second place it will avoid breaking up the week for the retailer, and while it will tend to make the preceding Saturday a particularly heavy one, it will be much better than it used to be on Thursday. The new date, too, is rather earlier than usual, and this will avoid interference with the elections and the rush usually incident on the closing of navigation.

ABOUT SORTING BUSINESS.

The best sorting business in years is ahead of Canadian wholesalers. This is admitted by those who are in touch even in a remote degree with the conditions which prevail.

The reason, obviously, is that retailers have bought lightly for Fall; placing orders have been unprecedentedly small, merchants apparently preferring to depend pretty largely on their ability to obtain goods in the Fall, when they actually need them.

To facilitate business under these new conditions wholesalers will have to carry heavier stocks for sorting than they have ever been obliged to do before. They, too, however, have bought light, and pretty much in proportion to the volume of placing orders.

The retailer, therefore, who anticipates his wants early and uses the wholesalers' stocks to supply his needs early in the season, stands the best chance.

Business will be better. It's up to the retail merchant to place himself in a position to profit most largely by this improvement.

KEEP ABREAST OF THE TIMES.

A man may not realize the stern necessity of keeping up with what is being done in the trade elsewhere—may even neglect to utilize business possibilities—and yet be personally a likeable good fellow. It doesn't help you. By cultivating the science of salesmanship to the highest possible point, by adopting methods that have proved successful elsewhere, by creating business, by grasping opportunities, by encouraging and supplying demand for special goods, and by other numerous approved methods, you set up a standard of competition which is in itself honorable and praiseworthy, which will make you successful, but which will in no sense be describable as a "curse to the trade."

You are in business for business—your own business—neither for amusement nor for spite!

A FORCE IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

The trade paper is the medium that introduces the new things to the retailer who serves the interests of the consumer, and in this way is the greatest commercial force known. An order from one retailer is worth many orders from individual consumers. The dealer buys in quantities and sells single pieces, thus advertising through a trade paper; while it does not produce numerically as many returns as general advertising, each individual order represents a quantity and steady buying, whereas the average consumer ordering goods through a magazine advertisement orders once and never again. Every retailer represents on an average 300 consumers, so it will be easily seen that business secured through a trade paper is the most profitable, most extensive and most to be desired of any.

The trade paper is the best booster that the salesman of to-day possesses. No matter whether a man is on the street, or on the road, or behind the counter, the trade paper is working for him night and day. It is inspirational and is a medium of expression for his views and for the interchange of ideas. It helps the road man because it introduces his goods to the prospective buyer before the salesman gets to him. In this way it lessens his task and prepares the way. It keeps the retailer posted and abreast of the times so that the salesman has less trouble in finding a middle ground on which to meet him. It boosts the men who do things and helps them both with their employers and their customers.

It is the great force that puts the new ideas, the new things, the new thoughts before the retailer, jobber or manufacturer in condensed and crystallized form and which has built up this great fraternity of men engaged in manufacturing, jobbing, selling or retailing. It is the cement that holds the business structure together, and every man in business should be a booster for trade papers in his line. A salesman cannot go into a retailer's place of business anywhere without finding some trade paper, and everybody should take advantage of this and use it for all it is worth. The trade paper of to-day is the greatest force in the entire commercial world.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, September 11, 1908.

POINTERS—

Fish—Declined.
Vegetables—Advanced.
Molasses—Advanced.
Cheese—Firmer.
Butter—Declined slightly.

Encouraging crop reports from the West have resulted in a better feeling making itself evident in the trade of the country generally. A great many houses with headquarters in Montreal depend more upon Western Canada for their business than any other section of the country, and the feeling in the crop-growing districts affects them and their turnover materially. Canned goods continue to move out satisfactorily, and deliveries are still being made by the packers. Late lines will shortly be in the store of the jobber. Sugar inquiry has proved disappointing of late, but refiners look for improvement, believing the lowest point has been reached in prices. An advance in black teas is prophesied for October. Japans do not present any new features this week. Molasses continues scarce, and the advance predicted in this paper last week has occurred. New crop Valencia raisins are expected to arrive about October 10. A shortage in figs is predicted. Coffees are firm. Good demand for spices is reported. More inquiry for flour is encouraging millers, who state feed also is selling more freely. New honey is arriving in good quantity. Rice and tapioca are unchanged. Green fruits are selling well. Prices have not changed. Vegetables are quite active. Changes are noticeable in fish quotations.

SUGAR—The sugar market is not as brisk as it should be at this season of the year, and the decline of 10c has not given it much of an impetus. Prices are the same as last week. From some sources of an authoritative nature it is stated that the market is as low as it will be likely to go as the new crop beets are being quoted near the cost of production, and there will be opposition to further decline. Nearly all growing crops are making good progress, but these will not be a factor for some time yet.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Stocks of molasses have been considerably reduced throughout the country lately, and this has firmed up the market, which is very strong at the present time. Syrups are in good demand and quotations are the same as at the last report.

TEA—The Japan market offers no new features this week, remaining the same as at the last quotations. Ceylons and Indias are in good demand, while Ceylon greens and China greens are less active. Blacks are reported as being likely to advance in October, according to authoritative advices from primary markets.

COFFEE—The undertone of the coffee market is strong and trade is good in this line. Some of the cheaper grades have been particularly active during the week. An authority on the coffee trade maintains that the steadiness of this market is due to Brazil's valorization scheme, which is designed to provide more stability to the market and eliminate highly speculative deals with this product. Prices are the same as at the last quotations.

DRIED FRUITS—Oregon prunes are not being seriously considered owing to short crop there. Dealers are turning their attention to the Bosnia product, as this country is regarded as the source of supply this year for most countries, except the United States. In the latter country the duty will pretty well limit the trade to the native product. Seeded raisins are in fairly good demand. New crop Valencias are due to arrive about October 10. Sultanas are 1 cent a pound cheaper than a year ago. A fair demand is reported for currants on the spot, but it is of the hand-to-mouth character. Reports state that figs will be firmer this year, owing to shortage in crop.

SPICES—A good trade is reported in spices, which is the result of the pickling season. All lines are in good demand and especially cinnamon, both ground and whole. Both varieties of cloves, also peppers, are particularly active. The increase in demand has not yet resulted in any change in prices.

BEANS—There is a light demand for beans, and this is limited pretty much to those of foreign growth. Ontario primes are quoted most generally at $2, although a few extra choice lots have been quoted at $2.10. Most sales of Austrian and Indian beans are at the minimum price. Reports from Ontario state that the crop is not likely to be as good in quality as was expected, owing to unfavorable weather.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady.

Molasses—Advance expected.

Beans—Scarce and firm.

Collections—Fair.

Toronto, Sept. 10,

There is rather a more cheerful tone evident in wholesale circles this week. Some firms report business as picking up noticeably. Others are more conservative in statement and do not see much change at present, though they report favorably on the outlook. Buying in small lots, however, continues to be the regular procedure. Travelers say that where at the same time last year a grocer would take twenty-five cases of goods, to-day he is only taking twelve, with, however, the prospect of taking the other twelve later on. This seems to be characteristic of the whole business. Collections are generally pretty good, though on the last few months' business most of the houses are keeping their books in pretty good shape.

Market changes during the week in staple groceries have been very few, most lines holding steady.

SUGAR—The market shows very little change since last week. Demand is good and since the recent decline seems to have brought prices to a better working basis the situation is a good deal more steady. There has been nothing very new in the raw markets during the week and at the present time there does not seem much prospect for any immediate change in Canadian refined.

There seems good evidence that both retailers' and wholesalers' stocks are light throughout the country as was shown in London last week when a delay of twelve hours in the arrival of a train saw a small edition of a sugar famine.

Willett & Gray, summarizing the situation, say:

"The decline, which extended for several weeks, has finally been checked. All unfavorable conditions have been discounted and a further decline is not warranted at this time. No boom is anticipated, but there is reason to expect a firm market for the immediate future. The balance of old crop Cuba sugars available for shipment is reduced to about 35,000 tons, which is offered only sparingly from time to time, the lowest price now named being 2 9-16c c. & f., 95 degrees test, equal to 3.98c for 96 degrees test, the Cuba sugars now testing low as a rule; there are New York buyers at 1-32c less, or equal to 3.95c for 96 degrees test. According to cables, the weather in Cuba is still favorable to the development of the growing cane. Our Havana correspondents write that many sections report that the cane has already begun to lay down, owing to its size, and that prospects of the crop are promising. Harvesting is expected to commence in December."

TEA—Local markets are comparatively quiet, with no particularly new features in evidence.

Kearley & Tonge's August circular reviewing the general situation, says: "The stand-out event in connection with Ceylon tea during July has been the all-round improvement in quality. There are now comparatively few unusable teas offered; many of the low-country gardens, which during April, May and June were sending teas rank in cup and with black infusions, are now making good, sound, useful teas. Higher grown teas also show great improvement; gardens with reputations for fine flavor reputations, which during the last month or two have been in danger—are now producing quality and flavor very much nearer the standard that is looked for. The result of this general improvement has been to steady the market for low grades and send up the prices of good to fine, many cents per lb. And as is usual, with a return to fine quality, the quantity is less. Sales are considerably smaller, and are likely to continue so, consequently the prospects point to a firm market for some time."

DRIED FRUITS—Interest is centred in new crop goods with first shipments due to arrive in about two weeks. Some jobbers report selling largely on these, though mostly in small lots. Other houses have not been pushing the goods. The markets on both raisins and currants have a firmer feeling, with good reports as to the quality of the coming goods. Cables to local brokers from Smyrna this week noted an advance of from 1s and 6d to 2s on raisins.

TORONTO GROCER TAKES FIRST.

There was quite a line-up of grocers', confectioners', and bakers' delivery outfits at the Exhibition on Tuesday morning, in connection with the judging before the grand stand. In class 138, single horse, open to grocers, confectioners bakers and milkmen, R. Mathews, the Yonge St. grocer, carried off first with his spic and span outfit and the prize-winner, Fred, between the shafts. This is the fourteenth set of ribbons won by this horse. The Osgoode Dairy Co. carried off second with King, and S. J. Beacock took third, with Brown Duchess.

CANADIAN CANNED GOODS.

Estimate of Pack on Various Lines—Reports From Business Centres.

Reports from reliable authorities in the different canning centres allow the compilation of estimates of crop and pack of vegetables and fruits on several lines, which are given herewith:

The pea crop has turned out somewhat of a failure. The hot and dry weather played havoc with the growing peas. On this account the pack cannot be very large. Some estimates place it from 1-3 to 1-2 of the normal pack.

Refugee and Golden Wax beans already packed, are of good quality and fair sized pack. Prospects have been very discouraging for a couple of weeks for the later bean pack but recent reports from the fields are brighter and the crop promises to be at least fair.

The tomato pack will be only an average one, and not so large as expected a few weeks ago. The average in most sections is smaller than last year and grubs and blight have done considerable injury. The last two weeks of cool weather also has delayed delivery.

The beet and pumpkin pack will be fairly large.

A large supply of plums was carried over from last year by most of the canners and in consequence the pack will probably be light.

MONTREAL—The demand for all lines of Canadian goods has been good since trade has been on the new price basis. American products are neglected.

TORONTO—The amount of business passing is not so large as expected this week, though fruits and vegetables are fairly active. Jobbers are gradually stocking up with new pack goods.

TRADE NOTES.

Geo. Thorn, confectioner, Toronto, has sold his business.

Thibodeau & Cyr, wholesale confectioners, Montreal, have assigned.

Owen Bros., general merchants, Kirkella, Man., have sold their stock to Fred. Crossman.

D. J. Cullen, confectioner, Deloraine, Man., has sold his business to C. E. Stevens & Son.

O. H. Bruneau, general merchant, Stratford Centre, Que., has compromised with his creditors.

Bertram Carr, representing Carr & Co., biscuit manufacturers, Carlisle, England, was in Winnipeg last week consulting with Hamblin & Brereton, the Western Canada agents for his firm, and making the acquaintance of the Winnipeg trade. Mr. Carr has gone further West to visit the trade at the Pacific Coast.

F. W. Forde and Ald. Johnston, two of Ottawa's energetic grocers, who have been working hard in the interests of the Pure Food Show, to be held in connection with the Central Canada exhibition next week, were in Toronto for several days this week doing the exhibition and incidentally securing a few more exhibitors for the Ottawa fair.

ANOTHER HAPPY TRAVELER.

John Wilson Charles, of H. P. Eckhardt & Co., Toronto, is widely known as one of the cheeriest grocery travelers on the road. After this week he'll surely bubble over with happiness and he'll have good reason to. On Wednesday, September 9, John did one of the best things he has ever done by taking unto himself a bride, the young lady being Miss Violet A. Colville, niece and adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Colville, or "Billy" Colville of Comfort Soap, to be more familiar. The ceremony was performed in St. Enoch's Presbyterian Church, Toronto, at one o'clock, by Rev. W. B. Findlay, assisted by Rev. J. McP. Scott. The bride was assisted by Miss Nellie Sinclair, and James Charles, the groom's brother, was best man. The ushers were Henry Smart and W. J. Bradv.

After the ceremony a reception was held at 2 Bain Ave., Mr. and Mrs. Colville's home, and later in the afternoon the happy couple left for a honeymoon trip to Philadelphia, Atlantic City and New York. On their return they will reside at 2 Bain Ave.

JOHN WILSON CHARLES.

Of H. P. Eckhardt & Co., Toronto, who Was Married on Wednesday.

A pleasing incident previous to the happy event occurred on Saturday in the office of H. P. Eckhardt & Co., when in a little gathering of the staff John Charles, who has been with the firm for 15 years and is one of their leading travelers, was presented with a handsome china cabinet. The head of the firm, Mr. Eckhardt, and the manager, Mr. McKenzie, said some very nice things about Mr. Charles' work and his long connection with the house, and the recipient made one of his characteristically able replies.

The Grocer extends heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Charles in their new relations.

THE CANADIAN SALMON PACK.

Though Increased Over Last Year, Not Large Pack.

An article in these columns two weeks ago giving estimates of the salmon pack on the Pacific Coast, has aroused considerable interest among the trade, and some question as to its correctness. While the figures given have subsequently been proven to be correct, the article seems to have been somewhat misleading, in stating that this season's pack was increased over that of last year, and not stating that last year was a poor one. As a matter of fact, the present season's pack is anything but a large one. In some places the run was larger than anticipated, but the factories were not prepared to take advantage of this. From another standpoint, when it is known that the pack of "Talls," in which the Canadian trade is chiefly interested, is comparatively light, it will be readily seen that the supply of salmon this season will not be large. It is impossible, at present, to secure reliable statistics as to the British Columbia pack, but in the light of the facts given above the following report from a correspondent on the Coast, who is closely in touch with the situation, should be of interest:

Vancouver, Sept. 4.—The salmon pack for 1908 in British Columbia is better than that of last year. On the Fraser River, the increase is 16,000 cases in round numbers, the total returns not yet being available, while the total estimate for the whole of the Coast is placed at 338,000 of all shapes, as compared with 314,000 cases in 1907. The showing on the Skeena River was very good, but at Rivers Inlet the canners were disappointed because of a decrease. One point worthy of special attention is that while on the Fraser the pack was 74,000, on Puget Sound it was 151,000 cases. These canneries get their fish from practically the same source, but the fish before coming to the Fraser have to dodge the traps of the Puget Sound canners. The result is that Canadians get what are left. If the Puget Sound people observed the law, it would not be so bad, but it is stated with some degree of authority that the close season is only on the books, and trap owners do not allow it to bother them, except where they are forced by the seine fishers. As long as Canada takes steps for the preservation of the salmon fisheries, the United States reaps the benefit, and unless some co-operative measure is decided upon, and that enforced, it will only mean that canners here get little, while on the other side they take all that is offering.

ROLLED OATS UP IN MONTREAL.

A despatch from Montreal received just before going to press notes an advance on rolled oats, 5 cents on bags, 10 cents on barrels.

D. E. McGill has advertised his grist mill at Hillsburgh, Ont., for sale.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, September 11, 1908.)

POINTERS—
Prunes—Advanced.
Eggs—Advanced.
Butter—Advanced.
Sugar—Upward tendency.

Business is showing considerable improvement and the outlook is much brighter. Anxiety about the crop is over now and while the yield is not so large as was expected last June it is still a satisfactory one and, with the high prices obtaining now, there is no doubt that it is the most profitable in the history of the country. With greatly improved business prospects, the trade are buying more freely and active trade may be expected during the coming months.

CANNED GOODS—Competition is keen in corn, peas and tomatoes. We quote:

Sangster & McCuaig, general merchants, Mille Roches, Ont., have dissolved.

The general store of A. E. Barrett & Co., Havelock, Ont., was burned last week.

Neil McDonald, general merchant, Kintail, Ont., is advertising his business for sale.

The assets of S. Gagnon, general merchant, Bromptonville, Que., have been sold.

Levi Armstrong, grocer and baker, Stouffville, Ont., has advertised his business for sale.

A. E. Holmes & Co., grocers, Keewatin, Ont., have sold their business to L. H. & J. F. Clarke.

FEEDING THE EXHIBITION DOGS.

The dogs at the bench show at the Canadian National Exhibition this week are being fed on Spratt's dog cakes. It is within the truth to state that Spratt's sell 99 per cent. of the great kennel owners and breeders of the world, and that there is no dog living to-day of any account who himself, or whose ancestors, or descendants, do not, or have not, eaten Spratt's dog cakes. If your jobber cannot supply you, drop a line to the agents, F. Hughes & Co., 13 St. Therese St., Montreal.—Advt.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Sept. 7.—With Sept. 1 began the official crop year of 1908-09. The opening price of the wheat of the new crop was really made a few days previous, and started with No. 1 Northern, $1; No. 2 Northern, 97c; No. 3 Northern, 93c. Ever since the opening there has been a good demand for cars of cash wheat past Winnipeg, and the premiums paid have run all the way from 1c to 4½c over the September option, which has ranged round 98c to $1. Rejected grades have also commanded a premium of 2c. Exporters report the demand good and a very liberal inquiry, but state that at present it is not possible to decide whether the demand may not be a desire to test the new crop. Receipts of the new crop are increasing daily, and, of course, are much ahead of last year when new wheat was not mentioned in the inspection until after Sept. 20th, but it is not coming in as rapidly as it did in 1906, which was one of the earliest crops on the market we have had in the West. I wired for last issue, the Free Press' official crop estimate for 1908, putting the wheat at 102,000,000 bushels. This estimate has come to be regarded as the most authoritative news that can be obtained on crop conditions, from the fact that the country is so completely covered by wholly disinterested inspectors, the Free Press buying every mile of its railway transportation, as well as paying for the livery hire. It should be a particularly valuable report this year, from the fact that the crop is spotted, that is, any damage that has occurred is not a total damage in any one place, excepting of course from hail, which really does not figure much in the bulk of the crop. The damage from frost will not lessen the yield materially, but it will lower the grade and it is going to be a pretty hard crop to buy on that account. Indications are all in favor of good prices, and the West is feeling very chipper in spite of the frost. A careful personal survey of the whole situation leads your correspondent to the belief that 75 per cent. of all the crop damage sustained in the Canadian West this year might have been avoided by better farming. No farming, however good, will protect a man from hail, so that damage goes in the other 25 per cent., but in the case of hot winds and frost, the matter is to a great extent in the farmer's hands. He cannot prevent either coming, but he can to a very great extent mitigate their effects. In the matter of hot winds, better cultivation would have reduced the damage fully one-half, if not two-thirds. This was plainly manifest by the condition of highly cultivated fields in the district where the hot winds and lack of moisture did the most harm. Well cultivated soil had conserved the moisture from the June rains, there were no weeds to share what moisture there was with the wheat, and the plants being strong, vigorous and well stooled were capable of standing more drought. In the matter of frost the bulk of the wheat at all seriously damaged was sown too late. There was more excuse for late sowing the past spring than usual, because the bad weather last fall had made it difficult to get lands ready in time, but even this excuse was of no avail in many cases. The real trouble is the ambition of men to cover more ground than they can get in early and in good shape, and until this difficulty is overcome there will continue to be late crops that will be frosted.

It is interesting to note the condition of Manitoba, as compared with other Provinces. There has been a tendency on the part of many farmers, especially new-comers, to discount the little Province that made the West famous the world over for wheat, and to rush to Saskatchewan and Alberta, but in the off year of 1907, 60 per cent. of all the contract wheat was raised in Manitoba, and this year 75 per cent. of Manitoba wheat was harvested and out of harm's way before there was any frost. Of course, as the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta become older and cultivation has continued longer, this condition will prevail with them also. It is within the memory of your correspondent when it used to be considered that you could not grow a crop of wheat round Minnedosa, Rapid City and Neepawa without danger of frost damage, yet last year these districts harvested a 25-bushel crop without a sign of frost. This goes to show that much of the heavy land in Aberta and Saskatchewan only needs good and careful cultivation to warm up and bid the frost defiance. The West is all right, but it still has a few lessons to learn, and, as usual, they have to be paid for. Fortunately, this year the price will not be high.

The event par excellence of the week in grain circles was the movement of the Grain Exchange into its new quarters, a magnificent seven-storey building on Lombard Street, east of Main. The building is not yet quite complete, but the members were determined to begin the new crop year in the new building and so they moved. There was more reason for this than appeared on the surface, for, as a matter of fact, the opening in the new building means a practically new Grain Exchange. Ever since the disruption occasioned by the vicious legislation passed last spring by the Provincial Legislature, the members have been working quietly. A holding company was organized, which has taken over the building, buying it at sheriff's sale, and is operating it as landlords of the Exchange, and, as a matter of fact, when business opened on Tuesday morning in the new trading room, it was not the old Winnipeg Grain and Produce Exchange, with a Provincial charter, but all the members of that old exchange formed into a voluntary association without a charter of any kind. It will make absolutely no difference to the carrying on of business which will be handled precisely in the old way, but it gives the members the control of their trading room and market reports, which would not have been possible to them had they continued to work under the old charter, after the restrictive legislation of last spring.

In land circles the event of the week was the coming into force of the new Land Act, opening up the odd numbered sections of Government land for homesteading purposes. The rush has been enormous, and even in Winnipeg where the number of homesteads thus available was small, the people spent the night in front of the land office. Moose Jaw had the largest number of homesteads to offer, some 40,000 in all, and the agents have been kept busy. The new law is a very popular one in the West, and has given a great impetus to immigration from the other side, though in many cases the homesteads have been secured by resident settlers for their sons. The fact that a lad of 18 may homestead and live at his father's home, provided that home is not more than nine miles from the homestead, makes it an easy way for the boys to get homesteads and many of them have availed themselves of the opportunity.

The railway strike does not appear to be nearing settlement, so far as the outsider can see, and there are many anxious hearts as to how the crop is going to move. There has been no difficulty so far, but the receipts have not exceeded 60 cars a day up to date. What everyone wants to know is how the company is going to handle 600 cars a day, for that is what will be needed presently. The series of disasters to their track east of Winnipeg has been a great blow, for it all happens on the lines that the wheat must pass over. There is no doubt that the company have secured a large number of men, but it is equally apparent that the number of skilled mechanics among these men is not large. It is learned, unofficially, that the men are anxious for the strike to be off, it has lasted longer now than they expected, and if the company are wise they will put their dignity in their pocket and get the thing straightened up. At present the public largely sympathize with the company, considering that the men have been rash and unreasonable, but all the same they will have no sympathy with the company if the wheat trains get tied up. The feeling of the whole business community is that anyone who puts any hindrance in the way of marketing the present crop promptly is a traitor, and should be dealt with accordingly.

The much-talked-of new Union Stock Yards are coming at last. The land, about 100 acres in extent, has been secured, though the exact location has not yet been ascertained. It is known definitely, however, that it lies between the tracks of the three railways over in St. Boniface, and is excellently situated for the purpose. The purchase of the land has been guarded very carefully, but the three railways, C.P.R., C.N.R. and G.T.P., the big abattoir firms and a few others are interested in it.

"Men Who Sell Things"

What Respect for One's House Really Means—A Homily on Dress and Orderliness, One of the Important Factors of Salesmanship—Something About Displaying Samples.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

Respect for the House.

Why, of course! Down in the inner recesses of your sterner nature you know you have, only you have not stopped to think of it in that light. Show it, then, by quitting the price-cutting habit.

You would not lift your hand against the safety and maintenance of your own father's household, would you? Why do you do it, then, against the home of your business family? When you compare the two cases there is not much difference.

You have some pride, have you not? Well, then, if you don't want to be known to the father and brothers of your business family as a weakling, constantly requiring care and watching, quit that habit of price-cutting. Start in to hold up your end in supporting that family, in place of being a drag on it.

Every time that you take a liberty that you have no business to take, some one suffers for it. When you fail to do your part, in keeping up the profits of your house, your brother salesmen have to carry the load you have imposed upon them by your lack of sense of obligation.

The most justifiable kick any salesman ever makes is when another salesman in his house cuts the price, while he remains firm. If you want the privilege of being a "special rights" member of the family, you ought to be willing to pay for it.

A Story of System.

My first business venture was the establishment of a house that traveled ten men. Our capital was limited, and we could not afford to make many mistakes. But in our desire to get a foothold, we allowed our salesmen a considerable degree of latitude the first two or three years. Finally we were obliged to call a halt. The cutting of prices was ruining our business. We took the men aside one day and explained matters, asking their support in refusing to cut prices any longer. Our best men stopped the practice at once, but there were three or four weaklings on the staff, who thought the request was a joke, and to correct these it became necessary to make a positive rule that all salesmen cutting prices would be charged with the difference.

CHAPTER XVII.

DRESS AND ORDERLINESS.

Good clothes help to make a salesman. Observers are more impressed by the tidiness of one's clothing than by its expensiveness or variety.

It is said that no one ever notices a man's linen, unless it is soiled; or his hat, unless it is of unusual shape, or dusty, or shabby; or his shoes, unless they are loud, or need blacking, or are worn down at the heel.

True, unpleasant conditions do attract notice, but it is undeniable that the observer is always agreeably impressed by the cleanliness and good style which distinguish the gentleman. Every salesman, therefore, owes it to himself and to his house to be well dressed.

The secret lies more in the choice of clothes and the way they are taken care of, than in their expensiveness or variety. Often the man with a modest wardrobe is better dressed than the one with many suits. Naturally, the man is light-headed, not to say wicked, who would squander on coats, boots, and neckties an income sufficient to support several families; but the example of the careless, slovenly man is not inviting, and if extravagance is to be deplored, there is merit in good dressing. Strike the happy medium. Be neither a Beau Brummell nor a dust-stained Weary Willie.

Neglect of the clothing is a symptom of slovenliness that is apt to be progressive.

The Well-Dressed Salesman.

The well-dressed salesman is scrupulously neat, carries himself well, and is alert and active. The salesman who is content with ill-fitting clothes, shabby hat, soiled linen, rusty shoes, and a collar that is a size too large may be a very bright man and representing a first-class house, but he certainly does not look that way. The first impression the observer forms of him is that he is a "down-and-outer," bordering on a state of collapse. So much depends on first impressions and in keeping up good impressions once formed, that every salesman should regard his personal appearance as important.

Contempt for clothes is too often associated with laziness. The salesmen whom the general trade care to meet are those who "keep up" in every way. In matters like dress, it is a good thing for the salesman to try to get a look at himself "as others see him."

It matters little what your income is or the claims there may be upon it, you can at least afford to patronize a tailor who can give your clothes a stylish cut and a neat fit. Properly selected and adjusted fifty-cent neckties look as good as dollar ones; and a hat that becomes you costs no more than a misfit.

How Personal Appearance Counts.

Personal appearance in salesmanship counts so much and costs so little, that any salesman can afford the price, and it is money well invested. A man is judged almost as much by his appearance as by his actions or the degree of his sanity in this progressive age. A well-dressed, alert salesman will get a "look in" with a brusque merchant, while his slovenly brother is being waved asisde with the busy signal.

Orderliness in dress goes hand in hand with orderliness in the sample-room and orderliness in everything else connected with the work of a salesman. Nothing creates in the buyer a desire to buy like stepping into a well-ordered salesroom. The most attractive line of goods will lose out fifty per cent. through ineffective display in a cluttered-up room.

Displaying Samples.

The proper display of samples on the road is a subject worthy of the closest study. Due care should also be given to cleaning up the sample-room in general before going out to round up a customer. Waste paper, trays, and empty boxes should be stowed away out of sight, and everything arranged in apple-pie order, if one hopes to conduct a customer through the line without a hitch.

Some salesman are naturally orderly; others learn to be, by hard knocks taught in the school of experience; and still another class never learn the lesson. I graduated from the second class during my first year on the road. It happened in this way.

CREATING A NEW CUSTOMER

How a Trade Newspaper Ad Brought a Traveler a New Account.

In a prosperous town of the central part of Ontario there is a merchant who, until recent years, had never included wall paper in his stock. One day, three or four years ago, he was thoughtfully turning over the pages of one of the MacLean trade newspapers when the advertisement of a prominent wall paper manufacturer caught and held his attention "Why not handle wall paper?" thought he, "surely I can turn a few honest dollars that way. I'll try, anyway!" So he sat down and wrote to the wall paper manufacturer, who at once dispatched a traveler with a full line of samples. Later on, the smiling traveler left the store with a pretty fair order booked. In a couple of years that merchant had cleared several hundred dollars; and, needless to say, the traveler who followed up the first enquiry still gets the business. Really, there is no business-getting combination on earth superior to trade newspaper advertising and live travelers who appreciate its advantages!

ONTARIO SUGAR BEET CROP.

1,200 Growers in Kent and Large Acreage Elsewhere—Prospects Good.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 9.—In the course of three weeks, more or less, farmers throughout southwestern Ontario will commence to harvest a crop that is probably unique in all Canada.

Since about 1900, sugar beets have been grown in this and adjoining counties. They are largely grown in Essex, Kent and Lambton, while the beet zone is steadily extending eastward into Elgin and Middlesex and northward into Huron and Bruce.

What is technically termed "the sugar beet campaign" opens about October 1st, and continues till nearly the end of January. During that time beets from all directions are being shipped to the factories by every known means of conveyance. Farmers close to the factories transport their beets in wagons, where water is near at hand scows are used and in other cases long freight trains of open cars, laden with the big white beets, are to be seen on every siding. At the factory the beets are weighed and tested, to discover the percentage of tare to be deducted, and the percentage of sugar, on which the price is based. Then they are piled in the sheds ready to enter into the mysterious processes which result in their conversion into sugar.

Farmers in Western Ontario grow chiefly for the Wallaceburg and Mount Clemens (Mich.) factories, the acreage being contracted for at specified rates in advance. Mount Clemens pays a flat rate per ton; the Wallaceburg rate is based on the sugar percentage, with a specified minimum price per ton.

Archibald Blue, chief of the Census and Statistical Department at Ottawa, visited Wallaceburg a few days ago for the purpose of securing a report on the sugar beet crops in this section. Later he talked entertainingly of the crop.

"The bast crop looks most promising," he said. "I have no doubt that this year's crop will be an excellent one, and, let me add, this is one of the most important industries in Canada to-day.

"I was greatly surprised to note to what an extent the farmers of this district have gone into the growing of beets. There are 1,200 farmers in Kent growing beets this year. Some of them have only four or five acres of beets, but many are growing as high as forty and forty-five acres, and when you consider that this crop brings in an average of $50 an acre, you will understand in some sense what this must mean to Kent.

"The soil here seems especially adapted to beet culture, and the farmers appear to be experts in cultivating them. Beets are good for the land, and they are good for the farmers' pocket. They make the land clean for other crops to follow and sugar is an article for which there is always a steady demand, and this is what makes the industry so valuable. They have an excellent plant at Wallaceburg, and I was much impressed with what I saw there."

It may be added, that farmers at first looked askance at the crop, and were with difficulty induced to try the experiment of growing a few acres of sugar beets. The wet summer of 1902, however, turned the tide; for, when all other crops proved failures, the beets were a resounding success. The reliability of the crop impressed the farmers in a way they have never forgotten, and year by year beets are being grown more largely, till to-day they form one of the many peculiar staples of these western counties.

OTTAWA PURE FOOD SHOW.

Prospects Bright for Success of First Foodstuffs Exhibition Next Week.

Ottawa grocers have been working hard for some time to assure the success of the Retail Merchants' Association's Pure Food Show, the first, by the way, to be held in the city, which will be one of the biggest features of the Central Canada exhibition from Wednesday, Sept. 16 to Saturday, 19th.

As matters stand at present everything points to a very successful show. The building secured is an ideal one for the purpose and the fittings and decorations have only been placed after a deal of study and planning. The space, at last reports was practically all disposed of and the exhibitors will include the best class of foodstuffs manufacturers from different parts of the Dominion and the United States.

C.M.A. CONVENTION NEXT WEEK.

Montreal Association Making Preparations to Entertain Visitors.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association will take place on September 15, 16, 17 and 18, at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal. In an extremely pretty programme which has been published by the association the various matters which will engage the attention of the members are mentioned. In addition to the official programme the booklet contains many reproductions of Montreal's famous buildings and places, her theatres and hotels.

On Tuesday evening at eight o'clock the delegates will be entertained at the Peter Redpath Museum of McGill University by the Governor. On this occasion short addresses will be delivered by Principal Peterson, C.M.G. and Ald. Geo. W. Sadler, while R. Hobson will reply on behalf of the association. Arrangements have been made to give the members of the Association a trip around the Harbor. On the closing day a trip to Valleyfield has been arranged when the members will be the guests of the Montreal Cotton Co. The evenings will be filled by banquets and theatre parties.

The biscuit and confectionery section of the association will hold a meeting in Room 135, which will be of especial interest to those connected with the grocery business.

Provision has been made for the ladies who will be entertained while the gentlemen are at the meetings.

The officers of the association are looking forward to one of the most successful meetings in the history of the organization.

E. D. MARCEAU REORGANIZES.

Quite reorganized, the old firm known as the E. D. Marceau Company, Montreal, is now transacting business under the style of the Marceau Tea and Coffee Company. Mr. Marceau is at the head of the business and will look after the interests of the new firm, which has purchased the trade marks Condor, Old Crow, Madam Huot, etc., from the old concern, as well as goodwill, fixtures and other things. Teas, coffees and vinegars will be handled in the old premises, corner St. Paul and St. Gabriel Sts.

MILLERS MEET IN TORONTO.

Emphasize Necessity to Keep Up Quality of Flour.

The annual meeting of the Dominion Millers' Association was held in the Board of Trade Building, Toronto, on Friday, Sept. 4th.

The principal business of the meeting was the election of officers and the votes of the sixty-seven members present resulted as follows: A. C. McLeod, Stratford, President; D. B. Wood, of Hamilton, 1st Vice-President and Mr. C. B. Watts, of Toronto, 2nd Vice-President and treasurer. After the elections several addresses on trade topics were given, one in particular by president-elect McLeod, emphasizing the necessity for preserving the quality of flour.

The association late in the afternoon adjourned to the exhibition grounds, where the annual dinner, a most successful function, was held.

CHANGES FIRM NAME.

Alphonse Raymond, who has been carrying on the business of J. A. Perrault & Co., 40-50 Plessis St., Montreal has decided to run the concern under his own name. The change went into effect September 1, and in future all pickles, catsup, jams, jellies and kindred lines coming from this house will bear the label of Alphonse Raymond. Mr. Raymond is one of the younger class of manufacturers in Montreal and his friends will be glad to see him make an even greater success of the business under his own name.

OUR CLERKS' CORNER

Some of the Difficulties the Grocer's Assistant Has to Contend With—How He Can Make Himself Most Useful to His Employer.

The ordinary man thinks it an easy thing to be a grocery clerk. It doesn't look to be very hard, but just wait until a crank comes into the store with a frown on his face; next a taster who tastes and prices for half an hour, and gets a good square meal and doesn't buy a cent's worth. Then others come in and tell you how much cheaper other stores are selling groceries and refuse to trade with you unless you cut. Then comes an order over the 'phone thick and fast in a woman's high-keyed voice, who rings off without giving her name. In an hour or two she rings you up again and asks why you haven't sent those groceries. While you are explaining matters to her in comes a man who sings off an order of flour, potatoes, sugar, coffee, etc., and who shoots out of the door and down the street. If you haven't caught the order you are expected to guess at it; then there is a roar.

Next comes a man who wants credit. He has traded at other stores and paid cash, and now has a job where he gets his pay only every two weeks. He pays promptly for several weeks, then he has a small balance. This keeps on for a while and finally his bill is all balance.

The next customer who comes in and asks for credit you politely ask where he traded last. He says: "I used to trade at Mr. A.'s, but he cheated me, so I thought I would try you."

"Shall I call Mr. A. and ask him if you are all right?" I ask. "No, you needn't go to that trouble," he says. "I don't have to trade here." And he goes out and slams the door. Just to satisfy yourself you call up Mr. A. and find that he owes $100.

Then there is this kind of a customer—a man who has always paid cash, who meets with reverses and asks you for credit. You can't turn him down, as he has been a good customer. You let him have the goods. The bill keeps growing larger and larger and finally gets so large the man goes elsewhere to trade. Then you are out again.

I have found that the man who owes the largest bill is the one who can take in all the theatres, circuses and excursions.

Then there is the customer who rings up just before dinner and wants you to deliver a package of yeast foam 13 blocks away at once.

Another thing we have to contend with is the girl who comes in to call up her sweetheart and talks for 15 to 20 minutes when our regular customers are waiting to use the telephone.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR CLERKS.

Your salary comes out of the gross profits you make for your employer. Make more money for him and you will make more money for yourself.

Don't argue with customers. Give them the benefit of your experience and advice, but don't try to force upon them goods they don't want.

Don't make claims for your goods that you know the goods won't back up. The customer finds out the truth in the end and few customers will let you have a second chance to give them the worst of a deal.

Try to send every customer away satisfied. A satisfied customer is the kind that comes back.

Don't hide the "stickers" under the counter. Get them out and try to sell them. Often the proper display of an article means the difference between "sellers" and "stickers."

Any one can sell new, well advertised goods, but it takes a mighty good salesman to keep the odds and ends and hard sellers cleaned up.

Be a salesman, not a clerk. Learn to do things. Have a little initiative, and don't always wait to be told.

Look around and see what there is to do—and do it. That is the kind of a man who gets ahead nowadays.

Don't forget about the store the minute you get outside. Keep it in one corner of your mind all the time.

You often have a chance to drop a hint among your friends about new things "down at the store." It can't do any harm and may make business.

Get into the habit of doing these things. You know the way to get more money is to "show" your employer you are worth it.—Grocery World.

Study every customer and cultivate his acquaintance. It will help you increase your sales.

Learn the name of each customer who comes into the store.

Calling a person by name goes a long way toward breaking down that barrier of reserve which otherwise is so hard to get around.

Be glad to see people when they come in. It is just as easy, and you will feel better, and so will they.

Show goods to your customers as you would to your friends. Get out anything and everything which you think will interest them. Help make the selections and don't get restless or impatient while the customer is deciding what to buy; it has spoiled many a sale.

When you know a thing from "A to Z," you get enthusiasm and sincerity into your talk. Your argument is convincing and it's easy for you to sell goods. But it is hard work, and it's unpleasant, too, trying to sell something you don't know anything about.

NEW QUARTERS AT THE SOO.

W. H. Gillard & Co.'s Wholesale Branch Getting Into Larger Premises.

The wholesale branch of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, at Sault Ste. Marie, which was established in 1901, has just moved into new quarters in the Plumner Block, the change being necessitated by a rapidly-increasing business.

In describing the new premises the Soo Star says:: "The new store is very spacious and extremely well lighted. The first floor front has been fitted up with iron columns, and plate glass windows, extending across the entire building. The interior is divided into two parts with high archways between, which gives it a very roomy, pleasing effect, and consists of two floors and a basement each 55x65 feet in extent, the entire space utilized being 10,725 square feet. The offices and sample room face Queen St. on the east side of the first floor and are being fitted up in first-class shape. The basement has been re-timbered and a passage made to receive goods from the Pim St. side, which will facilitate handling very much. The exterior is finished with Milton pressed brick and the building will be made as fireproof as possible. A warehouse, iron clad, 90x35 feet, stands in the rear, and is fitted for the handling of goods and freight with a minimum of labor. A driveway down the centre the entire length with raised platforms on either side, will render the loading and unloading very easy. The warehouse consists of two floors, and will also be made as fireproof as convenience will allow. The firm handles a great deal of freight by both boat and rail and every facility has been made to meet growing demands."

The Soo branch of W. H. Gillard & Co.'s business was established seven years ago, when they occupied a modest store, 20x30 feet, opposite the Leland Hotel. Since that time they have moved twice; first, to the Rothschild Building, corner of Queen and McDougall Sts., and then to the premises they have lately occupied in the Collins Block, Queen St. east.

The manager of the Soo branch is Charles A. Leaney, to whose business enterprise and ability much of the success of the firm is due. Mr. Leaney has been connected with Gillard & Co. for fourteen years, and has been manager at the Soo continuously since the inception of the branch except for a period of eighteen months when he was absent in the Northwest establishing business places for the company there. The Soo branch has grown until now it is one of the largest wholesale businesses between North Bay and Port Arthur, and a lease of the new building has been taken for a number of years.

BUILDING A DEMAND

A TALK TO PRODUCERS

IT is a well-established fact that if you can get the best class of people to use your goods, the mass of the people will speedily follow suit. Consequently it is a very wise policy for manufacturers to help retail dealers by advertising their products to the best class of consumers. The most reliable advertising medium by which a manufacturer may talk to the leading people of every community in Canada is THE BUSY MAN'S MAGAZINE. Its circulation is primarily a quality circulation. Every reader is in the "good buyer" class. There is positively no other publication which so thoroughly covers the Canadian field from one ocean to the other. If you are a manufacturer it will pay you to investigate.

A GROCER'S PICKLING WINDOW

Timely Display for the Present Season.

Vinegars, spices and pickle and preserving materials are very timely just at present and a window displaying these in an attractive manner is certain to be of considerable service in disposing of these goods.

The accompanying engraving illustrates a window of such a nature which appeared recently in the store of Rowat & Co., 234 Dundas Street, London. R. J. Doneeghy, the manager of the store, who sent in the photo, sent also an interesting description of the methods and materials used in dressing it, as follows:

The floor of the window in front is covered with assorted spices in packages, including whole and ground goods, turmeric, currie, cinnamon, peppers, etc. With these are displayed price tickets attractively marked up. The sides of the window are dressed with bottles of pickles and olives. On the floor in the centre are bottes of malt vinegar, and on these, supported by a glass plate, is a display of malt, white wine and cider vinegars, to which are attached price tickets.

The window as a whole is very well worked up, the idea of displaying only a few lines and telling something about them being one, which is sure to bring results. It is to a large extent uniform, and yet departs enough from sameness to be free from any semblance of stiffness.

A Pickling Window From T. A. Rowat & Co., London.

THE WINDOW AS A WEAPON.

The window of the grocery store is a weapon for offense and a weapon for defense. It is a sure reliance when cut-price chain stores beleaguer the dealer, and a silent salesman doing effective work among customers of nearby rivals who are "not up to snuff"—who do not realize upon their opportunities. The merchant who uses his show window properly ought to spend no time in bewailing the trade lost to him. He should be too busy—too busy supplying the new business the show window has brought him. The writer is sometimes told that advertising in newspapers is folly for the retail grocer. Other people have asked. "What's the use of fooling time away on a grocery window?" The answer is this: If an advertisement in the paper is a useless expense, then the show window service is a necessary expense. If the advertising in the paper fails because the grocer cannot draw people from distant parts to his store, the window should have its innings, because it is a local advertisement, operating only within a narrow limit, although sometimes exerting influence upon thousands of people within the limited radius.

A common mistake in window service is made by the people who believe that dressy, dainty windows are only for the neighborhoods and patrons of considerable gentility. The dainty store in a genteel neighborhood would do less execution with a fine display than an ordinary store with an extraordinary window in an ordinary neighborhood could do, because the public has become accustomed to the former and not to the latter. If the grocer wishes to learn of the full possibilities of the show window let him work out a window-dressing plan in a common-looking store in a common neighborhood.

"What's the use?" has paralyzed a lot of window-dressing enthusiasm in the past. Ask John Wanamaker the question and he could answer that good show-window advertising is one of the secrets of success.

The store window of the grocers ranges from the sublime to the ridiculous, from the admirable to the disappointing, from the grand to the mean, and in nearly every case of marked difference from the common type it will be found that there is not enough time or money used up to warrant the grocer in continuing to abstain from special work in the window. The saving is too small when the work is badly and seldom done, and the expense is too light when the work is well done—that is, to justify the grocer in trying to economize.

The hardest times are softened by show-window emollients. Try them.

The show window is a specific for "that tired feeling" in a business. Sometimes that business gets the grip—dry rot fastens on it, or something else ails it. Then is the time to try some of "Old Doctor Curem's" window remedy. Never fails.—Merchants' Review.

UTILIZING THE MEAT SLICER.

A grocer in Southern Illinois tells of a novel window display which he says did him more good than any use to which he had put his windows in a long time. It seems that he had just bought a new meat slicing machine, which, as it happened, reached him on a Friday. Bright and early Saturday morning he had the machine in the window with a small boy in a white apron working it. As he tells it: "I had the boy alternate the cutting ham and bacon and dried beef, first one for awhile and then another. Crowds gathered around watching the smooth, even slices fall from the machine, and the boy had hard work to keep up with the demand. I really believe that nearly all the sliced meat sold in our town that day was bought at my store; and the best of it is that the demand is keeping up. I am selling many times the amount I formerly did." The idea is one which might be taken up in almost every town. While meat slicers are in pretty general use, hundreds of people do not know what excellent goods they turn out, and a display like this should popularize the goods to a great extent.

C. H. Colson, representative of C. E. Colson & Son, Montreal, Canadian representatives for Crosse & Blackwell, was in Toronto the past week calling on the trade. Mr. Colson is returning from a very successful trip through Manitoba and the Northwest, and expresses himself as very much pleased with the business and prospects for the future.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Sept. 8, 1908.

The cheese market is getting interesting by virtue of the fact that the yield may yet overtake that of last year. This possibility, however, is wholly dependent upon the sort of a fall we have. If we have a long, open autumn the prospects are that we will overtake last year's record, but, of coure, if the fall is short and cold there will be no possibility, of doing this. It must be remembered that the number of cows are far less this year than last, therefore, if the yield totals last year's it will indeed, be an accomplishment worth considering. Reports from United States points state that the keen competition for September make has already set in. This activity is due to the implied superiority of the September make over that of other months and this fact engenders the keenest sort of competition.

From the other side, cables report Canadian cheese to be very much in the limelight just now, and slowly advancing in price. The Cheshire product and the Canadian seem to be the only ones in the market which are attracting any attention at the present moment. It seems the Cheshire source of supply is not nearly so large as was expected therefore, the Canadian arrivals will have to be on a much larger scale if England expects to supply her wants with our cheese. In London it is stated that stocks generally are very much depleted and dealers are beginning to be anxious regarding supplies. The demand has kept up much better there than was anticipated, and now that the home make is much cut down owing to the hot weather Canadian cheese will be higher in the London markets. From other parts of England reports state markets are firm and prices advancing.

The receipts of cheese for the week ending September 5 were 70,849 boxes, against 66,045 boxes for the corresponding week of 1907. This shows a balance in favor of the present season of 1908 of 4,804 boxes. The receipts for the year, up to Sept. 5, have been 1,232,642 boxes, against 1,409,576 boxes for the corresponding period of 1907. These figures show a balance in favor of 1907 which it will be difficult for us to equal this year.

The butter market is in a speculative condition at the present time. Exporters are said to be losing money, owing to the high prices which they are paying in the country, and this butter is going into storage here, which looks as though a rise in price were expected. Such a condition is highly logical now, owing to the prospective shortage in the make this year. With the most auspicious weather we can hardly catch up with last year's yield, which was not by any means a large one. Reasoning on the basis that the make will be shorter this year it does certainly appear as though the chances of a rise would be good. This appears all right, but an English authority claims that it will not work out so, speaking for England, and it might be that the same reasons which he advances will obtain, to some extent at least, in this country. He claims that the poorer classes, in anticipation of a hard winter, are taking the bull by the horns and are seeking substitutes for some forms of foodstuffs, where they can be found. Margarine is naturally the thing which they turn to in such a time as this so in all probability the demand for butter in England will fall off materially during the winter months. While the Canadian working man will not entirely forsake butter and cannot buy margarine in Canada owing to the pure food laws, if there is a business depression here this winter the strictest economy will be necessary. Therefore, the consumption will not be so great as was anticipated, and the make may prove quite ample to supply all needs. The Danish make is increasing owing to the rains which have fallen in that country. The shipments from the United States to England are increasing, so it looks as though there would soon be enough butter arriving in the English markets to supply all requirements. At any rate it does not appear probable that the present top-heavy prices could continue much longer.

At the present moment there is practically nothing going forward in an export way, from Canada, as the prices are so high as to be prohibitive. A local dealer states stocks are large but not too much so, as he anticipates a large home demand, and thinks the supplies will not be equal to the requirements.

Two rather flattering statements can be made about the two leading Canadian products this week, and one is that Canadian butter remained the steadiest during the fluctuations which have taken place on the English market. This fact speaks well for this country. Another point which is a source of gratification to us is the fact that there has been much less complaining on the part of Englishmen regarding green cheese. This practice at one time bid fair to ruin the Canadian cheese trade, and also reflected on the butter trade.

The receipts of butter for the week ending Sept. 5 were 14,467 packages, against 10,932 packages for the corresponding period of last year. The receipts up-to-date are 294,689 packages against 292,206 packages for the corresponding period of last year. These latter figures show an increase over last year, and it remains to be seen whether or not this lead can be maintained.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Sept. 8, 1908.

The immediate outlook is rather blue for the packers, taking this week's conditions into consideration. Last week we reported no hogs, but pretty fair local business. This week, combined with a continued scarcity of working material, is the fact that local demand has fallen off rather materially. This, with no improvement in the English market and only small lots going forward, looks rather serious. And it is. Business is so depressed in some quarters this week that one or two of the smaller concerns are not killing at all, and this, too, on very light reserve stocks. The fact is the packers, in view of prevailing market conditions, are not at all anxious to pay the comparatively high prices the farmers demand.

What has become of the brisk local demand usually in evidence at this time of the year is rather an enigma. It has dropped, however, rather materially, probably in a good many cases as a result of smaller business being done in other lines of industry during the spring.

The English market, which continues to be well supplied by the Danes, and at spasmodic intervals by united shippers, is steady, though not too favorable. Local packers, under present conditions, are sending over only about a third of the product weekly that they did earlier in the season, and in a short time, too, the season of usual good summer business will be over.

Packers are offering $6.25 for hogs on cars, but even this comparatively good price is failing to bring out anything but a mediocre supply and even then the quality is quite questionable. Truly the whole situation is not encouraging. Whether the farmer has been too much engrossed with politics or the Toronto fair the past two weeks to pay any attention to the opportunities of the hog markets, is a question no one can answer but themselves. In any event, something will have to turn up one way or the other very soon or the packing house dividends will not be very encouraging at the end of the year.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

BUTTER—Butter is somewhat easier this week, owing to increased receipts. The price is still too high for any export business, therefore, the greater number of packages arriving are going into storage. The make is improving in quality, which as in the case of other dairy products, is the result of cooler weather.

CHEESE—The price of cheese is slightly higher this week, owing to lessened supplies arriving and advanced prices at the country boards. The maximum price this week is 12¾c, instead of 12½c, as last reported. Locally, the demand is good.

HONEY—New honey is arriving in good quantity and is being taken up by buyers as fast as it is offered. Small lots of comb honey are arriving, the demand being chiefly for the white strained variety. The dark extracted lines are stronger in the maximum price by a cent. Other prices remain the same as at last quotation.

PROVISIONS—Satisfactory trading has been done, but the exhibition record of a year ago has not been reached. Packing houses are not doing much killing just now and the visible supply in the storehouses is gradually diminishing. Quotations remain at last week's figures. Long, clear bacon is hard to obtain, and the smoked and cooked lines are in great demand. Supplies are expected to be better in a month's time, when more hogs will be offered for sale at the packing houses.

HONEY—Although this line is more plentiful in supply than a year ago, the honey crop this season is only about half an average one. Prices are 9c to 9½c for 60-lb. tins and 9½c to 10½c for smaller sizes.

BUTTER—Big demand is still keeping up the price. Supplies are fair, but not too great. Montreal is asking for some for export, but England will not pay the prevailing price. Packing is going on as during the past few weeks.

EGGS—The conditions of a week ago continue to rule the market and the prices asked then prevail now, 20 cents to 21 cents. Supplies are free, but there is a big demand, too. The shrinkage is almost as great as ever.

CHEESE—Slowly moving is this line. With the exit of old cheese the new varieties have faired up a little.

WINNIPEG.

EGGS—There is a good demand and, country supplies being light, a further advance may be expected at any time. Produce houses are paying 22 cents f.o.b. Winnipeg subject to candling.

BUTTER—Supplies of dairy butter are light and the price is advancing. For No. 1 dairy, produce houses are paying 20c f.o.b. Winnipeg and for No. 2, 17c.

AN ATTRACTIVE EXHIBIT.

One of the most attractive exhibits in the Manufacturers' Building of the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto is that of the "SALADA" Tea Co., the decorations being carried out in a purely Oriental manner. Large bronze figures of East Indian warriors surmount each corner, and hold in their hands banners bearing the word SALADA. Below these are a series of panels executed in low relief depicting the methods of tea manufacture. A series of ebony elephants, starting with one three feet high, and graduating down to a tiny little one not more than three inches high, have caused a great deal of admiring comment. A. R. Whittemore, advertising manager of the "SALADA" Tea Co., is in charge of the exhibit, and has with him an East Indian, who is dressed in his complete native costume.

F. J. Hodgson, secretary the Montreal Biscuit Company, has returned home from a few weeks' vacation at his summer home on the Lake of Two Mountains.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

An Advance in Ontario Rolled Oats—Flour Market Steady and Firm.

Grain markets generally remain on about the same basis as at last reports and millers report local business as generally good with very little export business passing.

The only change noticeable during the week is an advance of 5 cents on Ontario rolled oats and oatmeal, this confirming the reports of higher oats this fall given in these columns the past couple of weeks. The advance is due to firmer markets consequent on rather a poor outlook for oats. The Ontario crop has turned out to be of rather poor quality, light and unsatisfactory for millers' purposes. While western oats have not yet been received in any quantity reports speak unfavorably of this crop also.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—The flour situation remains about the same as last week with this, however, to note, that there is a slight improvement in the volume of trade passing. During the last week there has been some inquiry from foreign points but so far the orders filled for foreign account have been very small. A shipment of 30,000 sacks has gone forward to South Africa. Prices rule the same as at last quotation. Buyers are holding off for better prices when the new crop becomes a factor in the market. A local house says they will get what they are after according to what the Argentine can do this year. If there is a good crop of wheat there Canadian prices will go down, but if there is a shortage the price of the Canadian product will go up. There is a shortage in France and Russia this season, so this has placed the Argentine in a pivotal position.

ROLLED OATS—This market is quiet, very little business passing, although it may be said there is a slight improvement over last week. Business in the country shows some faint signs of improving. The orders received are small and only for immediate requirements. Prices are the same.

FEED—Bran is in fairly good demand and in some cases $23 has been asked and received. Supplies are very limited. Business is picking up generally, as many mills which have been closed down are now opening up. There is considerable inquiry for shorts and middlings and the market is strong.

CEREALS—An advance of 5 cents in rolled oats and oatmeal during the week bears out the promises of stronger oat markets made in these columns recently. The Ontario oats coming in are of very poor quality, so much so millers say that they cannot be used for usual purposes. Western oats have not yet arrived in Toronto but reports place this crop also as light.

OPPORTUNITIES IN THE WEST INDIES.

Flour Exporters and Soap Makers Should Exploit That Market.

C. S. Pickford, of Pickford & Black, Halifax, the large ship owners, was in Toronto this week looking after the West Indies exhibit at the Canadian National, and made a pleasant call on The Grocer. In speaking of the development of trade between Canada and the West Indies, Mr. Pickford said emphatically: "There's lots of business down there for Canadian firms, but they don't go after it. Goods must be sold down there just the same way they are here and representatives must be on the field to keep things going."

Mr. Pickford spoke especially for opportunity for trade in flour and soap. "Why," he said, "the warehouses are piled full of other soaps and an immense business is done."

Speaking humorously, he said, "The women wash standing in the rivers with their clothes wrapped around them, and slush the soap around at a great rate, letting the most of it float away. Some business has been done in the West Indies by Canadian soap manufacturers," Mr. Pickford says, "but there are large possibilities not yet touched."

W. H. Halford, of Shaw T. Nishimura & Co., Montreal, has returned from a business trip to Quebec.

Grocer's Better 3-4: Henry, I paid a social call on Mrs. Thompson this afternoon, and she told me that she never knew before that one soda biscuit could be better than another. She said that she borrowed a few from a neighbor who told her they were MOONEY'S; and they certainly were fine! She's going to buy some MOONEY'S from you next week. Hadn't you better lay in a stock, seeing they're so good? Grocer: By jove, I'll send in a 'phone order right away.

He did! Go, thou and do likewise!!

BEAN CROP BELOW AVERAGE.

Reports From Western Ontario Not Too Favorable—An Early Harvest.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Chatham, Sept. 8.—The continued dry weather of late has been ideal weather for the bean harvest, which is now under way in many parts of Southwestern Ontario. At no season does the crop stand to suffer so heavily by rain as during the harvest season. Hence, good weather for the next few weeks will be a boon to bean raisers.

Reports as to the extent and condition of the crop are rather conflicting. Nevertheless, everything goes to confirm the earlier reports that the dry weather earlier in the season and the heavy rains later both had a very detrimental effect in quite a few sections. The hot weather caused the beans to ripen quickly, before the pods were filled. The rain, which lasted almost continuously for a couple of weeks immediately after the warm, dry spell, played havoc with this ripening crop, causing a new growth to start.

As a result, reports from many sections voice the same complaint: that in many places the beans are injured by the wet, while in others the pods are not well filled. One report says: "The yield will be away below the average, and the quality inferior." This statement is, however, perhaps somewhat extreme, and buyers are confident that the damage done, while not inconsiderable, is by no means what might be called general. The harvest is exceptionally early this year.

THE CARE OF SHOW CASES.

Numbers of glass cases are ruined yearly from lack of proper attention, says an exchange. Small cracks appear, caused by heat or contact with hard, heavy bodies, and if these cracks are not at once attended to they soon spread. An excellent method to prevent a crack from spreading is to draw a short scratch at right angles with a diamond or a glass cutter; this will prevent a crack from spreading in every case. Cases should be set perfectly level on the floor, especially the new all-glass variety, which, if this is not done, are certain to warp. The legs of the case should be propped to the required height from the floor to ensure their sitting true. If these methods on the care of show cases are followed out they will likely repay owners for the care taken by retaining a better appearance for a considerable time.

The following is suggested as a practical method to remove scratches from show cases: Dissolve 1 oz. of white wax in a pint of pure turpentine. To dissolve the wax place the vessel containing the turpentine over a burner and warm, and apply with a soft cloth. This will in every sense greatly improve the surface. For cleaning glass a good method is as follows: Mix 1 oz. of whiting, 1 oz. of alcohol and 1 oz. of water of ammonia in a pint of water. Apply with a soft cloth, allow to dry and then wipe off.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Canadian Peaches, Plums, Pears and Grapes Free in Supply and Supplanting Imported Lines—New Brunswick Delaware Potatoes Arriving in Ontario Markets and May Oust Ontario Varieties—Oysters Going Well in Inland Points.

Late fruit and vegetable lines appear to be the feature in all Canadian markets. Native fruits have displaced imported varieties, and Canadian peaches, plums, pears and grapes are arriving freely on the home markets.

Bananas from South America are an attraction on the Toronto market, but they have yet to win their laurels. Some late lemons are offered cheap on the Ontario markets. The Messinas will not arrive for two months yet.

New Brunswick Delaware potatoes are beginning to reach Western Ontario, and it is believed will supplant the native Ontario brands, as these latter have not been up to the standard set by the samples seen earlier in the season. All pickling vegetables are good stock, and are expected to be splendid sellers.

All fish lines are again freer in supply. The Toronto Exhibition has been the course of much business, not only in fish, but in other lines as well. Oysters are now going out in satisfactory quantities to inland points.

FISH—Haddock and cod continue to be scarce and prices are firm. Lake trout and whitefish are more plentiful, but dore and pike continue scarce. Halibut is in better supply. Brook trout are now coming in more freely. Demand for oysters is brightening up. Shell oysters are expected after October 1. Prepared and salted lines are in good demand. A few lines have declined.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—A splendid business was done last week, the Exhibition and the holiday inducing grocers and retail fruit men to lay in large stocks. As a consequence, prices remained firm and this week the same conditions prevail. Evidently great quantities of fruit were consumed locally. The early days of this week saw another big demand at fair prices. Peaches, plums, pears and grapes are coming in heavily this week. Early Crawfords are the principal peach line, and blue, purple, green and some few odd lots of egg are the varieties of plums offering. Some splendid Bartlett pears are arriving, and not a few pickling pears are being sent out. The intermediate lines of pears are slow. Green and blue grapes are offered in large and small basket lots, and melons, though not such large quantities, are offering in plentiful supply.

Some bananas from South America, the first of the season, are a novelty, and Canadian crab apples in basket lots are now seen on the market. Lemons have declined somewhat in price. The new Messinas will not arrive for two months yet. Prices generally are slightly easier than a week ago. .

VEGETABLES — Notwithstanding that there is a slight falling away of business, compared with this time a year ago, very satisfactory trading has been done. Vegetable lines are better in quality than last year, though the Ontario potatoes are not now so good as those offering earlier in the season. However, New Brunswick Delawares are coming in in car lots, and will supplant Ontarios should the latter not improve in quality. Tomatoes are a good stock, and, in fact, all pickling lines are fine. Carrots, turnips and late vegetables are first-rate lines, but cabbage is going off. Like fruit lines, vegetables have declined somewhat in price, though the market is pretty firm.

FISH—Very satisfactory trading is being done locally and the Exhibition business this year is a bit better than it was a year ago. Oysters are a good seller, and so are all the other lines. Supplies have been more than fair, and the demand has been brisk. The variety of lines offering are proving a great attraction to visitors, and large quantities of fish are now being used as a breakfast line. Prices are unchanged from a week ago, and will likely remain so at present while the demand keeps up.

BANANA CONSUMPTION INCREASING.

Exports in 1907 Show Advance of 14 Per Cent. Over Previous Year.

According to figures furnished by the United Fruit Co., of New York, the world's consumption of bananas is increasing to a rather material extent. Figures showing the total annual exports for the past five years show that in that time this business has practically doubled. The past year itself shows an increase over 1906 of 14.57 per cent. The following table from the New York Journal of Commerce gives the figures in detail, and shows how each year gives a corresponding increase over the previous one:

	Bunches.	Percentage of increase over prev. year.
1903	5,139,063	23.11
1904	6,065,400	18.02
1905	7,283,000	20.07
1906	8,872,729	21.82
1907	10,165,759	14.57

During 1907 the bananas exported were despatched to the following ports:

	Bunches.
United States—
New York	1,236,846
Boston	1,273,398
Philadelphia	59,304
New Orleans	4,056,303
Mobile	406,229
Total	7,032,080
United Kingdom—
Manchester	2,235,117
Bristol	898,562
Total	3,133,679
Grand total	10,165,759

While some shipments of bananas do reach Canada via Halifax and St. John, the bulk of the shipments come in via New York, hence the United States ports are necessarily credited with the acceptance of more fruit than are used in that district.

It is an interesting fact that the receipts of the fruit at Manchester are almost twice those at any of the United States Atlantic ports.

ORDER-TAKER NOT A SALESMAN.

The order-taker is one who is led by the buyer. The salesman is one who leads the buyer. The salesman always presents his goods to the buyer in such a way that he realizes all the good points and advantages to be obtained in buying them.

The buyer is the judge who decides the case after the evidence is in. The salesman will never throw a wet blanket on his enthusiasm by thinking that anyone can sell the goods better than he, nor by feeling that the buyer does not want his product or could not sell it if he bought it. These are negative qualities. A salesman to be successful must cultivate the positive qualities of confidence and self-reliance—a knowing that the buyer will think as well of his merchandise as he does.

The salesman should have a keen sense of values, and know where his goods can be placed to the best advantage. There is a place for all merchandise. It is the salesman's business to find the right place. The salesman should keep in mind the fact that he helps himself by helping others; that his best interests are served only when his employers and customers are benefited.

It is not the order that comes easy that helps; the orders that seem to come hard are the ones that develop the salesman. It is a pleasure for a salesman to compel a buyer to his advantage. The reward is in knowing that he has done good work.

Cultivate an intimate acquaintance with your merchandise, your costs and your prices; believe in yourself and your employers; be loyal; be active—make it your greatest pleasure to hunt for orders—for new customers; and when you get a good idea carry it along the line—make it serve.

FRUIT.
FAVORABLE CONDITIONS FOR

Summary of Department's Report Gives Outlook for Crop.

The summary of the Agricultural Department's fruit crop report, recently issued, speaks favorably of general conditions in the fruit district during the past month.

Weather conditions have been favorable during the month of August, and all fruit is ripening earlier than usual.

Duchess apples have been moving freely from Southern Ontario in good condition. Gravensteins, Colverts and Alexanders have been shipped in small quantities and are yielding a full crop. Indications show a full crop for fall apples and below a medium crop for winter apples. The quality is good.

Clapp's and Bartlett pears have been exported in small quantities. The prospects in Southern Ontario are for a medium to full crop of pears. Everywhere else a light crop is expected, except in British Columbia, where the prospects show a medium crop.

Early peaches have proved a medium crop. Yellow St. Johns are now being harvested. Late peaches are reported a light crop.

Plums are light generally, except in British Columbia and small portions of Ontario.

Grapes are reported a full crop. Moore's Early and Champions are now on the market.

Tomatoes are proving a medium crop.

Insect and fungus diseases are not so prevalent as usual.

The United States crop reports show winter apples about the same as last year, with peaches a full crop and other fruits good.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information of Interest to Clerks and Grocers About the Goods They Are Handing Over the Counter.

There is something particularly attractive about an olive grove. The scene is one of beauty and restful fascination. The very shape of the tree tells of thrift; its upright growth, graceful and pointed leaves, olive hued now, but turned by the gentle wind, glisten like silver. It is generally supposed that the home of the tree is in Italy, where it has been known for ages, and where the growth is so slow that it is a common saying that a man plants olives for his grandchildren; but on the foothills near Elizabeth Lake a wild olive has been found, a large and thrifty tree. It appealed to the early Californians because it came into early bearing and practically never died. The old trees of San Fernando, which have been deserted and neglected for seventy-five years, are now being cared for and are rapidly throwing out branches and assuming their normal shape and beauty, and bid fair to equal the famous trees of Europe and Asia, which have been bearing fruit for one thousand years.

Starting a New Orchard.

A new orchard is started from cuttings. These are three-quarters of an inch in diameter and eight inches in length—slender material, one might think, from which to produce a bearing tree in four years. These cuttings have been taken from the parent tree in December or January and are planted in rows in sandy soil, being replanted permanently in February and March at a distance of about twenty feet apart. These will grow readily, and for a year the ground is kept well turned, the bush then being trimmed into a tree by cutting all the shoots but one, and in succeeding years the raiser watches the tree and prunes it, with the idea in view of making a lusty tree.

In four years some berries will be obtained, and the orchardist is delighted at the luxuriant growth and the rich green olives which hang so gracefully, but yet not sufficiently abundant to be of commercial value. In the sixth year the trees should produce thirty gallons each, and in eight years the cultivator finds himself in possession of a beautiful and productive grove. The trees have grown so wide that they fill the entire space and meet, and each tree under the most favorable conditions should produce forty gallons of olives. The orchardist figures that with one hundred trees an acre, and forty gallons per tree, he will have four thousand gallons; but there are pests and other enemies which materially reduce this estimate. Indeed, if the grove produces a fourth of this it is doing well. In November, when the first rains come, the olives ripen, and as soon as the berries begin to turn purple the pickers begin.

Extracting the Oil.

These pass through the grove each with a large bag hung around his shoulders. Some use ladders and others gather the fruit from platforms erected on wagon bodies and drawn along as the trees are skinned. The fruit is then subjected to the drying process. In order to get the best results the process of the oil extraction must be carefully done or disaster is the result. The crushing operation is done by a large circular stone on end which is drawn around by a horse. The olive pulp is taken from the crusher and massed in lumps or cakes about three feet square and three inches thick. The press resembles a cider press. The result from the press is run into tanks, where it remains for three months, the oil rising to the surface, where it is readily recovered.

The seemingly dry pomace or residuum in the press is put through a second crushing and treated to a bath of hot water, by which a large quantity of second quality oil is produced, even a third quality being made. The oil now obtained goes to the clarifier or filter, which is a series of boxes from five to seven in number, the bottom covered with fine cotton batting. Some use a series of metal boxes, one in the other, each having a wire sieve bottom, the oil dripping from one to the other and coming out pure and as beautiful as liquid amber.

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides.

WOOD'S PURE PACKAGE TEA

MAY QUEEN PRIMROSE
FLEUR-DE-LIS
THOMAS WOOD & CO., Importers
BOSTON AND MONTREAL

"IT IS IN THE AIR"

How often one hears that phrase applied to some condition of the public mind! A good many things get into the air, thus wasting the best parts of the originals. You may take the finest Tea in the world, for instance, handle it loosely and carelessly, leaving it open to the light of day and the dust and much of its fragrance and rich flavor disappears, while impurities creep in. In

we have a "sealed book," an air-tight guard against all foreign substances, while the captivating flavors are retained—imprisoned for the consumer.

WOOD'S Packages are all TEA—the purest and the best.

The Difference between good currants and poor currants is immense.

High sounding names (most of them fictitious) mean nothing, and are too often applied to low grade or rain damaged fruit, cleaned up to look good, but which can never taste good.

We advertise to let the grocers of Canada know that they can be sure of getting good, sound, hygienically cleaned currants in all the different grades and growths by demanding that the cases bear the name of "MEYER."

We have found that it pays to advertise our currants because they are good and true and honest. It pays because we know that if you buy them once you will buy them always, and better still for you, you will sell more.

If you insist, any jobber can supply you with "Meyer's" Currants. The largest importers sell them and will be pleased to do so.

"The World's Best"

The cook who uses Cox's Gelatine knows in advance exactly what to expect, namely, exactly what she (and all other cooks) want, satisfactory results.

There are no adulterations in Cox's Gelatine—no by-products to lessen the purity at the expense of a little extra profit for the maker.

COX'S GELATINE

Gelatines come and go with each recurring season but "Cox's" comes and stays.

COX'S GELATINE

For greater convenience to meet most modern requirements it is put up in powdered form. STRONGEST, PUREST, BEST. The maximum of quality at the minimum of price to the grocer who buys and sells it. The Gelatine that established the standard.

ABSOLUTELY PURE.

Handle Canned Goods That Are Recognized Leaders.

A modern philosopher has discovered that "The more aims you have in life the less likely you are to hit anything." Concentration is one of the secrets of success. There is a wealth of wisdom in this for the merchant. Concentrate your efforts on selling well-known lines and you'll be ahead at the end of the year. Don't load your shelves with a dozen brands of uncertain Canned Goods and keep your customers forever experimenting.

Canadian Canners' Peas Have Created A Big Trade for us

And they will do the same for you. We particularly recommend our Grade No. 2 SWEET WRINKLE PEAS. They are deliciously sweet and tender, and rapidly win new friends wherever introduced. They have a constant and ready sale all the year round. They are genuine business builders and can be sold at a good margin of profit.

Our Peas are packed in four grades as follows:—

Grade No. 1—Extra Fine Sifted Peas
Grade No. 2—Sweet Wrinkle Peas
Grade No. 3—Early June Peas
Grade No. 4—Standard Peas.

EVERY POUND COUNTS

Every Pound of Tea You Sell Either Helps Your Business or Does It Harm

When you sell a cheap tea you may please the bargain hunters at the time of buying but at the time of drinking they are condemning you most strongly, ignoring altogether the fact that they purchased at a low price. While that tea lasts everyone drinking it is dissatisfied. On the other hand, if you sell good tea at a fair price, you are constantly making and keeping customers, and the remark is constantly made—"Yes, everything you buy at_____is good."

will make you hosts of lasting customers, for all are delighted with its flavor.

Premier No. 1 Computing Chart Scale—a high-grade scale at a big saving.

No giving of OVER weight with this scale—"Exact Weight" Indicator prevents that. Wonderfully sensitive—Marvellously accurate—the scale of all scales for "fine" weighing of light groceries, teas, coffees, etc. Range of prices 4c. to 70c. pound, including fractional prices. Capacity 30 lbs. One movement of sliding poise tells "exact" weight and money value of article—all in plain sight of customer. Knife Edge Pivots protected by V-shaped Agate Bearings, which prevent rusting, corroding or binding. This scale sold to you at a clear saving of 35 per cent. on competitors' prices. Read our catalogue and learn why we are selling the Premier No. 1 for such a low price. Write to-day.

TO THE TRADE:—

Herewith please find Acreage and estimated yield in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta:—

WHEAT.	Acreage.	Estimated Yield per Acre	Total
Manitoba	2,710,000	15 bushels	40,650,000 bushels
Saskatchewan	3,170,000	18½ "	58,645,000 "
Alberta	410,000	21 "	8,610,000 "
Total			107,905,000 "
	Total acreage in the three provinces.	Estimated Yield per acre
Oats	2,660,000 acres	34 bushels	90,440,000 bushels
Barley	860,000 "	21 "	18,060,000 "
Or a total in the three Cereals of			216,405,000 bushels

September wheat is quoted at Fort William at 98c. per bushel, October 95¼c., December 92¾c. Deduct 10c. per bushel freight, and you have the returns in dollars and cents to the farmers. No. 2 White Oats, October, is quoted at 39¼c., deduct freight, say, 4½c., and you have the value in dollars and cents to the farmers. Future Barley is not quoted. So near as we can figure, the value of the three crops, Wheat, Oats and Barley, to the farmers is equal to $150,000,000.

TO THE TRADE:

England consumes nearly four times as much of

CEYLON TEA

as of all others, save India, although she has been getting it only one-eighth as long.

"WHY?"

Mainly because, of all Western peoples, the English best know tea.

For the Same Reason

England consumes about 6 lbs. and Canada 5 lbs. to the United States 1¼ lbs. of tea per capita. Every English Grocer knows tea; he has made it a study.

Good Profit Appeals to your business judgment. That is why our Mixed Pickling Spices are lines worth handling. They yield you a return commensurate to the effort expended in pushing them. Put up in ¼ lb. transparent packages.

Vancouver Retail Grocers Arranging Pure Food Show for October 12-17—Fernie Recovering From Recent Fire and Building Going Forward Rapidly.

VANCOUVER.

September 12.—Preparations are well in hand for the Pure Food Show, to be held in the week from October 12 to 17, under the auspices of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association. It will be held on a more elaborate plan than that of last year, and thoroughly systematic. W. J. C. Hunter, the energetic secretary of the association, has charge of the event and has planned out a color scheme of white and gold. Manufacturers exhibiting must leave it with the association to furnish the booth, and bunting will not be allowed to be displayed unless it conforms with the general scheme. By this means, a complete and beautiful effect will be secured. Judging from the applications received for space, the event should be a very successful one. The Dominion Hall, where the show will take place, is one of the largest of its kind in the city, and it was here that the United Commercial Travelers held their big events in the Spring.

W. J. Andrews, President of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, has gone on a trip to Toronto and other eastern cities.

This association will elect its officers for the year at an adjourned meeting, to be held next Monday, 14th instant.

Grocers in the city are much concerned over the increase in the price of McDonald's tobacco, and it is not improbable that many will cease to sell it. Not only has the price been raised, but the size of the plug has been decreased so that at the old selling price there is nothing in it. Tobacconists are selling it at two for a quarter instead of at 10 cents straight, and the grocers who handle the tobacco will either advance the price also or not keep that brand in stock.

Wholesale dealers and citizens in Victoria may make an effort to bring about a reduction in the price of melons which are imported from the South. There is no local industry to be protected and the duty was evidently obtained for the benefit of the people in the East. If a reduction could not be obtained, then the application of the duty should be restricted to those parts for the benefit of which it was put on. "Three cents on every melon is ridiculous," one merchant stated. "Why, it's a fact that this tax amounts to as much, if not more, than we have to pay for the melons in the first place." Another Victoria man, not engaged in business, looking at the matter from the standpoint of a consumer, remarked: "It means that the price charged makes the melons prohibitive to the majority. Think of it, you have to pay about 25 cents every time you want a small iced cantaloupe for breakfast during the Summer. It's delightful, I grant you, but is just a little too expensive a luxury."

Llewelyn Williams and William Evans, two residents of Nanaimo, have formed a partnership and have opened the Crescent Grocery Store in the Bevilockway building in that city.

Robert Hunter and wife, who have been residents of Rossland for 13 years, have gone to Spokane to take up their residence, though Mr. Hunter's real estate and business interests will necessitate frequent return trips to the mining capital. In 1895 he and his brother, James Hunter, founded the firm of Hunter Brothers, which since that time has been Rossland's leading mercantile establishment. Lately the big business was divided, the grocery, hardware and clothing departments going to Hunter Bros., Ltd., and the dry goods department to H. S. Wallace, Ltd. Mr. Hunter, during his residence in Rossland, has been prominent in public and civic affairs, was President of the Board of Trade for a term, and is an active member of the Curling Club. His departure will be a loss to the city that has known him so long.

The following have been elected directors of the Western Cigar Company, which held its first general meeting at Kamloops: E. J. Hosker, Chairman; S. C. Burton, Secretary Treasurer; T. J. Wilcox, J. F. Smith, A. Marians, J. E. Mackin, the manager, gave a very encouraging report of business done during August, and larger buildings have had to be found to be able to meet the demand for goods.

Local butter is now jobbed at 35c, and eggs at 40c, and from now on both will rise regularly. There may not be a butter famine this Winter, but short stocks are looked for, as the output of the creameries has mostly been used as sent down. If good butter is scarce it will mean high prices for inferior grades, and perhaps larger importations from Australia. If cold storage boats were on the route from New Zealand it would enable this large-producing butter country to place its product on this market.

FERNIE, B.C.

September 10.—The town is recovering rapidly from the shock felt at the time of the recent fire, and building is going forward very rapidly, showing confidence in the town's future. The trade are allowed to put up temporary wooden structures of 1½ storeys, which must be replaced with permanent brick, concrete, or stone buildings, inside of ten months, and this is being largely taken advantage of.

The Trites-Wood Co. have their offices in their fireproof basement, which was found intact after the fire. They have built a temporary wooden building of 1½ storeys (the limit) alongside of the ruins of their old store. This building is almost as large as the old store. The Crow's Nest Trading Co. have built a temporary store, which will be replaced by a permanent building, where they expect to open up by December 5th. Their temporary store was opened with stocks of groceries and gents' furnishings on August 17th.

Everybody in town is cheerful and busy, and prospects for winter and spring business are discussed with an optimism which impresses visitors.

A good many business men are still busy putting up new buildings or clearing away the ruin of the old ones and it is not an uncommon sight to see commercial men climbing over the ruins or up ladders with sample grips to get after them.

HALIFAX.

Sept. 14.—The rush of visitors to the city during the Exhibition made business brisk in all lines of trade. Many of the jobbers report a large increase in their sales. While there is some opposition to exhibitions here on account of the annual deficits, the businessmen generally favor the Fair, as it adds a stimulus to trade. Prices generally are pretty steady. There is no improvement in the receipts of eggs, but the supply is ample to meet the demand. Dairy butter is not so plentiful in small tubs, but there is lots of creamery on the market. The price, however, keeps up.

The consumption of sugar is quite heavy now, the preserving season causing a good demand, as plums and crab-apples are now coming in. The sugar market is a little easier, but prices are not down as low as some of the jobbers earlier in the season expected that they would be. Since the drop of ten cents per hundred pounds two weeks ago, there has been no change.

Lunenburg bankers continue to arrive with large catches of fish. During the week nine vessels reached their home port with catches aggregating 12,500 quintals of cod and haddock. Prices of dry fish are away down this season, but the catch is large, and this will help the fishermen out. Dry cod is quoted at $6.25 and haddock from $4 to $4.50. No. 1 mackerel are selling at $14 and No. 2 at $12. The best herring are selling at $4 per barrel. The market is well supplied with fresh fish, with the exception of mackerel, which are very scarce. Oysters are now on the market, and they are in good demand.

There is not much doing in the molasses markets now, the sales being very light. Extra choice Porto Rico is quoted at 37c, fancy Trinidad at 36c, fancy Barbados at 37c to 38c and Barbados at 32c to 33c.

Over 20,000 barrels of potatoes were taken away from Halifax this week. The steamer Boston took 7,000 barrels to Santiago, Cuba, the steamer Sokoto had 7,000 barrels for Havana and the Red Cross liner, Venitia, had 6,700 barrels for Havana, which were transhipped via New York. The Boston also took one thousand bags of oats.

INGERSOLL.

Sept. 14.—A production much larger than in previous years has done much in cheapening the price of fruits and vegetables. Tomatoes, which have heretofore sold at fairly stiff prices, principally because of the fact that they were grown on a comparatively small scale in this section, are now retailing at about the same figures as in the localities where their growing is made a specialty. To overcome a repetition of the hard times scare of last winter, country and townspeople alike engaged more extensively in the growing of vegetables with the result that there has been a plenitude of all kinds. Tomatoes are by no means the crop that was at first anticipated, difficulty being experienced in getting them ripened, but nevertheless they are plentiful and the person without a garden must be rejoicing at the cheap prices at which they can be had. On Saturday last medium sized baskets, containing tomatoes of excellent quality were retailing at fifteen cents. The prevailing figure at the present time is about 60 cents per bushel. Those who did not grow their own supply are now making their purchases and the odor of catsup, etc., is almost everywhere being wafted through the kitchen door.

Pickling season with the grocer is about like harvest time with the farmer. It is an all round busy season. The housewife is kept going from early morn until late at night. First it's shopping then it's back to the kitchen where the air is laden with the odor of spices. There has been a big demand for pickling requisites with the local grocers as nowadays many people make pickles and relishes take the place of the more expensive fruits to a certain extent.

With some people there is not a little anxiety as to the potato yield. The early potatoes are said to be a comparatively poor crop. In many instances the yield has not only been light, but the potatoes have shown a tendency to rot. Judging from present indications potatoes will not be as plentiful as a year ago and those who will have to buy their supply may expect to pay a larger price.

Peaches from the Niagara district have been coming in in large quantities during the past couple of weeks. The Crawfords, as usual, have been in good demand and the quality has been up to expectations. The prices have ranged about the same as in previous years.

Grapes also are being marketed now and they promise to be cheaper than usual. The early baskets have been selling at 25 cents.

In the southern part of Oxford county melons are grown rather extensively. The soil, largely sand, is peculiarly adapted for melon growing. Already this season several loads of melons have been marketed here, the price ranging from five to twenty-five cents according to size and quality.

Poultry, butter and eggs are still somewhat scarce at the local market. Butter is retailing from 29c to 32c for creamery and 25c to 28c for dairy and some predict that the 35c mark will be reached again before the winter is over. Poultry is no doubt plentiful but it will not be placed on the market until later in the season.

PETERBORO.

Sept. 15.—The rice crop on Rice Lake is very good this year and is now ripe for gathering. The harvesters are Indians and there are at present several camps of red-men on one of the islands gathering in the harvest. Black rice is a very tempting dish and many of the grocers handle it.

Local grocers who deal in fruit state that during the past two weeks fruit has sold rapidly, especially peaches, grapes and pears.

The marriage took place on Tuesday, Sept. 9th, in Toronto, of O. S. Matchett, local traveler for Chas. Richor, wholesale grocer, Peterboro. The bride was Miss Louie Smart, of Toronto, who was formerly employed in a grocery store in Peterboro. Mr. and Mrs. Matchett are residing at 384 Mark St.

W. H. Hamilton, a Peterboro grocer, has written a letter to the press challenging the correctness of the statements of J. A. Ruddick, chief dairy commissioner for Canada, who has said that Canadian grocers sell principally culled cheese. Mr. Hamilton says there are more than 2,000 cheese consumed in Peterboro each year and he claims that not more than 50 of these could possibly be culled. He himself never bought a culled cheese in his life.

CHATHAM.

September 15.—Burnie & Co., who recently bought out Jas. N. Massey, have just turned out Mr. Massey's delivery rig with the new firm name. The rig is very handsome, having a black background with the firm name in varying shades of red, orange and pink.

Mrs. John McConnell, wife of the Park St. grocer, fell, on Saturday, fracturing her arm. She is progressing as favorably as could be expected.

Herbert Bennett, of Fort William, formerly of G. S. Heyward's grocery staff here, is visiting city friends.

Ald. John Edmondson, the genial St. Clair St. meat seller, is out for the mayoralty for 1909. Ald. Edmondson is the doyen of the present council, having served seven years, and will unquestionably make a strong run.

The Dresden Canning Factory is running full blast, about 20 men and 75 women being employed. Tomatoes are being put up now, the crop in this district being a record breaker.

The stock in trade of Harry W. Jacques, who recently made an assignment, was auctioned off recently at the premises, corner Cross and Raleigh Streets. The stock, valued at $1,029.63, including book debts, was sold at 67 cents on the dollar to Adam Bros., of this city, who will continue the business.

The Chatham Fruit Growers' Association are having gas fixtures installed in their factory and drying kilns.

A. J. Barassin, of H. A. Andrew's grocery, is spending a week in Toronto.

C. H. Seeley, of the West End Grocery, at the corner of Gray and West Streets, is advertising considerably. Mr. Seeley is making a feature of the ice cream and cigar trade.

R. J. McKelvie, Petrolea, is once more in business, having recently opened a fruit and confectionery store adjoining the Hotel Normandie.

A PURE FOOD BUILDING NEEDED.

While the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, recently closed, was a remarkable success from practically every standpoint, there is one feature in which the grocery trade in particular is interested which deserves attention and improvement. That is, the space given to and the arrangement of the exhibits of pure foods and grocers' sundries. This year these exhibits were placed for the most part in the Manufacturers' Building and as far as the arrangement and space permitted, made a pretty fair showing. It was not, however, what it should be, nor was it representative of Canadian manufacturers of pure foods.

The reflection for this cannot be laid, either, at the manufacturers' doors. It is stated that the applications for space for such exhibits this year were very largely above what space could be granted and that a number of intending exhibitors were entirely crowded out.

Considerable dissatisfaction was evident also among the exhibitors at the arrangement of the booths and with the system of cross aisles by which a large percentage of the visitors pass through the building without going near a large number of the exhibits. Originally the exhibits of a similar nature were grouped, but with several years of change the system has been altogether lost sight and the exhibits now are a hocus-pocus, with jelly powders next sporting goods, chocolate and tea exhibits next to showings of billiard tables and so on. These matters will, however, be remedied, to some extent, at least, before next year's exhibition, as was evidenced at a meeting of exhibitors with the exhibition directors on Friday last, when it was announced that the building was to be entirely re-arranged.

The matter of greater accommodation for pure food exhibits has not, however, been referred to with any seriousness.

The only solution for the present difficulty is a building devoted exclusively to such exhibits. A few years ago some doubt would have been expressed as to the possibility of filling such a building, but at present there need be no hesitation on this account. At the Central Canada Fair at Ottawa, now in progress, a comparatively large building is being used for this purpose and every foot of space has been disposed of. The matter of a new building was referred to the Exhibition Directors at the meeting mentioned above, but no encouragement was given. The Directors have other plans and other ways for disposing of the surplus funds, which they consider more urgent. The matter, however, is one which must be faced sooner or later. If Canadian manufacturers of pure foods are anxious to secure worthy representation they should get together in the matter and make representations which would have some weight. Until that is done we can scarcely hope for a much better display of such exhibits at the Exhibition.

THE PRICE OF APPLES.

As surmised by The Grocer some time ago, when the Government fruit crop report for the early summer months was issued, the price of apples has declined and they are now at a reasonable price.

Last week a paragraph appeared in one of the Toronto dailies stating that an unnamed apple dealer had bought during the summer apples on the trees at from 75 cents to a dollar a barrel and now that he was able to place them on the market he could find no buyer. The only explanation that can be given is that the dealer must have been asking too high a price for his fruit. For the past two or three weeks apples have been quoted at $2.50 per barrel. This price was considered too high by grocers and retail merchants generally. Consequently the retailers have not been buying extensively, but in small lots.

For good sound fall apples even $2.50 is not too much to pay. A single barrel of decent apples on the tree should easily be worth a dollar; a new barrel for packing costs 43 cents; add to this the cost of labor in picking and packing, and the cartage and freight, which will add another 60 cents, and there will be a profit for the apple dealer of 47 cents, if he sells at $2.50. There will not be 47 cents profit, either, for out of that sum will have to be paid office expenses and perhaps delivery to the merchant. Of course, this argument refers to single barrels only; for larger quantities, say a car lot, the expense would be much smaller proportionately; but then the apples in large lots can also be had at a cheaper price. The $2.50 quotation placed on extra good stock does not begin to compare with the $4 asked a year ago. True, there is not the scarcity there was last year, and anyway, apples have advanced more to the luxury class in the tastes of some people owing to the late monetary situation.

But as a matter of fact the early varieties of apples have already declined in price and are now quoted at from $1.50 to $1.75 and $2 per barrel. No doubt the price has come down because buyers have held off. At that not much money is to be made, and packing, in consequence, is being done in old barrels.

The export of apples from Canada and the United States, taking the figures of Montreal, Boston and New York up to last Saturday, show that just about double the quantity are going out this year compared with a year ago. The conditions in England this season are almost similar to last season, reports from the Old Country stating that much fruit has been burned on the trees because of drought, with this exception that Canadian and United States apples are superior in quality to a year ago. We do not care to prophecy, but if more apples go into England this year than last prices should decline. This would bring about a drop in the number of apples exported; a greater quantity would be thrown on the Canadian markets and if precedents count for anything, might tend to still further lowering of prices here. At present, however, the quotations now prevailing, from $1.50 to $2, are reasonable, and $2.50 is not too high to ask for single barrels of properly packed high-grade apples.

FIRE LOSSES AND THEIR LESSON.

When fire is an enemy it is a terrible one. Insurance provides compensation, but fire eats up capital as completely as if it was devoured by the ocean.

In the United States and Canada last month over $23,000,000 worth of property was destroyed by fire; and in proportion to population the Dominion was the greater sufferer of the two.

The losses in nineteen Canadian cities and towns alone contributed $5,831,000, or rather more than one-fourth of the total loss in both countries combined.

The four towns of Fernie, Sparwood, Michel and Hosmer in British Columbia that suffered from forest fires contributed $4,100,000 to the total. Other chief sufferers by fire in Canada last month were: Port Arthur, $500,000; Montreal, $90,000; Toronto, $140,000; West Toronto, $150,000; Gore Bay, $150,000; Newcastle, N.B., $100,000; Belleville, $67,000; Havelock, $41,000; Sault Ste. Marie, $75,000; Moncton, $30,000; Sayabee, Que., $30,000; Pottersburg, Ont., $150,000; Glencoe, $16,000; London, $107,000; Stirling, $750,000.

The loss by fire in Canada and the United States from January 1 to August 31 aggregates $164,603,000.

These figures are staggering and should impress upon business men particularly the importance of taking every precaution against fire.

Proper appliances, public and private, will do much in minimizing the possibility of conflagrations, but back of it all there must be carefulness on the part of those employed in factory, warehouse and shop, for nearly all fires have their origin in carelessness.

DRIED FRUIT SITUATION.

At the present moment the dried fruit market is quite interesting in anticipation of new stock arrivals, which will begin to pour into Canada shortly. Old stocks held are not proving attractive to the buyers in many lines. Some firms are cleaning up 1907 holdings by making substantial reductions in the price. This practice, however, is not general, having been resorted to only by firms who were too heavily stocked at this time of the year and who wanted to make room for new goods. Reports arriving from Greece state that the currants this year are of superior quality, and in every way sound. If the demand continues to increase the market will undoubtedly advance. So strong is this impression that many offers on a basis slightly below ruling quotations have been promptly turned down.

The S.S. Corsican brought the first valencias to arrive in Montreal on Sept. 11, and the quality of the fruit proved to be of the finest. French prunes are a factor in the market owing to attractive prices. Many opinions are expressed regarding their merit. Some local houses have stocked partially with the California and Oregon prunes, in spite of the high prices ruling. They have done this thinking they could cover the price without much risk on account of the fine quality which this fruit always possesses. Bosnia prunes are being purchased quite extensively by some houses who are short on their California stock. Dried apples are very slow at the present moment and this condition will continue in all probability until new crop is quoted. Present stocks are very low.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Sept. 14.—The weather of the past week has been phenomenal in the West even, where a fine September is the rule. On more than one day it has reached 90 in the shade, and the sun has shown from a cloudless blue sky, in fact, it has been more like the beginning of August than the second week of September. The harvesting is being pushed forward with great rapidity and in the sections where crop was early a great part of the threshing is already completed. Receipts of wheat at Winnipeg are running about 375 cars daily, and already there is complaint of car shortage or delay in the car movement. Unless the strike is speedily settled this will be very acute before another week is over.

In the meantime the threshing returns are most gratifying in many cases going two and three bushels over the yield anticipated. The grade so far has been satisfactory, the bulk of receipts for the past week running one and two Northern, but it is hardly anticipated that this standard can be maintained as the districts where they have had frost have yet to be heard from. There are a good many cars going rejected that really ought to grade No. 1 Northern, were it not for the wild oats and other bad weeds.

A very encouraging feature of the market has been the strength of prices in the face of rapidly increasing receipts. Eastern millers are showing a commendable eagerness for Western wheat and for the greater part of the week a premium of 2½c to 3c was paid for all cars east of Winnipeg. On Saturday, however, in the face of increasing receipts, this premium dropped to 1⅝c. Export demand has been only fair, but Winnipeg prices are said to be more nearly in line than American and export houses expect increasing business right along. All receipts so far have been very readily absorbed. Receipts at country elevators in Southern, Southwestern Manitoba and Southern Saskatchewan are running about 10,000 to 12,000 daily. In Southern Alberta in the winter wheat territory there is more or less of a blockade for want of cars. This is not wholly the fault of railways for the increase in acreage has not been met by local elevator men with an increase in storage capacity. For example, at Claresholm, where they claim they will market 1,500,000 of all grain this year, there are only three elevators with a total capacity of 105,000. At Indian Head, Sask., the only point at which a like amount has been marketed in the past, there are 12 elevators with a capacity of over 450,000 bushels. In the meantime brokers are shy of selling any more Alberta red for fear of not being able to get it forward in time.

Cattle trade has been extremely active this past week and the yards are crowded every day. The cattle now coming in are mainly smaller bunches from stock farms, though there have been one or two bunches of excellent range steers during the week. It is estimated by the cattle dealer than 60 per cent. of all export cattle are now forward. The market has been lower in sympathy with the drop in the Old Country, but it is steady and no further decline is looked for. Export steers are now quoted at $3.75 to $4, point of shipment, while good butchers range from $3 to $3.25, and low grade stuff runs down the scale to $2 per cwt. Much of the stuff coming this week has been lowset, blocky three-year-olds, very smooth and fine.

Final returns for the crop of 1907 are now to hand, the Free Press again coming head as the most correct estimator of crop. This is the fifth year for them without a break. The estimate published Sept. 17th, 1907, was 71,250,000, and the actual returns were 70,922,584, a remarkably close run. The value of the crop was $55,053,444, including seed wheat, or $44,424,044 actually received by the farmers for wheat alone. This is a pretty good showing in a year when all the wheat growing countries reported serious damage. The actual value of the oat crop is rather difficult to get at, as only a little over 13,000,000 passed inspection. These averaged about 40c all round to the farmers. The entire oat crop must have run about 75,000,000, but the balance was apparently consumed locally or marketed for consumption in the country.

The wheat crop graded remarkably well for such an off year, over 50 per cent. being contract grade, that is 1, 2 or 3 Northern.—H.

CURRANT CONSUMPTION INCREASING

Review of Season of 1907 Shows Larger Export to All Quarters but Australia—New Crop Promises Well and is Estimated at 170,000 Tons.

Burlumi's annual report on currants, recently received, gives some interesting statements regarding the Greek currant business during the past season, and furnishes tables which show that the consumption of currants is increasing to a material extent.

The circular dated London, August 22, says in part:

"The crop of 1907 was estimated at over 140,000 tons. The shipments up to the 13th of this month had attained 125,500 tons, and 500 tons more are expected to be shipped by the end of the currant year, which is to-day making in all 126,000 tons. There were, in addition, delivered to the Chartered Currant Company's Retention Stores 28,000 tons, of which 23,400 tons represent the retention in kind on the first exported 140 millions of Venetian pounds, while the balance is represented by retention certificates in circulation. It is estimated that about 1,300 tons of fresh currants were made into wine, and there is left in Greece, in fruit, about 1,000 tons. Deducting the 300 tons brought over from the previous season, we find that the crop of 1907 yielded 156,000 tons, against 135,500 tons in 1906, and 160,500 in 1905.

"The weight exported was distributed as follows:

	Tons in 1907	Tons in 1906
To the United Kingdom and Australia	68,500	62,500
To the United States and Canada	19,000	16,900
To the Continent of Europe	38,500	29,300
Tons	126,000	108,700

"The season has been an unsatisfactory one to all concerned. The growers did very well in the early part of the season. They sold the bulk of their produce at remunerative prices, but a good many of them, wishing to do better, held back their fruit and lost their opportunity. The importers sold their later importations at a considerable loss and the depreciation of the article in the second half of the season cannot have been profitable either to dealers or to grocers. The average sterling price, free on board Greece during the whole currant year, was about 3s. per cwt. lower than in the preceding season.

"The work of advertising the article in the United Kingdom has been continued all through the year, and it is mainly due to this effort that in spite of a rain-damaged crop, an indifferent quality and other adverse conditions the consumption has exceeded all previous records.

"The clearances for home consumption in the United Kingdom, from the 1st of August, 1907, to the 31st of July, 1908, have been 61,437 tons, against 60,440 and 57,473 tons in the two previous seasons. The consumption in the Australian Colonies has been about 1,500 tons smaller than in the previous year, owing to the large crop of raisins and of currants produced in Mildura and the increase of the duty from 2d. to 3d. per pound by the new Commonwealth tariff. In the United States and in Canada the consumption has been about 1,300 tons, and in the rest of the world about 3,000 tons larger than in the previous year. The universal consumption has been about 120,000 tons, against 116,200 tons in 1906-1907, and 112,500 tons in 1905-1906. The visible universal stocks outside Greece at the end of this month are estimated at 9,000 tons, including cargoes afloat, against 3,000 tons in 1907 and 10,500 in 1906.

"The Greek exchange has remained stationary round 27 drachmas per £ sterling during the whole yearly period. The fluctuations up or down rarely exceeded 1 per cent.

"The Chartered Company received in their warrant stores during the season a little under 6,000 tons, all of which have already been taken out. They have purchased no currants, the market prices having been, all the year round, above the convention limits. The retention, as already stated, was paid in kind on the first 140 millions of Venetian pounds shipped, and 23,400 tons have been delivered for this purpose into the retention stores. A rather superficial acquaintance with the working of this part of the convention provoked on this side, in the Autumn, some rather severe but totally undeserved criticism of the conduct of the company. It appears that in the opinion of the Greek law officers of the Crown, whenever part of the exported currants have to pay the retention in kind and part in money, the part in kind must be paid first. Now, in the commencement of the shipments of the last crop there were available no retention certificates whatever, and, to facilitate the shipment and avoid delay which would have been injurious to all interests, the Government, on its own responsibility, allowed the shippers on the first twenty days of the season to deposit money in lieu of certificates, with the option of exchanging their deposits with certificates at any time before the 14th of October. The price of certificates having risen considerably, the shippers had no interest in redeeming and did not redeem their deposits. On the reassembling of Parliament the Government introduced a bill legalizing their action and ratifying a convention with the company by which shippers were given further time to redeem their deposits, failing which the company was empowered to use them in the purchase of the currants necessary to complete the entire quantity of retention in kind. The bill became law and the retention quantity was completed within a few days.

"The retention currants have been sold, part to local distillers and the balance to the Wine and Spirits Company. This concern has used up in its numerous factories almost all the accumulations of retention currants of the last four years and it is now left with a stock of about 40,000 tons, including the balance of the above 23,400 tons. This quantity is barely sufficient for a year's consumption. The total quantity used by the local distillers and the Wine and Spirits Company during the year has been about 54,000 tons, against about 40,000 tons in the previous year.

"The new crop promises to be an exceedingly good one both as to quality and quantity. No disease worth speaking of has injured it and so far the weather has been favorable. The fruit matured about a week earlier than last year and there is every probability of shipments commencing on the 24th inst. and of the first steamers sailing before the end of the month. Samples received overland show the fruit to be all that can be wished. The weight is estimated at about 170,000 tons and the retention will be taken all in kind, viz., 40 per cent on the inland fruit and 35 per cent. on all the rest."

THE B. C. FRUIT CROP.

R. M. Palmer, superintendent of the B.C. Provincial Bureau of Information, who has been on a trip through the Okanagan, states that the fruit crop in that district will be from 40 to 50 per cent. larger than last year. The demand, too, is active, some large shipments having been sent to the Northwest. "It will be the best year in the history of the district," said Mr. Palmer, "the peach crop being beyond all expectations. The younger trees are bearing a good crop, while the older trees are carrying a heavier crop than ever before. Fruit growers are very enthusiastic over the outlook."

Early apples and plums are going out in car lots. Prices this year are somewhat lower than last but the demand is increasing. United States competition is the cause of the lower prices, American fruit markets this year being in an unsatisfactory state. The C.P.R. is giving special attention to the fruit trade, and is supplying an adequate quantity of cars. New markets are springing up, Australia this year taking 40,000 boxes or 60 carloads of apples. Some of the larger Okanagan firms are contemplating making shipments to England this year. The Northwest is the best buyer, however, and is adding to its customers at the rate of 250,000 each year.

Fruit Inspector Maxwell Smith says progress in the Kettle River Valley, the Kootenays and Similkameen, as well as the Okanagan, is phenomenal, and developments at Kelowna, Peachland and Summerland are beyond all expectations. On the Coldstream ranch at Vernon are to be seen 72,000 young peach trees in one block, and at Penticton, too, the orchards are beautiful. The crops look even better now than they did earlier in the season; the prune crop particularly will turn out a full crop and of excellent quality. The apples on the Coast are not quite up to the average, but in the interior they are excellent. Pears are the only crop that will be light, though in some districts they will be quite up to the standard. A fair estimate of the Okanagan Valley alone should place the output at $150,000.

The Canadian National Exhibition

Bigger, Grander and More Successful Than Ever—Large Increase in Attendance and Handsome Surplus—Splendid Exhibit From the West Indies Opens the Eyes of Many Visitors—Interesting Provincial Exhibits—Displays of Foodstuffs and Grocers' Sundries Described and Illustrated.

The Canadian National Exhibition, which was originated in 1879 as an annual fair with the City of Toronto behind it, has, in the intervening twenty-seven years, developed not only into the largest annual fair in the world, but also into a magnificent exposition of Canadian products and results. And more. From the fact of the great number of exhibits from points outside Canada, as, for instance, Great Britain, the West Indies, France, the United States and others, and from the thousands of visitors representing other countries, it is coming to have, to a large extent, an international character, which increases as the fair expands in size and success.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—West Indies' Exhibit.

The Provincial Exhibits.

One of the features which gives the fair its national character is the exhibits from the various provinces of the Dominion, showing their products and resources.

This year this feature was more than ever before evident, every province but British Columbia being represented by a government exhibit. These provincial exhibits were placed in the Horticultural Building, a place perhaps as appropriate as any because of their general character, and while these exhibits were never very crowded, numbers of practically interested visitors spent a good deal of time in the study of the various products shown.

Ontario's exhibits, naturally enough, when her other products were displayed by manufacturers in other buildings, was chiefly of agricultural products. Samples of magnificent fruit of various lines were displayed by the agricultural department, and in connection with this was an interesting showing of fruit packed for export, one of the points the Department has strongly emphasized in recent years. A large part of Ontario's space was utilized in showing the work done at the Agricultural College, Guelph, and another useful feature was a collection of the pests which play havoc with Ontario's orchards and grain fields.

The Province of Alberta had an unique exhibit, representing, as its principal product, by means of an arrangement of mirrors, a thousand miles of wheat with the prairie chickens, gophers, etc., complete, and a horseman in the rear to represent how the ranchmen are being forced back by the march of the wheat growers. Alberta showed also a large variety of the different grades of coal found within her borders. The exhibit, too, was surrounded by photos of the chief towns in the province, in itself quite an educational feature.

Saskatchewan showed her products, sheaves of magnificent wheat, flour in bags, small fruits, fur-bearing animals and some minerals, spread out at the back of the booth. In the foreground, a working model of a grain elevator, cut in sections to show the "inside workings," was a very representative feature. Some photos of the prairie and also of the wooded section in the north of the province gave an excellent idea of the physical appearance of the province.

Nova Scotia's exhibit, naturally enough, was composed of minerals from its important mining section. A few agricultural products were to be seen but the fishing industry, scarcely understandable, was not represented in the slightest particular.

New Brunswick also confined her attention almost altogether to minerals and the showing gave many visitors a great surprise.

Wealth of the West Indies.

One of the strongest educational features and one that should reflect in a practical way on the export trade of Canada, was the comprehensive exhibit from that other part of Britain, the West Indies, which was housed in a rather inadequate section of the Railways Building. The effort of the exhibit, as explained by Charles S. Pickford, of Pickford & Black, Halifax, whose steamship lines are the principal means of communication between Canada and the Indies, was to represent the products of the islands, which were of commercial value, and which the great majority of them, might, under larger exchange of business, be profitably brought into Canada.

The products of the various islands were exhibited in sections, as may be seen in the accompanying engraving and in the centre of the exhibit the hut is built of bamboo, sugar cane and palm leaves. The islands represented were St. Vincent, Antiqua, irgin Islands, Dominica, Barbadoes, Demerara, Balatea, St. Kitts and Montserrat. Prominent among the products, of course, were various lines of sugars and molasses, of which Canada is now a large importer, cocoa of the finest quality, jams of various kinds admirably packed, cocoanut oil, honey, essential oils, coffees, rice, tamarind syrup, etc. Montserrat showed a magnificent line of lime juice which it would seem could be used to a greater extent here with advantage. Several of the islands had exhibits of sea island cotton, the finest grown in the world, and with this was shown cotton seed meal. Another interesting product was a stock food composed of the by-products of molasses. A number of small hand-made articles representing something of the life of the islands was shown which attracted the attention of the curious. Mr. Pickford was present during the entire exhibition and went to a great deal of trouble to give an idea of the island products to visitors. The exhibit should be a material factor in increasing Canadian-West Indian trade.

The Foodstuffs Exhibits.

Readers of The Grocer are, however, perhaps more interested in the displays of foodstuffs at the Exhibition. With so much comment in recent years on pure food and manufactured articles of food it was only natural that this department should be well represented. It is safe to say that in no section is the Exhibition more complete than in displays of this character. The various exhibits are described and illustrated at length in the following pages:

Notwithstanding the fine representations made, this department is not so full nor so complete as it should and would be if more space was at hand. A large number of manufacturers of food products were unable to exhibit their goods this year simply on that account. Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed by exhibitors also, in regard to the arrangement of the booths in the building and to the fact that the various foodstuff exhibits were widely separated and that no sequence of departments seem to be followed. This matter, which is dealt with at greater length elsewhere in this issue, will probably be remedied to some extent at least, before the next exhibition.

GILLETT'S BOOTH.

The concensus of opinion of visitors to the Manufacturers' Building, as to the most attractive exhibit, judging by comments heard, was in favor of the magnificent stand of E. W. Gillett Company, on main aisle. As will be seen by reproduction of photograph, this exhibit is even more elaborate than in previous years. Too much praise cannot be given this company for their artistic display. The color scheme was rich and harmoniously carried out, and everything bright and attractive. It will be noted a large gilded lion surmounted the centre of projecting stand, while handsome banners were used showing Canada's emblems, "The Beaver and the Maple Leaf." The display of the company's products was neatly arranged, and Magic Baking Powder was the most prominent. In the centre of the booth was the pivotal attraction, "The Hindoo Magician," whose magic wand instantly transformed a package of Magic Baking Powder into an appetizing biscuit. The query, "How does he do the trick?" was echoed by every observer. This Hindoo gentleman is one of the best advertising men in the employ of the company. That other well-known magician, Mr. J. F. Holden, the company's Western Ontario representative, was, as usual, in charge of the booth.

The company's business is increasing very rapidly, and, notwithstanding the $20,000 addition to their factory, which was completed last spring, they are yet unable to turn out goods fast enough to fill the demand. The factory contains their own plants for the manufacture of cans, paper boxes and other packages used.

During the time of the Fair the factory was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting, and these, with the illuminated sign, proved a great attraction to visitors. Scarcely anyone passed the corner, particularly in the evening, without stopping to look at the fine factory.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of Edwardsburg Starch Co.

EDWARDSBURG STARCH CO.

One of the oldest and most substantial business enterprises represented at the Canadian National Exposition, and one of which Canadians generally are proud is that of the Edwardsburg Starch Co. Being a purely Canadian company, which has by the uniform excellence of its product built up a magnificent and steadily-increasing business, the firm is one which the best class of visitors enjoy seeing represented at the Fair.

The exhibit this year, as usual, was well worthy of the firm it represented. Occupying large space on a corner of the centre aisle, it attracted a great deal of attention. The exhibit proper was in the form of two booths, each displaying different lines of the company's products. The booth on the north side impressed visitors at once with the product it represented. The covering was worked up to form a mammoth crown in good imitation of the company's trade-mark and the various sizes of Crown Brand Table Syrup, as furnished the grocer, were displayed inside. The other department of the booth, representing the starch products of the firm, showed lines of Silver Gloss, Canada Laundry, Enamel Starch and Benson's Prepared Corn, the latter in the original yellow package as put up by the founder of the company in 1858.

The exhibit was of value to the grocer by reason of the manner it interested the public in the goods. This work was furthered, also, by the distribution of samples, dainty souvenirs, books for children, etc., all of which were gotten out in a very attractive form, so that they will be preserved and thus be a permanent advertisement. Over 100,000 of these souvenirs were distributed during the Fair, a feature which ought to be somewhat materially effective in keeping the company's name and the good qualities of the goods before the public.

Fred. A. Verey, manager of the firm's Toronto office, was in charge of the exhibit, and associated with him was J. T.

Paul, of the Ontario traveling staff. Both gentlemen were exceedingly active in welcoming visitors and in explaining the good qualities of the goods.

EXHIBITS OF BUSINESS APPLIANCES.

Mechanical office appliances and aids to business are finding such a large place in modern business life that naturally the exhibit of this line of goods was large. Among the many the exhibit of the Copeland-Chatterson-Craine Co., with its new systems of bookkeeping and accounting, etc., made a good showing. A feature of interest in the Carter-Crume Co.'s fine display was the new "Plic" books, the uses of which were explained to hosts of visitors.

Jones Bros. showed a number of lines of their famous show cases for all purposes, and many favorable comments were heard. The D. R. McIntyre Co., of Tillsonburg, had an attractive line of their office appliances, as had also the Office Specialty Co. Among these exhibits one of particular interest to grocers was that of the Computing Scale Co., of Canada, showing line of new and convenient weighing appliances. The Upton & Reid Specialty Co. had an exhibit of meat slicers and cash registers in the Manufacturers' Annex. The Burroughs Adding Machine Co. had a line of their labor and mistake-savers on display and the Gaummeter Multigraph demonstrated the peculiar possibilities of their machine. The National Cash Register Co., of Dayton, Ohio, had a novel exhibit in the Woman's Building, consisting of cinematograph and stereopticon pictures and lectures illustrative of the splendid factory at Dayton, and the improvements which have been made in local conditions as a result of the company's enterprise.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of Christie's Biscuits.

CHRISTIE, BROWN & CO.

No exhibition of Canadian manufactures, particularly of food products, would be complete without a display of Christie, Brown & Co.'s lines of biscuits. The name Christie has been a familiar name in almost every Canadian household for years, and the firm, by the excellence of its product, has built up a reputation which could not well be higher. As usual, however, Christie, Brown & Co. were represented at the Exhibition by a splendid exhibit, which greeted visitors on passing down the main centre aisle of the Manufacturers' Building. The exhibit was in the form of a large four-sided shelf display of the firm's lines, being built up of tiers of the various varieties of biscuits in glass-fronted boxes. The display was of particular value to the grocer, by way of giving him an idea of the attractive appearance, these same goods would make on his store shelves.

One or two of the newer lines that were shown and sampled during the Exhibition were macaroon wafers, coffee wafers and fruit cake, and puddings packed in one and two-pound tins, to retain the flavor.

Christie quality is unsurpassed. This has been secured by several different means but in the large business no feature is more emphasized than the purity and excellence of the raw material purchased. This is particularly true of the dried fruits so largely used in many lines of biscuits. Such as raisins, currants, figs, nuts, etc. These goods are purchased direct from the best dealers in the countries of growth, and are brought in exclusively for use in the Christie product. This principle is followed also in purchasing materials more closely at hand, and the excellence of the firm's goods is maintained by purchasing nothing but the best the market affords.

There is considerable comment these days on factory sanitation, and the treatment accorded employes. It might be mentioned that the Christie factory is granted to be a model of cleanliness and order. All employes are furnished with white suits and handkerchiefs which are kept constantly clean and fresh in an up-to-date laundry on the premises. A light and airy dining-room is provided for the use of the employes at lunch hour, and other improvements of a like nature help indirectly in assuring the excellence and purity of the Christie product.

BORDEN'S CONDENSED MILK.

While much is said these days in regard to pure foods, reference is usually made to manufactured articles and little consideration is given to the milk used in the households. Even in Toronto this week the health officer is issuing warnings against the indiscriminate use of dairy milk. There is no need for hesitation, however, when such an article as Borden's Condensed Milk is on the market. The Eagle Brand of Condensed Milk stands foremost among staple articles of food, which bear long-established reputation. It was introduced by the inventor, Gail Borden, in 1857, has always been acknowledged as the highest standard, and the housekeeper can thoroughly rely on the quality that has so satisfactorily stood the test of years.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of the Borden Condensing Co.

This valued product was demonstrated at a dainty booth at the Exhibition. Other lines shown at the same time were Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream, a product for which the same excellent qualities may be claimed, and Borden's Malted Milk, a food not only for invalids and infants, but for general use. Peerless Evaporated Cream may be used similarly to the milk, but is particularly adapted to making ice cream. Attractive advertising matter, illustrating the various points here mentioned, was distributed during the Exhibition, as well as little souvenir stick pins, which almost everybody wore.

Most grocers know what profitable lines these goods are to handle. They have been on the market so many years and have become so familiar to the public that the demand is very large and is continually increasing. The goods are a line which will well repay a little pushing and by cultivating customers, a good business can be built up in these goods.

The exhibit was in charge of B. C. Many, of New York, who is very enthusiastic over the good points of Borden's, and who made many new customers for some of the grocers during his stay here. W. H. Dunn & Co., Montreal, are the agents for Borden's goods for Canada.

BRAND & CO., LIMITED, LONDON, ENGLAND.

This world-renowned firm have placed their agency for Ontario with Messrs. Hamilton Morton Co. of this city. Their demonstration of the celebrated A1 Sauce and Soups has been singularly successful. These lines are exported to all parts of the world.

Not everyone who swears by "A1 Sauce" knows that his favorite Sauce was the invention of one Mr. Brand, who was, in his day, a famous chef, being maitre de cuisine to His Majesty George IV. The sauce that won favor in the eighteenth century in the households of the great is the Sauce of the million in these democratic days, and as Messrs. Brand & Co.'s Stand testifies, to the production of the original Sauce has been added a multitude of Meat Extracts and Essences, Soups and other Potted Goods. Brand's essence, like the A1 Sauce, is of course, a household word. Every medical man recommends it as a stimulant which does not carry with it any injurious after-effects.

With the aid of A1 Soups, which are to be obtained in glasses as well as tins, the cook can place an excellent soup, such as Palestine, Julienne, Ox-Tail, Green Pea, or Mulligatawny on the table in a few minutes."

Agencies are established in the following places where stocks are carried and these lines can always be obtained: Montreal, H. Hubbard, 27 Common St.; Toronto, Hamilton Morton Co., 1 Wellington St. E.; Winnipeg, W. H. Ahrens, 396 Victor St.; St. John, N.B., J. Read; Vancouver, R. T. Finn, 337 Hastings St. W.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of Brand & Co., London, Eng.

The Walter M. Lowney Co., Montreal, and New York, had a dainty booth on the centre aisle of the Manufacturers' Building, where samples were distributed and sales made of a number of the company's lines. The Lowney Co. have an international reputation, which was fully borne out by the goods on display.

E. D. SMITH'S EXHIBIT.

A strictly Canadian product, and one of which Canadians are justly proud, was that represented by the exhibit of E. D. Smith, the Winona preserver, whose goods have achieved a reputation surpassed by none. The fact that a Canadian firm puts up a uniform quality of jams and preserves of an excellence which matches, and even surpasses the best imported goods is a matter of pride. A report from the Department of Inland Revenue at Ottawa proves the truth of the claim for the absolute purity of E. D. Smith's goods. Out of 182 samples of preserved goods collected in Canada by the Department, only 29 passed analysis as being genuine and unadulterated. Of these 29 10 were made on E. D. Smith's fruit farms. Not a single pure sample was made by any of the other leading establishments manufacturing a general line of jams, jellies and preserves, and catering to the trade of the whole Dominion.

In the face of this, grocers who want the best will assuredly buy E. D. Smith's goods. They are good lines to handle from other standpoints, in that there is already a large demand from the general public and this is stimulated and the grocer backed up by well-planned newspaper advertising.

During the Fair a couple of lady demonstrators offered appetizing samples of the firm's goods, and the visitors evinced a good deal of interest in these widely-known Canadian goods. The exhibit was under the direction of W. G. Patrick, the agent for E. D. Smith's goods for Ontario, and inquiry at their office, 29 Melinda Street, Toronto, will bring any desired information.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of the H. J. Heinz Company.

H. J. HEINZ CO.

Among all pure foods, none is more justly celebrated than the H. J. Heinz Co.'s 57 varieties. These goods were, as usual, represented by a most attractive exhibit, and crowds of visitors took the opportunity of "tasting the 57." The booth, as may be seen from the engraving, comprised a display of the Heinz products in the centre, surrounded by a daintily set counter from which the demonstration was made. Surmounting the whole was a 10-foot electric pickle bearing the word, "Heinz," in incandescent lamps, and at each corner were posts bearing large electric globes, each inscribed with the familiar motto, "57." On the walls in prominent places were two large cards bearing the names of the selling agents for Canada, viz., H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, and Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal. The exhibit was under the direction of R. Muat, Toronto representative of the Heinz Co., and the work of demonstration was in charge of Mrs. A. M. Wells, the firm's head demonstrator, who has been employed in this work by the Heinz Co. for 14 years, having traveled from coast to coast in the United States, visiting all the important towns and cities, and several also in Canada, and, naturally, is pretty conversant with the firm's products. A number of young lady assistants were always in attendance.

The Heinz Co., it is conceded, have the cleanest, largest and best-equipped pure food establishment of its kind in the world. They have 4,000 employes, 40,000 employed in the growing season, 400 traveling salesmen, 14 branch factories, beside the main plant at Pittsburg, 69 salting stations and 31 branch houses. Recently the company is specializing on a particular line of olive oil, something which it would pay the grocer to investigate and handle. The company now has an olive factory in Spain, from which the goods are shipped to this market. An idea of how the company's business is growing may be obtained from the fact that where Mr. Muat formerly covered Ontario, his time is now entirely occupied in the interests of the company in Toronto.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION —Thos. J. Lipton's Tea Rooms at 191 Yonge Street, Toronto.

THOS. J. LIPTON'S EXHIBIT.

The good things presented in the way of pure food display were not, however, all to be seen in the Exhibition Grounds. Representatives of Thos. J. Lipton are always on the lookout for something out of the ordinary and they usually succeed in realizing it.

Instead of occupying more or less limited space at the Exhibition this year, premises at 191 Yonge St., near what is perhaps the busiest corner of the city, were secured, and here the exhibit was made. The advantages of the situation were obvious, for it is safe to say that more people saw and were interested in this down-town display than viewed any single display at the Fair.

The premises were transformed for the occasion into a dainty tea room, as may be seen from the accompanying engraving. While dainty and appetizing lunches were served at the tables, composed for the most part of Lipton's products, such as teas, coffees, jellies, jams, pickles, marmalades, etc., the goods were arranged on the shelves and in silent salesmen in prominent though out-of-the-way places.

A very hearty welcome was given all visitors, and the fact that the tea room was filled almost from morning till night every day during the progress of the Fair, shows how popular the result was. Four Cingalese, brought from the Lipton estates in Ceylon, all experts in tea, aided in serving and in demonstrating the excellence of the firm's products. A number of lady demonstrators were also in attendance

The window of the store was also utilized, and proved a feature of great interest. It was splendidly dressed, solely with the Lipton products, and gave a pleasant idea and introduction to the attractions within. This window, by the way, as well as the arrangement of the goods inside, was a very material object-lesson for grocers as to the good appearance which might be secured from a display of the various lines of Lipton's goods.

A. E. Carson, who is familiarly known as Thos. J. Lipton's manager for Canada, was responsible for the arrangement and success of the down-town exhibit. It was but another evidence of the activity and up-to-date ideas of this house.

A special welcome to grocers and their friends was extended at the Lipton tea room, and a great many took advantage of the opportunity. They were invariably royally used and went away with a good feeling for the Lipton products.

THE QUAKER OATS CO. AND CANADA.

The booth of the Quaker Oats Company at the Canadian National Exposition is attractive interesting and instructive. The variety of products of this great company is not as well-known as it should be, and many a visitor to this booth goes away with a feeling of satisfaction to know that he can vary his diet in cereal foods and still be sure of the purity and cleanliness that mark the products of this company.

Nothing but quality could have given any food the world-wide distribution that belongs to Quaker Oats; this fact is indisputably proved by the consumption of tremendous quantities of Quaker

Oats in countries that have been known as oatmeal-eating countries for many generations, and where advertising does not play the important part that it plays in this country. Once Quaker Oats was introduced in these countries its consumption has increased steadily, replacing the home manufactured and other brands and doing all this by the sheer power of remarkable flavor and perfect purity and cleanliness.

Other prominent and popular products of the Quaker Oats Company are Quaker Rice (puffed), Quaker Wheat Berries, Quaker Toasted Corn Flakes, Quaker Breakfast Biscuits and Pettijohn Breakfast Food, etc.; while in flour, the Quaker Patent Flour is the choice of all fine flours made in Canada, and is just what one would expect as a product from the finest Manitoba wheat milled by the most approved milling methods. The company's mills for the manufacture of these products are at Peterborough. (See illustration).

Factories of The Quaker Oats Co.. at Peterboro', Ontario.

Such industries have a wide and deep influence upon the general economics of the country that is blessed with them. This influence begins with the employes of the mills where cleanliness and care in selection of all materials are lessons that are taught with unremitting diligence, extend to the farmer, who, because of such an industry, finds a ready market with good prices for his products, and who, encouraged by the higher prices paid for the only quality of grain that is accepted by the Quaker Oats Company's mills, strives each year to raise a better crop than the year before. Better crops, better prices, better food, better standard in everything, from field to table, are the results that came to Canada from having as one of her great industries the mills of the Quaker Oats Company. The world knows of this great Canadian enterprise, for on every package and on every sack that comes from these mills are the words, "Made in Canada."

In no way are the possibilities of the fertile fields and the manufacturing enterprises of Canada given such widespread publicity as by putting out such goods as the cereal foods of the Quaker Oats Company and saying of them, "Made in Canada."

"Certainly a nation's prosperity is upon a stable basis when her farmers are striving for the best, her millers are working to a single standard of purity and cleanliness, and her people are feeding upon the most wholesome food known. The company that plays such an important part in this condition of affairs should be looked upon as more than a mere manufacturing industry—it is much more, and we congratulate the Quaker Oats Company.

PETERS' POLISHES.

One of the new exhibits and one which attracted the attention of the crowds who passed through the Manufacturers' Annex, was that of Peters' Polishes, of 617 Queen St. West, Toronto. The excellence of Peters' Polishes is immediately made known on a trial. They are manufactured by a polish specialist, and are the result of careful study and scientific tests. They are coming to be extensively used where their utility is known and their fame is spreading.

The lines shown included Black, Tan and Patent, and Lily White Shoe Polishes, and Peters' Furniture Polish, another excellent line, which is rapidly coming into favor.

Peters' Polishes would well repay the grocer for stocking them. They are so thoroughly satisfactory that a sale means a pleased customer and a return order.

FONNER'S ORANGEADE.

One of the newest things at the Exhibition and a beverage which sprang into immediate popularity by reason of its deliciously refreshing qualities, was Fonner's Orangeade. Served from the booth in the centre of the Process Building, which is represented in the accompanying engraving, it attracted a good deal of attention and favorable comment. Fonner's Orangeade is made only from the best of fruits, and contains absolutely no chemical substances. For its purity and refreshing qualities it is highly recommended by physicians and chemists, and is coming to be extensively used in hospitals both in the United States and Canada. The oranges used are concentrated in Florida in a $10,000 plant. The product is then shipped to the factory at Toronto, where other processes complete the beverage. A number of tests have proved its keeping qualities, and have shown its value as a revenue producer for the grocer. It will keep indefinitely, even in the sun in a window, and it is sure to be popular with the public. It is particularly suited for picnic and banquet purposes. The company propose carrying on an extensive advertising campaign next spring, with a view to creating a large demand for the article. During the Exhibition a great deal of interest was displayed by visitors in the trade, and a large order was taken from a firm of bottlers in London, Eng. The preparation is sold in bulk, by the barrel or gallon, and also in bottled form, for general use. Fonner's Egg Shake was another delicious beverage demonstrated at the booth. The exhibit was in charge of E. F. Trimble, who has charge of the Toronto business. Associated with Mr. Trimble was John A. Winchester, who is taking charge of the firm's business in the West, and will also manufacture the product in Winnipeg. We predict for this firm a great future, both in the West and the East, many inquiries being made at the Fair by people from various sections from Halifax to Vancouver, as to where Fonner's Orangeade could be purchased.

THE SNAP HAND CLEANER.

The Snap Hand Cleaner, which has come to be handled so largely by grocers since its introduction to the market a little over a year ago, was well represented at the Exhibition again this year by a booth in the Manufacturers' Annex, and the counters were almost always crowded with people watching the demonstration of the product. Snap is a paste hand cleaner, composed on new principles, and has been so successful that its name is coming to be a household word in Canada. It removes paint, grease, blacking and stains from the hands in a remarkable way, leaving them as soft as velvet. In fact, the more constantly Snap is used the softer and healthier do the hands become. While particularly adapted for the use of mechanics, printers, metal workers, etc., its use is not confined to this class, but it is used by all classes of people as a valuable toilet article. Snap has indeed become so popular since its introduction that the factory in Montreal has become unable to supply the demand, and it is expected to double the plant shortly. A fact of interest to retailers is that while a large number of orders were taken for Snap at the Exhibition, these were passed on to the inquirer's retail dealer, to be filled from his regular stock. Snap is sold only to wholesale dealers, from whom it goes to the retail trade. H. E. Livingstone, one of the firm's representatives, was in charge of the exhibit, and with him were C. Ireland, one of the travelers, and two lady demonstrators.

RED ROSE TEA.

A booth one could not pass without giving more than an ordinary glance at its artistic and business-like arrangement, and which seemed to be patronized more than any other booth in the Manufacturers' Building, was the Red Rose Tea booth. It had been enlarged and elaborately decorated with a special "Red Rose" design for this year's display, and was on one of the most prominent corners. In one end was a mechanical model of a tea garden showing the actual workings of a tea estate. This was run by electric and water power.

The remarkable success of the Red Rose Tea business during the past few years deserves more than a passing notice, but one can readily understand why the growth has been so rapid when hearing so many flattering remarks about the delicious quality of the tea by visitors who were being served at the dainty tables, with specially designed Red Rose cups and saucers, by neat and attentive lady demonstrators who left nothing undone for the comfort of the guests. Grocers and clerks with their wives and friends received especial attention at the booth by Mr. E. E. Boyd, sales manager

INGERSOLL CREAM CHEESE.

The exhibit of Ingersoll Cream Cheese, situated on a corner section nearly facing the south entrance to the Manufacturers' Building, attracted the thousands of visitors who attended this building. The appearance of the booth itself, a large sign, bearing the words: "Ingersoll Cream Cheese. It Spreads Like Butter—Ingersoll Packing Co., Ingersoll, Ont., Canada." On the counters at both corners and on well-arranged shelves at the rear of the booth, were pyramidal piles of the appetizing cream cheese, in of the Toronto branch, who had charge of the booth, and at the office down-town Mr. Geo. H. Campbell seemed to thoroughly enjoy meeting so many of his old friends and making many new ones.

dainty and with every suggestion of cleanliness, had a good deal to do with an excellent first impression given. The walls were panelled in green burlap and were decorated with attractive hangers and other advertising matter, issued by the firm to assist the sale of the goods. Hanging across the top of the booth was the familiar wrapper with the yellow cow in the centre.

Four demonstrators waited upon the public, the majority of whom were already conversant with the high quality of this already well-known cream cheese. Hard facts tell the story of the popularity of Ingersoll Cream Cheese in blocks.

The consumer receives twice the quantity of cream cheese of a higher quality than has ever been offered for sale until Ingersoll Cream Cheese was placed on the market. There is hardly a town of any size from the Atlantic to the Pacific but where Ingersoll Cream Cheese is well-known for its steadily increasing sale.

MAPLE TREE PRODUCERS' ASSOCIATION.

Everybody likes maple syrup and maple sugar, but within late years there has been a good deal of hesitancy on the part of the buying public because of the large quantities of adulterated goods unloaded on the market by unscrupulous dealers. The display of the Maple Tree Producers' Association, of Waterloo, Que., in their two booths at the Exhibition. one of which is illustrated here, was attractive from the standpoint of the absolutely pure goods demonstrated.

A recent report from the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa shows how the standard of quality is maintained in Maple Tree Producers' goods. Samples of various maple syrups and sugars were taken at random by inspectors on different markets in Canada. In several cases the goods of other firms were found to be adulterated, but in every case the Maple Tree Association's goods were pronounced absolutely genuine. This speaks volumes for these goods, but the verdict could not well be otherwise for absolutely nothing but pure maple sap is used in the preparation of the firm's various lines.

The lines displayed at the attractive booth in the Process Building. an engraving of which is shown herewith included Pride of Canada Maple Syrup in tins and bottles, Pride of Canada Maple Sugar in various forms, and Creamaple, a delicious preparation for icing cakes and making maple candy. Samples of these goods were distributed and their good qualities explained. A new drink, Mapleade, was also on tap at the booths, and was pronounced excellent by the hosts of visitors.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of Nugget Polishes.

Mr. Goddard, president of the Maple Tree Producers' Association, was on hand during several days of the Exhibition, and did his utmost in his characteristically jolly way to make visitors welcome. W. J. Dack, the Toronto representative, was also present during the Fair and helped to make a large number of new friends for the Pride of Canada goods.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of the Maple Tree Producers' Association.

THE NUGGET POLISHES.

Occupying an attractive corner booth in the Process Building, the superiority of Nugget Polishes was demonstrated daily to thousands of visitors. The demonstration was particularly interesting, showing the absolute waterproof qualities of the polish. A shoe was polished in the ordinary way, giving a beautiful finished effect,. and then was washed in a basin of water, coming out without a sign of difference or any dimming of the polish. Another important point is that Nugget Polishes will not rub off, and thus will not soil gowns nor clothing which the shoe may come in contact with. This was demonstrated when the shoe was rubbed with a towel after being washed.

The lines exhibited were Nugget Black, Tan and White Polishes, Patent Creams, Honest Polish and Nugget Furniture Paste. An attractive feature for the retailer in regard to these preparations is that they will not dry in stock, will not freeze, and that they can be handled on an attractive basis of profit.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of The Genesee Pure Food Co.

JELL-O.

A dainty and largely-visited booth, just off the east aisle of the Manufacturers' Building, was that of the Genesee Pure Food Co., where Jell-o, in the form of jelly and ice cream powders, was demonstrated. Attractively arranged in front of the booth were a series of the various kinds of jellies which may be made from Jell-o, and these, in various colors, with different kinds of fruit in several molds, attracted a good deal of attention. Samples of this jelly and also of Jell-o Ice Cream were distributed by attentive demonstrators.

Jell-o is a ready-for-use jelly powder, made from imported gelatine and other high-grade components, which is exceedingly convenient, and the product of which is most appetizing. Jell-o Ice Cream Powder is a preparation for the making of ice cream at home, dispensing with the expensive ingredients and the trouble otherwise necessary. Grocers woud do well to examine these lines with a view to stocking them if they have not already done so, for the demand is becoming so large that they must prove a profitable investment. R. C. Gilfillan was in charge of the exhibit.

THE HUYLER CANDY CO.

One of the prettiest booths in the Manufacturers' Building and also one of the most visited, was that of Huyler's, the candy manufacturers. The booth was built up with four ornate pillars, as is shown in the accompanying engraving, and was surmounted by electric lamps bearing the firm name. The various lines of confectionery manufactured were daintily arranged in the centre and back of the booth. A large number of the multitude of lines manufactured in the factory at 130-132 Yonge St., Toronto, were shown, and this "Made in Canada" feature was noted by Canadian visitors who appreciate getting the very best confectionery, particularly when it is made at home. Some of the newer and most popular lines shown were Chocolate-Dipped Triscuit, Household Chocolate, Vanilla Pink-Wrapper Chocolate, Premier Chocolates, Butter Scotch Toffy, Washington Toffy, Cough Drops, Bottles of "Cuts" and Huyler's Celebrated Cocoa in half and quarter-pound tins. The purity and excellence of Huyler's goods are known the world over. With this reputation, Huyler's would be an exceptionally good line for a grocer to lay in who looks to building up his confectionery department. The wholesale department at 130 Yonge St., Toronto, is prepared to supply these fresh, Canadian-made goods, in all quantities, at short notice.

TOBLER'S CHOCOLATE.

McLure & Langley, the agents for Canada and the United States for Eugene Tobler, the Swiss Chocolate King, had a pleasing display of fine confectionery in a dainty booth. The booth, to better represent the goods shown, was built in the form of a Swiss chalet, following the lines of some of the smaller houses in the Bernese Mountains.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION Huyler's —CANDY EXHIBIT.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of The Cowan Co., Limited.

THE COWAN COMPANY.

As the largest manufacturers of cocoa and chocolate in Canada, the Cowan Co., a name familiar to grocers all over the country, and to the public generally, were well represented by a large booth on the centre aisle of the Manufacturers' Building, in which were attractively displayed the various lines of goods turned out by the company. The large and excellent business which has been built up by this firm is the result of an output of a uniform product of the highest grade. Quality is the watchword of this company, and it is on this that the high reputation enjoyed has been built up. One of the factors leading to this result is the excellent facilities supplied in the firm's factory. It is equipped with the latest machinery for the manufacture of cocoa and chocolate in various forms, and it can safely be said that no establishment in America has a better equipment.

This fact is freely evidenced in one of the lines manufactured by the Cowan Co., their unique "Maple Buds," a triumph in the art of chocolate making, which have sprung so rapidly into favor in Canada. These delicious goods were demonstrated at the booth, along with other lines, among which special mention might be made of one of the newer lines, "Nut Milk Chocolate," which combines fresh walnuts with delicious milk chocolate in the making up of a most delicious confection. Cowan's justly celebrated Perfection Brand Cocoa was also attractively demonstrated.

Retailers in all parts of Canada are rapidly coming to recognize the advantage which comes to them in handling Cowan's goods. In the first place, the goods are absolutely reliable, and there is a large and steadily increasing demand. Again, the goods are backed up by a series of carefully planned advertising campaigns, which are of material aid in keeping up the demand. The trade is covered from coast to coast by a well-organized traveling staff, so that the goods can be easily procured, and to facilitate supplying dealers also, branch stocks are carried in Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver. To further aid in making the excellent qualities of the goods known to the public and thus assisting the retailers, the company is planning a campaign of store demonstration later in the season in the Maritime Provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Most grocers could, with very little extra effort, make a good deal more out of their confectionery departments than they are doing. Of course, the best class of goods are necessary to secure the best results, and Cowan's lines of high-class chocolates will prove excellent money-makers. The crowds around the company's booth in the Exhibition were an evidence of the popularity of the goods.

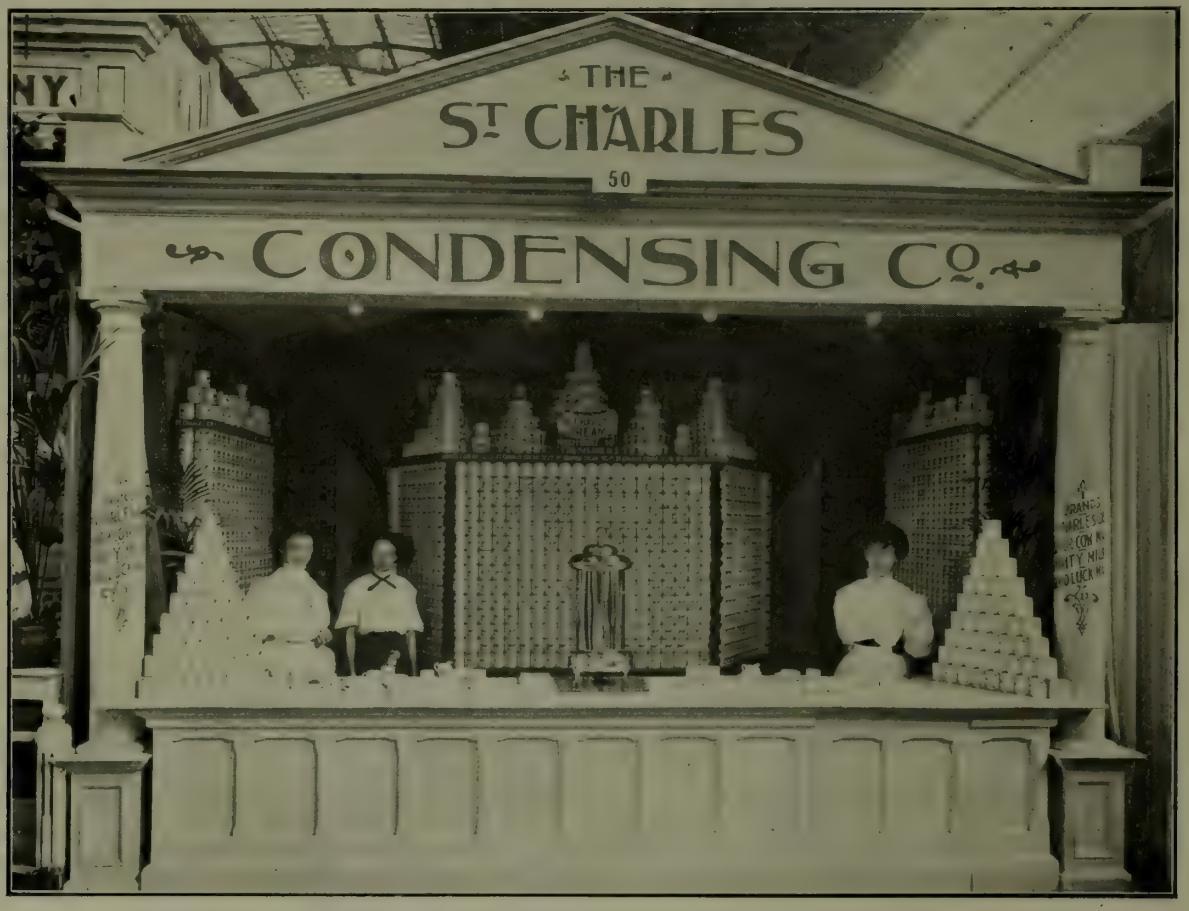
Mr. C. Dimmock was in charge of the exhibit during the Exhibition, and he, with a number of lady demonstrators, was assiduous in looking after the desires of visitors.



CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION—Exhibit of St. Charles Condensing Co.

ST. CHARLES CONDENSING CO.

The exhibit of the St. Charles Condensing Company in the Manufacturers' Building, was one that attracted the attention of all the housekeepers who visited the Exhibition. The success of this firm's exhibit was far ahead of any previous year; in fact, it exceeded the expectations of the management. There was not a minute of the day that there was not a throng of people before the exhibit eagerly asking questions about St. Charles' Evaporated Cream. This article has now come to be an absolute necessity in every household as condiary milk or cream, as they can use what they require, and put the rest away in a cool place until they wish to use more. Ordinary dairy cream or milk has to be used up, as it is bought each day. The public is just beginning to realize the purity and convenience of this article, and it cannot be wondered at that thousands of people each day asked the ladies who were demonstrating this article question after question regarding the product. Most of them left orders to be delivered through their regular grocers. This fact should be appreciated by the retail trade, because by demonstrating this article to the public in this manner new customers are made for the grocer and trade brought to him which ordinarily would be going to the dairyman.

The demand for St. Charles Milk and Cream has increased to such an extent recently that the factory at Ingersoll was scarcely able to turn out a sufficient supply. Extra condensers have just been installed, so that now the company will be able to fill all orders promptly. The exhibit at the Exhibition was in charge of Frederick Dane & Co., Toronto, the Ontario agents.

PACKARD'S POLISHES.

One of the busiest booths in the Manufacturers' Building and one which was almost always surrounded by crowds of visitors was that of Packard's Polishes. A good deal of this was due to the popularity of the goods, but a large share was attributable to the demonstrating done by J. W. Strike and E. D. Van Dyne, who were indefatigable in keeping up an interest. The sales made were so large that supplies of one or two lines, supposedly enough to last throughout the Fair, were sold out early in the second week.

THE McGREGOR BAG HOLDER.

One of the exhibits in which grocers particularly were interested, was that of the McGregor paper bag holder in the Process Building. The appliance, which hangs above the counter in easy reach has a place for all sizes of paper bags, and is a great convenience. Grocers who are using the holder, and the number is steadily increasing, speak in highest terms of its good features.

THE CANADIAN SHREDDED WHEAT CO.

One of the most interesting exhibits at the Canadian National was that of the Canadian Shredded Wheat Co. In the Process Building they showed the steps of manufacture of shredded wheat biscuit, from the wheat to the cooked biscuits. The food was also demonstrated at a booth in the Manufacturers' Building, and in both places visitors were treated with samples of the product. J. Hewitt, the Toronto agent, was in charge of the exhibit.

THE WALTER BAKER CO.

Among the United States manufacturers exhibiting, the booth of the Walter Baker Co. was one of the most attractive. For several years the firm has exhibited its cocoas and various lines of chocolates at the Toronto Fair, and the excellence of its products has led to a large increase in sales in Canada. C. Simmons was in charge of the booth, and W. S. Shaw, one of the company's selling agents, was a visitor during several days.

MELAGAMA TEA.

As usual, the Melagama Tea occupied a prominent place in the Manufacturers' Building, and its excellent qualities were demonstrated to throngs of visitors. Many were the kind things said about the excellent tea served, and grocers, particularly, were interested in the new money-package scheme, which the company is using with a good deal of gratification, as it proves highly satisfactory to the grocer and to themselves.

ARMOUR'S PRODUCTS.

In an attractive booth off the main aisle a display of Armour's products was given which attracted much attention. The excellent qualities of the various lines manufactured by the company need not be mentioned here, but the fact that the goods shown were manufactured in the company's factory in Canada added to the interest. The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, are the Canadian agents for these goods, and the activity displayed by this firm in handling other lines should be an earnest of the success of the Canadian-made Armour products.

TOASTED CORN FLAKES.

Kellog's Toasted Corn Flakes, the original product, were demonstrated in an attractive booth in the Manufacturers' Annex. The fact that this food is made at London, Ontario, accounts, and justly so, for a large part of the interest displayed. The quality of the goods, also, is without question, and they represent a triumph in modern cereal manufacture.

BLUE RIBBON TEA.

Blue Ribbon Tea was represented, as in former years, by an attractive booth in the Manufacturers' Building. The exhibit was on a prominent corner on the main north aisle, and attracted the attention of many old friends and customers. Blue Ribbon occupies a prominent place on the counters, and in the hearts of many grocers in Canada, and to these the sight of the familiar booth was grateful. A large number of visitors were hospitably entertained at the booth, and spoke in highest terms of the treatment received.

NEW IDEAS FOR THE STORE.

A city grocer, who is somewhat pressed for show room, has hit upon a good scheme. The idea is not altogether new, but is worth mentioning. He has had the largest part of the counter tops removed and thick plate glass let in, flush with the remaining wooden frame. In this way the stock which is in the drawers underneath is exposed to view and can be kept in good condition, free from dirt and dust. The value of keeping goods where they can be seen is evident, because, as every man in trade knows, many customers come to the store to buy a few articles which they desire definitely, and in many cases they see many other articles which they think they want and so sales are increased.

Telephone pads fastened to the telephone are a good investment. Orders may be taken correctly hot off the wire without having to make an excuse to go and get a pad. It is always more or less annoying to have to wait when one is in a hurry. Sometimes the grocers who make customers wait get a good long wait themselves, in fact, so long that they never get a chance to make them wait again.

VASELINE AS AN EGG PRESERVER

At certain seasons in the year it becomes necessary for the grocer to preserve eggs, owing to heavy receipts. This is particularly so in the country, where a grocer is obliged to take the produce which the farmers bring him. All sorts of schemes have been devised for keeping these eggs, and most all have met with but indifferent success. Perhaps the only one happy exception is the water-glass method, which possesses the disadvantage of being troublesome when the eggs are required. A very cheap and efficient method has been employed by a grocer in Montreal, which has succeeded admirably, and that process may be described as follows: A bottle of vaseline is heated until it becomes of the consistency of a thick fluid, and then the eggs are dipped into the vaseline. Utmost care should be exercised to cover every portion of the shell. The vaseline may be applied cold, but this method does not insure success, because parts of the shell are more easily missed in this way. The method requires very little expense, as a 10-cent bottle is ample for ten dozen eggs. After they are packed they should be kept in a cool place. It will be found that the eggs thus prepared will keep as long as required.

Canada's Great Eastern Exhibition

Eastern Townships' Fair at Sherbrooke, August 29th to September 5th, Achieves a Decided Success—Attractive Exhibits by Manufacturers and Wholesalers in Main Building Claim the Attention of the Grocery Trade—Illlustrations of Some of the Leading Exhibits.

Sherbrooke's 24th annual Fair, from August 29th to September 5th, was favored with splendid weather, and from every viewpoint scored a remarkable success. The directors and officers of Canada's Great Eastern Exhibition deserve credit for such a splendid Fair in a city the size of Sherbrooke. During one day of the Fair over 30,000 people went through the turnstiles, and this gives some idea of the support the Eastern Townships gives this Exhibition.

The dairy and cattle showing were really of interest, and had many inquiring sightseers. The amusements provided, in the form of vaudeville and trotting races, kept the big grand stand well filled, while the midway was always thronged.

Visiting merchants found much to interest and attract them in the various exhibits in the main building. Manufacturers and wholesalers go to a great deal of trouble and expense in fitting up their booths, and introducing their goods to visitors at the Fair. Every booth seemed busy and the literature and samples distributed should be productive of good results. The Main Building is very spacious, and affords ample space for display. Some of the exhibits which proved of interest to grocers are illustrated and described.

PACKARD'S POLISHES.

A shoe polish that the public are pleased with and which consequently gives the grocer who carries it good returns. This very ably describes Packard's polishes, which were demonstrated and sold in the booth shown in the accompanying engraving. With each sale was given some novelty as a souvenir, and as an evidence of just how popular the goods proved, it may be mentioned that the stock brought in, considered adequate for the Exposition, in one or two lines, had to be replenished during the progress of the Fair. The booth was in charge of J. B. Crochier, one of the Eastern traveling men, and assisting him were other members of the firm's staff from Montreal.

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS' EXHIBITION—Exhibit of Packard's Polishes.

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS' EXHIBITION—Exhibit of Rock City Tobacco Co.

ROCK CITY TOBACCO CO., LTD.

The illustration shows only a part of this attractive exhibit. The "Laurier" Cigar is featured by this firm, and a large portrait of Sir Wilfrid is given free with 1,000 cigars. This portrait, which was displayed, is not seen in the engraving.

Their various brands of smoking and chewing tobacco, as may be noted, were shown to advantage. A fine line of Canadian leaf tobacco made a creditable appearance.

C. S. Milette, 64 Rue Sherbrooke, Que., their representative in the Eastern Townships, was very active in distributing samples, as well as booking orders from merchants attending the Fair. His likeness appears in the photograph. Jos. Picard, general manager of the Rock City Tobacco Co., Ltd., Quebec, was a visitor at the Fair, on one of the busy days. The company's trade in the Eastern Townships is expanding rapidly.

Royal Sport and Hogen-Mogen Cigars, the leading brands of the Sherbrooke Cigar Co., were well advertised at the Fair.

PRIDE OF CANADA MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Sherbrooke Exhibition would be incomplete without a representative showing of Maple Products, as the Eastern Townships is noted for its maple sugar and maple syrup. Each year the Maple Tree Producers' Association, Ltd., Waterloo, Quebec, supply the needed attraction. At this Fair they had two exhibits, one in the Dairy Building, a reproduction of which appears here, and a larger showing in a prominent place in the Main Building.

M. F. Goddard, manager of the Maple Tree Producers' Association, Ltd., whose likeness may be detected in the engraving, was the usual enthusiastic director of operations, and even helped pour Mapleade for the thirsty crowds.

An even added distinction was given this firm at the Fair, as their exhibit in the Dairy Building, against strong competition, was awarded the medal of honor, a silver one, for the best showing of maple products of all kinds. The silver medal is an emblem of merit the firm may well be proud of.

In the Main Building was their splen did booth of Maple Sugar and Maple Syrup. These were displayed in their various sizes in the attractive bottles, cans and boxes, put out by this firm.

Pride of Canada Maple Products have a distribution covering all Canada, and are handled by leading wholesalers in every section. Their sale has been built up in a large degree as a result of absolute purity of Pride of Canada Maple Products.

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS' EXHIBITI ON—Exhibit of Maple Tree Producers' Association.

VICTOR ARCHAMBAULT.

Victor Archambault, a progressive Sherbrooke wholesaler, with offices and main warehouse at 28 Bridge St., had both an interesting and attractive exhibit of biscuits and confectionery, in a prominent position in the Main Building. Some idea of the range of biscuits carried by this firm, may be gained from the fact that the exhibit contained over 150 varieties of fancy biscuits. These lines are all sold under the label of Victor Archambault, and his knowledge of quality and value is such that an enviable reputation has been built up for Victor Archambault's biscuits.

The lines of confectionery just visible in the engraving are particularly distinguishable on account of the patent pail cover, which is furnished free to customers. This cover is both attractive and useful.

This firm act as selling agents for Cowan's and Harry Webb, Toronto, and are always open for the newest and best lines of confectionery and biscuits.

In tobaccos a specialty is made of leaf tobacco, and they handle full lines of the Rock City Tobacco Co., Ltd., Dominion Tobacco, the American Tobacco Co., and other standard lines. Pipes are imported direct.

Mr. Archambault, the proprietor, a former "Knight of the Grip," has built up a lucrative business within a very few years, owing to his intimate knowledge of the trade and an efficient sales organization. Four travelers cover the Eastern Townships, pointing out the freight advantages and prompt shipments secured by buying in Sherbrooke from Victor Archambault. Two large warehouses are utilized by this firm, besides their premises in Bridge St.

FAIR NOTES.

W. R. Webster & Co., El President and Dutch Mike Cigars, distributed innumerable folders, describing their new factory, and the hygienic way in which all their cigars are made. The Queen Cigar Factory, though not the largest, is perhaps the most modern in Canada.

The American Tobacco Co. had their usual very large booth, and distributed numerous novelties advertising particularly Black Watch Chewing.

Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate, and Lowney's Chocolates had attractive booths.

Fairbanks' Scales had a booth at the Fair, Mr. Frank Fales in charge.

L. H. Packard & Co. used a double booth advertising Packard's Black-O and Packard's findings.

MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION CONVENTION.

Canadian Business Men in Session This Week in Montreal.

The first business session of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association convention was held in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, Tuesday of this week. The president, Hon. J. D. Rolland, delivered his address, in which he referred to the custom of exporting pulpwood to the United States. The usual first meeting duties were performed, including the reading of the minutes of the last meeting. During the course of the session discussion was indulged in regarding the woolen industry, for which more protection was urged. Considerable was also said regarding technical education, and its value was pointed out. Various other matters occupied the attention of the meeting relating more closely to their organization, and the session closed with expressions of confidence in the future of Canada. G. M. Murray, Toronto, secretary and Geo. Booth, Toronto, treasurer of the association presented their reports to the meeting.

THE PEPPERMINT HARVEST.

Now in Progress in Walkerville, Where the only Treating Plant in Canada is Situated.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Walkerville, Sept. 15.—The peppermint harvest is now in progress at Walkerville, and will probably continue for several weeks, its duration depending on weather conditions. As the extraction of the oil from the plant takes place as soon as the mint is cut, this year's oil will be practically ready for the market a few days after the last load leaves the field.

The Messrs. Walker Sons have about 170 acres of plants. These are cut with a mowing machine. As soon as possible after cutting the mint is conveyed in hayracks to the extraction plant, where it is placed in large vats and steeped in boiling water from three to five hours. The process of distillation is then gone through with, to separate the water and oil, as much as possible. From the still, the fluid is transferred to a final separator, where all the water is removed, and a process of filtration winds up the manufacture. The oil is shipped in containers holding 20 pounds each, and is used chiefly by confectioners, though always to be found for medicinal purposes at drug stores.

This plant, the only one of its kind in Canada, has been in operation four years. The industry is imported from Michigan, where large fields of mint on the Huron shore supply practically the entire United States.

BUMPER GRAPE CROP.

A prominent St. Catharines fruit man told The Grocer that on Monday of this week 21 cars of grapes were sent from his district to Montreal. This does not mean that Montreal will take all these grapes, but they will be distributed to various Eastern markets from that city. The same gentleman stated that it was no unusual sight to see eight cars of fruit at the St. Catharines station daily.

Grapes this year are an enormous crop in the Niagara district and much of them will be put on the markets throughout the country. Wine-makers are said to be offering but $15 a ton for grapes this year, whereas last year as high as $33 a ton was paid. Growers resent this very much and prefer to sell outside rather than submit.

THE 1908 TOBACCO CROP.

Ontario Will Yield 1,000,000 Pounds—Quebec 4,000,000.

The area planted this year in tobacco in Kent and Essex has been considerably reduced, over-production in the past two years having caused such a decline in prices that growers have decided to cease cultivation absolutely, or else reduce their output till the market for Burley, the principal tobacco grown here, becomes more favorable. Meanwhile, the acreage given to black smoking tobacco is relatively larger than it has been for years.

The total Ontario product this year may be roughly estimated at about 1,000,000 pounds, the largest proportion of this quantity consisting of Seed Leaf, Big Ohio (Walkerville), Havana Seed Leaf, Comstock-Spanish and Spanish-Zimmer.

In Quebec, the crop, which is much larger, is estimated at between 4,000,000 and 4,500,000 pounds. The area devoted to Comstock has increased to the detriment of Connecticut Seed Leaf and heavier tobaccos. Though the recent dry weather may have injuriously affected it, the Quebec crop is expected to be a good one, both as regards quality and quantity.

MOKARA MILLS IN LIQUIDATION.

Theodore Lefebvre & Co., the Mokara Mills, Montreal, have gone into liquidation and the plant, fixtures and stock on hand will shortly be sold to the highest bidder. A. W. Stevenson has the matter in hand.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Hewer, grocer, Guelph, is dead.

C. J. McRae, general merchant, Glen Roy, Ont., is dead.

F. Guess, general merchant, Sydenham, Ont., is dead.

F. H. Andrews, of F. H. Andrews & Sons, commission merchants, Quebec, died lately.

C. Dynes, grocer, Sapperton, B.C., was killed by a street car in New Westminister one day last week. On the same day his grocery store was burned.

PERSONAL NOTES.

D. McL. Brophy is back in Montreal from Quebec.

R. J. Smeall, with D. McL. Brophy, Montreal, has returned from a trip to the Eastern Townships.

D. Charles Coutts, for the past five years secretary of the Richards Pure Soap Co., Woodstock, has severed his connection with that company.

W. G. B. Stronach, Montreal, was in Kingston Wednesday and placed several lots of tea for Appleton, Machin & Smiles, for whom he is Canadian agent.

S. F. Taylor, vice-president of Borden's Condensed Milk Co., New York, was in Montreal this week, making his headquarters with W. H. Dunn, Canadian agent of the company. Jos. Irving, manager of Mr. Dunn's Toronto office, was down from the West to meet Mr. Taylor.

S. Shimidzu, the newly-appointed Consul-General for Japan in Canada, Ottawa, has been in Montreal for a week getting in touch with trade conditions, and more particularly interesting himself in the relations existing between Canada and Japan in teas. While in Montreal he made his headquarters with Shaw T. Nishimura & Co.

A QUEER COMBINATION.

W. Huskins, Calgary, has purchased W. H. Hadley's green grocery business at that place and will conduct it in connection with his sewing machine agency.

800 DOGS FED.

Harold H. Hughes, of F. Hughes & Co., who represented Spratt's Patent, Ltd., London, at the Canadian National Exhibition Bench Show in Toronto, has returned to Montreal, and reports the show a great success. There were about 800 dogs on exhibition, and between 30,000 and 40,000 people passed through the building during the week. Mr. Hughes will be in Ottawa next week to look after the interests of Spratt's Patent, Limited, at the Bench Show to be held in connection with the Central Canada Exhibition. The dogs at this show will be fed on Spratt's Patent Fibrine Dog Cake.—Advt.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, Sept. 18.

POINTERS—
Rolled Oats—Advanced.
Fruits—Advanced.
Vegetables—Advanced.
Fish—Declined.
Butter—Steady.

Trade during the week has been fairly good, and collections are better. The markets have preserved a pretty even balance, with the exception of a few, among which may be mentioned, rolled oats, vegetables and fruits, which have gone forward slightly. Fish are arriving in good quantity and consequently the prices in a few lines are a shade easier this week.

The flour and feed trade has shown some improvement, but it is plain that buyers are only covering their immediate wants. The stories of an excellent crop in the West have held out prospects of very much reduced prices when the new wheat gets into the mills, so buyers are simply waiting to see what will happen. With shortages in other parts of the world, Canada's surplus will be eagerly taken up by other countries, and it is yet an open question whether prices will go up or down. Rice and tapioca are extremely dull. Butter is slightly stronger. Dried fruits are interesting. Sugar is steady and in good demand, having settled down to a more sound basis. Other lines remain the same as at our last quotations.

SUGAR—The sugar market is steady under a good demand. The market has settled down somewhat, and buyers are displaying more confidence in it. This season of the year the demand is good, and this month is no exception to the rule. The market was a little off for awhile, but now seems to have found its normal level again.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—The demand for molasses has fallen off somewhat, but the volume of trade passing is very good. Grocers are buying in small lots to cover their wants as they go along. Syrups are in good demand. Prices all around are steady and quite unchanged.

TEA—The Japan market a few weeks ago was characterized by a weakness, on account of poor quality, but it has gone back to its former level owing to unusually short crop. Locally, there has been more activity. All lines of black's have been in good demand during the week, there being much more activity than formerly. Quotations are the same as at last report.

COFFEE—Some of the cheaper grades of coffee are in good demand, but the market altogether is slightly duller than at last report. Buyers are pursuing the same policy all along the line, buying only for immediate wants. This condition sometimes arises at this time of the year, owing to the fact that it is a little early to buy for winter requirements. No change in quotations.

INTERNATIONAL APPLE SHOW.

An international apple show will be held at Spokane, Wash., on Dec. 8th, the prize list of which amounts to $35,000. The fruit inspector of British Columbia advises fruit growers of that Province to compete, not only for the sake of winning prizes, but more to make the fruit-growing resources of British Columbia known to the people of the South, many of whom have already come north, and more are looking to the land of the maple leaf as a place for future investment and abode.

P. David & Co., fruit and provision merchants, Longueuil, Que., have been registered.

CANNED GOODS

The event of interest during the week was the announcement by the Canadian Canners of an advance of 2½ cents per dozen on all grades of peas, to come into effect October 1st. The circular also states that further material advances will probably be made later.

This action is undoubtedly a result of the small pea pack, which is estimated by some parties as only a third to a half of normal. All the packers are feeling the shortage to a considerable extent, and there is going to be a good deal of difficulty in filling orders. Grocers who have not ordered their full stock as yet will advisedly act at once.

The tomato pack in the United States is expected to be short, and there is some talk of a corner in these goods. Dealers here state, however, that as prospects here are better, this should not materially affect the Canadian market.

MONTREAL.—The new pack prices are meeting with favorable consideration, and buying is proceeding in a normal way. Meats of Canadian production are in good demand.

Trade in fruit lines and vegetables is not as brisk as it has been for some weeks past, which is due to the abundance of the fresh fruits and vegetables. Fish lines are fairly active.

TORONTO.—Demand is rather more active this week, retailers buying more heavily of fruits and vegetables on the new prices. Meats are also in fair demand.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady.

Dried Fruits—First new crop valencia raisins in.

Canned Peas—Advance 2½ cents doz., effective on Oct. 1.

Teas—Ceylons firmer.

Toronto, Sept. 17.

The much-talked-of trade revival seems to be coming. All the jobbers give better reports this week, the travelers, too, are more cheerful and, putting these together, it would seem that the grocery business at last had gotten over the top of the hill. The change is more evident this week than before. Business, however, seems to be on a different basis than it was a couple of years ago, or even a year ago. The retailers, as well as the jobbers, are proceeding in a more conservative way and are buying much more carefully. The plan of buying in small lots continues to be very evident all over the country and while orders are coming to be a little more frequent they are no larger.

One interesting event of the week was the announcement by the Canadian Canners of an advance on all grades of canned peas, to take effect Oct. 1. The first new crop valencias arrived on Tuesday and are pronounced a fine sample. There is a stronger feeling in Ceylon teas, otherwise the staple markets are generally steady.

SUGAR—Canadian refined is steady with perhaps a slightly easier feeling in evidence. A large business is being done in sugar but jobbers report that it is not at all up to what was expected in September, particularly when the light buying of the past season is considered. How the public is getting along with less sugar than usual is a problem, but such seems to be the case. While refined markets are steady raws are slightly easier, a cable from New York on Tuesday noting a decline of 5 cents. A change can scarcely be expected while the demand continues so comparatively heavy but if raws break at all sharply a decline will undoubtedly follow. The sugar market this fall has been rather more of an enigma than usual to those who profess to know.

TEA—The local market has seen a little more activity during the past week or so, seemingly as a result of a better feeling in Ceylons. Markets elsewhere seem also to be brighter.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton say of the situation in London in a letter dated Sept. 4:—"A distinct improvement has been noticeable this week in the general tone of the market, and it is gratifying that the severe decline in quotations for common tea recently recorded has at last been arrested. An improvement in some of the offerings from the Dooars, Assam and Ceylon, together with a welcome revival in the export demand, have been factors contributing largely to this re-action. It is worthy of note that the actual exports from Ceylon for August of 6½ millions are below the estimate by about two million pounds. The offerings of these kinds, therefore, are likely to be on a rather restricted scale for some time to come, the amount advertised for next week showing a reduction of 5,000 packages on that for the current week."

COFFEE—Business locally is very good, with prices steady. There are no new features of particular interest in primary markets this week.

DRIED FRUITS—The first arrival of new crop Valencia raisins arrived in two or three Toronto houses, via Montreal, on Tuesday. This, of course, is an advance shipment and the quantity is quite limited. They are an exceedingly good sample and are quoted at 7 to 7½c. Interest in other lines is not very lively and prices are steady.

THE GUILD CASE AT LAST?

The announcement was made on Friday that the long-delayed and much-talked-of case against the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, now the Wholesale Grocers' Exchange, was to be at last heard in Toronto on Monday, September 21. No further details are given. Those interested are wondering whether this is to be the real thing or, as so often happened before, merely another incident to keep the matter alive without anything materializing at the last moment. It is whispered that the latter is the correct conjecture and that the matter is likely to be again postponed on Monday.

POTATO STANDARD 75 POUNDS.

Important Resolutions at Convention of Dominion Board of Merchants' Association.

The 4th annual convention of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was held in the Toronto offices of the association on Wednesday and Thursday, September 9 and 10, delegates being present from various parts of Ontario and Quebec. Past President J. G. St. Leger welcomed the delegates to Toronto, after which President Watson took the chair and read his annual address. The association has increased during the year by the establishment of 37 new branches, 22 being in Quebec, and 15 in Ontario. The financial end also was satisfactory; all debts having been paid and a small surplus being left in the treasury.

Getting down to business, the convention dealt with the various matters referred to it by the Provincial Associations. "That the weight of a bag of potatoes should be 75 lbs. throughout the Dominion," was endorsed by the Dominion Board, and the matter will now be brought before the Department of Inland Revenue at Ottawa to have this standard become law. Other endorsations were that the Minister of Customs be asked to remove the 53 cents a ton on all vessel fuel; opposition to the establishment of a Government parcel post system, which would take money out of the public treasury for the benefit of large mail order houses; and to make it a criminal offence to falsely advertise any article of merchandise in the public press or otherwise.

The Board decided to apply to the Government for a "Council of Commerce," on the lines of the Railway Commission, uniting with organized bodies, such as the manufacturers and wholesalers for obtaining information on all trade subjects.

The formation of a fund from which heirs of members should receive a certain amount at death, and the abolition of fees for the payment of protest charges on notes, cheques and bills of exchange, were two resolutions referred to committees.

A request that the C.M.A. and the Wholesale Merchants' Association adopt collective measures to prevent credit being given to unduly qualified men starting in trade, was laid over for future consideration.

All the old Dominion officers were re-elected: J. G. Watson, Montreal, President; B. W. Ziemann, Preston, First Vice-President; T. Beland, Quebec, Second Vice-President; J. A. Beaudry, Montreal, Treasurer; and E. M. Trowern, Toronto, Secretary. Besides those named above the following delegates were present: Adam Ballentine, Hamilton; A. L. Geen, Belleville; M. Moyer, Toronto; A. Gervais, Joliet, Que.; L. F. Hebert, Shawinigan Falls, Que.; and W. Boyvin, Montreal. All the delegates were the guests of the Canadian National Exhibition directors on Thursday, Sept. 10.

The next meeting will be held in Montreal during the second week of August next year.

DRIED FRUITS EN ROUTE.

Direct Steamer on the Way From Denia —Tendencies in the Market.

The first direct steamer to Canada from the Mediterranean loading with dried fruits, left Patras for Denia, Tuesday of this week. She will complete her cargo at this port, and then sail for Canada. Advices state that the boat will be loaded to capacity. Currants continue firm, and indications point to a higher market, as an evidence of which several offers under ruling quotations having been promptly turned down. New crop Velencia raisins, the first to arrive, reachel Montreal by S.S. Corsican Sept. 11, and on being opened proved of fine quality. The market is steady for this line. French prunes are attractive in price, and although they have not been seen on this market for some time past, they may, in view of high prices asked for Californias, again gain a foothold. Bosnia prunes are also being purchased, chiefly in 25-lb. boxes. Some dealers have already ordered California prunes, despite high prices.

A steady business is being done in nuts. Shelled walnuts, 1907 crop, freshly cracked, are in demand at advancing prices. New Marbot walnuts, for November shipment, are quoted reasonably low, and some business has been effected. On the whole, the outlook for a fair business in dried fruits and nuts appears favorable.

APPLICATION HELD OVER.

The application for a winding-up order for the Ontario Sugar Co., of Berlin, the rather complicated case which was to have come before Justice Falconbridge in Toronto on Tuesday, 15th, was not dealt with at that date, being held over. The application, it is stated, will be taken up on Saturday.

PERSONAL NOTES.

W. G. Patrick, of Patrick & Co., Toronto, is enjoying a somewhat extended business trip in England and on the continent. He is expected home in a couple of weeks.

James Bain, one of Hamilton's oldest and best grocers, was in Toronto on Wednesday spending a little holiday among the Toronto trade.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, September 17, 1908.)

A merry war in corn, peas and tomatoes is the big feature of the Winnipeg wholesale grocery market this week, big reductions having been made in Group 2. which will obtain until further notice.

Trouble has been brewing for some weeks and reference has been made in these columns from time to time to the competition in these vegetables. It is not expected that any other lines will be included in the present cutting of prices.

Fine, warm weather this month has been of incalculable benefit to the country. In other years harvesting and threshing have been hindered by cold, wet weather in September, but the conditions this year have been ideal and the grain is being rapidly threshed and marketed. The crop money is getting into general circulation, and the benefit is already being felt. The only drawback to the general situation is the unfortunate strike of the C.P.R. mechanics. The railway authorities are doing their best under the circumstances, but, undoubtedly, their equipment is suffering.

CANNED GOODS—As noted above, there is hot competition in corn, peas and tomatoes, the prices of group 2 being considerably reduced. Quotation are as follows:

NORTHWEST FRUIT GROWERS' CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the Northwest Fruit Growers' Association will be held in Portland, Ore., the first week in December. The fruit growers of British Columbia are advised to go in force and maintain the reputation won at the last convention. The City of Kelowna, B.C., is preparing to make a visit in style. They will likely charter a special car to take them direct to Portland, returning via Spokane. During the whole route the banner of the orchard city will be displayed on either side of the car.

NEW WINNIPEG WHOLESALE GROCERY.

Winnipeg is to have a new wholesale grocery house within the next month. Thomas H. Lock, formerly of Foley, Lock & Larson, is to be manager of the new firm, which will be known as Thomas H. Lock & Co., and is capitalized at $200,000. The President of the company is J. F. Fummerton, and the Secretary, W. H. Reed.

CORRESPONDENCE

place the one destroyed by fire last fall. The new building will be open for this season's business. Mahler's local evaporator will commence operations this week.

W. J. Radley, who has been carrying on a grocery business at the corner of Prince and Murray Streets, Chatham, has retired from business, and intends going on the road.

John S. Gesner opened a new grocery in Ridgetown last week, in the store formerly occupied by Mr. McFarlane.

Broom corn is the latest specialty to be added to the list of Essex and Kent crops. Mr. Doan, of Windsor, a broom manufacturer, has discovered that the Essex soil is specially adapted to the raising of broom corn, and has been making experiments which go to show that the corn can be raised here at approximately one-quarter the cost of the Ohio broom corn, which is the main source of supply. It is likely that the new crop will be extensively grown next year.

At last the long anticipated revival in business, often prophesied for this autumn, has apparently arrived. During the last few weeks, the grocery business has been excellent—indeed, one merchant states that the week before last was the best in the history of his business. The revival may in part be credited to the large fruit crop this year. A big fruit crop always has a stimulating effect on business, owing to the demand for sugar and other canning and preserving accessories. Nevertheless, there is no doubt that there is a very considerable trade revival now under way, and merchants generally look forward to a prosperous fall and winter. Building, which has been very slack here since last fall, is picking up, probably $150,000 worth of building being already in sight for the coming fall. The manufacturers, though their factories are not as busy as in some years, are laying in raw materials quite extensively, which is an encouraging sign. Crops throughout the country could not be better. The outlook is, therefore, a very bright one.

The canning season, responsible for a share of the business revival, will still continue for several weeks. Merchants report some difficulty in procuring sealers this season, though the difficulty was more in evidence a few weeks ago than it is to-day.

An important business change has just taken place whereby H. G. Reed once more returns to the grocery trade. Mr. Reed has purchased the business of Gerber & Son on King St., near the C.P.R. station. Mr. Reed formerly conducted this business, but sold out some years ago to Ingram Taylor, who later disposed of the business to Gerber & Son.

Dresden canning factory is working overtime, it being necessary to add a number of hands to fill orders.

This season's potato crop throughout Kent is said to be the best in years. Potatoes are not only plentiful, but large, and the yield is far beyond the expectations of the average farmer. During the heavy rainfalls a few weeks ago white specks appeared on some of the potatoes and it was feared that rot would follow, but, with the return of dry weather, the specks have disappeared, and all danger to the crop is now over. Apples are reported to be only a fair crop, though the late apples are of good quality, there are many trees without a single apple on them.

A movement is on foot at Leamington to have all the stores close at 7.30 three nights a week. Dry goods and hardware stores and butcher shops already close three nights a week at six.

Following the adoption of a definite house numbering scheme, the city council are now moving for a free postal delivery for Chatham. The Mayor and Finance Committee have been appointed to interview the Postmaster-General.

BARRIE.

September 15.—Tomatoes this year have been locally one of the biggest crops on record, and also one of the cheapest. Tomatoes grown here which other years were retailed by the fruit men at twenty-five cents a basket and considered a fairly good bargain by the purchaser are now being sold by the same retailers at ten cents, and a good big basket at that, full of good sound stock. The very hot, dry weather is responsible, the growers say, and nearly all the tomatoes will in the next two weeks be harvested unless we get some good heavy rain that will soak into the ground and make up for the drouth.

S. Calwell, who recently gave up his grocery business, and who has been spending two weeks in Newport, Atlantic City and other places in the States, returned last Thursday looking very much improved by his trip. He will now indulge strictly in the grain business which he carried on with his grocery previously.

Butter was a little easier on Saturday, the average price paid being 21c a pound, while eggs are being bought freely at from 18c a dozen to 20c. Spring chickens are selling at 10c to 12½c; young ducks at $1.00 to $1.25 a pair. Potatoes sold Saturday as low as 50c a bag, while for No. 1 stock, 65c was paid. Apples are still very cheap here and were sold at 50c up to $1.00 a barrel.

LONDON.

September 15.—Wholesale and retail grocers report an unusually active demand for sugar and fruit jars, vinegar and spices, the reason being that housewives are now in the midst of their preserving and pickling operations.

The Retail Grocers' Association held their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening. Hucksters are said to be still violating the market by-law in spite of recent prosecutions and the association decided to employ private detectives to get after the offenders. The local wholesalers were cordially thanked for their generous donations on the occasion of the recent big picnic. The association adjourned for a couple of months.

A local retailer states that certain wholesalers are granting concessions in the matter of discounts to favored dealers, and naturally claims that such discrimination is unfair to others. More will likely be heard of this matter if there is anything in the story.

A meeting of grocery clerks is to be held this week, when the question of organizing a sick and social club will be definitely decided.

KINGSTON.

September 15.—James Crawford, R. J. Carson and J. Y. Parkhill got a car each of potatoes from Nova Scotia recently, and as there is no end of murphys now the price went down 20c a bag. The farmers don't like these carloads brought in, as it nearly puts them out of business. One car was ordered for the soldiers' camp here, but it came in as they were going out.

Slow railway service, too bad, isn't it?

T. R. Carnovsky, the big fruit man on the corner, had a busy time Saturday, surrounded with thousands of baskets of peaches, plums, pears and grapes, but he was equal to the occasion and went in and out, around and over and across like a king bee.

Potatoes, $1.00 a bag; apples, $1.00 to $1.50 a bbl.; eggs, 25c doz.; butter, 28c lb.; tomatoes, 25c a bushel. Jack Frost will soon be here and the market will suddenly change.

Queen's College will soon swing back its doors and the influx of 1,500 students with northern appetites will make the grocers happy, for they gobble up a lot three times a day. Yes, it certainly makes business brisk. Jim, the grocer, said there were too many grocers, and the sooner a license was put on the business to lessen the number, the better.

One of our grocers was driving too fast lately and a lady member of the Humane Society ordered him to stop and got in and demonstrated the proper way to drive. He courteously thanked her for her trouble and went on with his orders.

Larry Murphy, a cheese buyer and exporter and grocer, reports big sales lately, owing to a drop in the market. He tells me that twin cheese, or two in a box, is in great demand owing chiefly to so many cheese cutters being used now. Larry looks well and feels better since his trip to Ireland. He met some one on that fatal trip that has changed his course in life. I haven't heard the particulars yet, but was informed that Jim the grocer saw a lady throw a china bowl of Japan rice at him. I will try and find out the meaning of it all for my next letter.

Fred. Vanluyen, who sold his grocery a few months ago, has regained his health and strength and with rest and recreation has added 20 pounds. Fred. thought of going to British Columbia, but felt it was getting too hot there, so he has bought one of the finest peach farms in Grimsby and intends going extensively into the fruit business. I have known Fred. many years and never found him to be anything but straightforward. I don't know what he will be in the fruit business until I get a shipment and find out whether the big peaches are on top or not. He leaves Kingston with many good wishes.

The honey men have had a few bad seasons and their losses have eaten up all their past profits. Feeding sugar and getting no returns is hard on the bank account. One bee man told me it cost him $1,000 to keep his bees over Winter.

Say, John, you have been coming 20 minutes late every day lately, that is to say, 10 in the morning and 10 at dinner time. Do you know that that means three weeks' holidays in a year and the other week makes a month. Do you think that is fair and honest? You know time is money and if so you have just beaten your boss out of about $30 or $40.

P. G. Wilmot has assigned. He came in off the farm about three years ago and ran the grocery, corner King and Princess Streets. He has had the experience and the creditors will have a meeting shortly and divide up the proceeds. Farmers will dabble in grocery stocks, thinking there is a gold mine, but when they dig a few years they are glad to throw down the commercial pick and scoop.

HAMILTON.

September 15.—A letter appeared in your paper recently in reference to the glass jar trade that appealed very strongly to the grocery trade here. This jar business has been a source of trouble to everybody in Hamilton who ever had anything to do with them. A number in the trade here have expressed themselves to the effect that they would not handle them at all, only that the customers look to the grocery trade for them. This looks like a bad state of affairs when the best men in the trade are compelled by custom to handle a line that shows a loss. The complaints this year are fast and furious, bad glass, bad rings, bad rubbers, bad packing—and no redress. If the Government were to let down the bars for a year it might dawn on these people that glass jars can be made in Canada as good as in the United States.

The trial case for conspiracy against the Wholesale Grocers' Guild is again announced. This case is interesting to Hamilton people, as the case originated in the courts here.

At the last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association a donation of $100 was voted to further the work of the Retail Merchants' Association. Very kind things were said of the work the association has accomplished, and the effect it has had on Government legislation.

OTTAWA.

Sept. 14.—The mercury for some days has been very high. Such reading for this time of the year is nearly unprecedented. In addition to this high temperature the atmosphere is sultry to oppressive degree. The tomatoes ought to ripen alright, but market gardeners will have to keep the hose going to prevent burning up of vegetables.

Councillor Mulligan, of Aylmer, who has just returned from an extended trip to England, and Ireland, speaks in very glowing terms of the Canadian exhibit which he visited while in London. He states that the display of Canada's products and resources is conceded by all who attended to be the finest of any national exhibit there. Considerable attention is given to the dairy industry, and the display of butter is a very fine one and attracts much attention.

With all the booths sold, meaning fifty exhibitors, every indication points to the pure food fair being held by the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association in connection with the Central Canada Exhibition, being a great success. The selling of all the spaces reflects great credit upon the executive, and grocers throughout the country will watch progress of the show with considerable interest.

"Although there was a shortage in a car of sugar shipped to Messrs. H. N. Bate & Sons of Ottawa, on Saturday, the missing bags have not by any means been laid to thieves yet," said M. Donaldson, of the G.T.R., when asked if the report were true that nearly a ton of sugar consigned to Messrs. Bate & Sons, from Montreal, had been stolen from one of their cars during transit. "Of course," Mr. Donaldson continued, "we are not in a position yet to state if the loss is due to the work of thieves, but this is unlikely and it is far more probable that the shortage is the fault of the shipper sending the goods."

Fall jobbing trade and to a lesser extent retail demand, has been better this week, being helped by the opening of the season of fall festivities and the continuance of buyer's excursions. Collections are now classed as normal. However, trade is still below the same period of last year. There is a disposition to order merely for immediate or nearby necessities pending a clearer view of the political outlook, and the reaping of the later autumn crops.

ST. THOMAS.

September 14.—The fees system goes into operation at the local market on Wednesday next. The farmers are strongly opposed to the innovation, as well as a majority of the grocers. As London is a free market, it may have a tendency of drawing trade to that city from this vicinity. Saturday was a busy day and both markets were crowded, the amount of produce on hand being enormous. Early in the morning butter was stiff at 28c lb., but before the close the price dropped to 25c. Eggs were in demand, and 22c was the highest price. Potatoes were 25c a peck. Peaches were in large supply, and 11-quart baskets sold from 60c to 90c, according to quality. The latter were Elbertas, and also late Crawfords, which ripened three weeks' earlier this year than last. Hence with light yield now promised, housekeepers who delay getting their supplies may be disappointed as they are under the impression that peaches would be an immense yield.

Fruit jars and sugars are the sellers these days. Grocers are unable to fill their orders, and it is likely there will be a famine for jars before the season closes.

Your Brandon correspondent in last week's issue stated that J. F. Price, grocer, of that city, had been on a vacation visit to St. Catharines, his former home, which is incorrect, as Mr. Price visited in St. Thomas and received his grocery training with Egan Bros., of this city.

Times are improving on the railroads here and new crews are being put on and the M.C.R. shops, which had been on short time, are working fifty-five hours a week, and new men are being constantly taken on. On September 10th, pay cheques to the amount of $46,000 for the month of August were paid in the locomotive department of the M.C.R. alone, so with the road department added to that, an idea of the great benefit this source of revenue is to the city is shown. During the stringency many of the employes were laid off and the grocers have carried them, and, no doubt, with coming prosperity, the men will be able to settle their arrearages and appreciate the kindness of the grocers in their distress and patronize St. Thomas merchants instead of those of Buffalo and Detroit.

TORONTO.

There's a nice little group of stores up around the corner of Bloor and Bathurst Sts., in that section so rapidly being filled up as an exclusive residential section. There are some good grocers among them too, who are laying aside savings enough to keep them comfortably in later years. The district is filled principally with the better class of people who want goods of the best quality and are willing to pay for them. On the corner of Bloor and Markham, for instance, is Wrigley Bros.' store, which was illustrated in The Grocer some time ago. The stock here is kept clean and bright, the windows in good shape and Mr. Wrigley's activity keeps things well on the move.

A little further east Mr. Scott has a store which, though not overly large, is one of the cleanest and most convenient in the city. A pretty tiled floor aids in giving this effect but the whole place is an ideal of true tidiness, from floor to counter to shelves and back again. A dainty-looking silent salesman placed near the door displays an appetizing-looking line of good confectionery and seems to bring good returns. A fish box is also an attractive feature.

Just east of Bathurst on Bloor, Geo. Burfoot has a store which is busy from morning till night. The stock is well kept and the service is of the best. Mr. Burfoot also keeps a fish box just in front of the counter and this acts as a mighty good advertisement. The best of the seasonable lines are carried, the box is kept scrupulously clean and well iced and the department, according to Mr. Burfoot, is a first-class money-maker.

These stores all get good prices but they sell good groceries and give good service, which after all is pretty nearly the secret of running a successful grocery business.

J. J. Burton, grocer, 1156 Queen W., has assigned.

Robt. Nixon, grocer, 135 Pape Ave., has sold his business to Alf. E. Mundy.

The Toronto Co-operative & Equitable Society, which has been conducting a grocery at the corner of Dovercourt and Main Street since May, last week opened another store of a similar nature on Dundas Street, in West Toronto. The new store, as well as the old, is located in a section in which English and Scotch people, who were familiar with the co-operative system in the Old Land, are living. The society seems to have secured some measure of support from this class.

Considerable interest has been manifested by Toronto grocers in the Thos. J. Lipton Window Dressing Contest, and there promises to be a large number of entries when the contest closes on September 21. The editor of The Grocer, who is to do the work of judging, wishes it to be understood that the windows will be judged with no reference to the names attached. The photos, as they are received, are carefully filed so that the name cannot be seen and the decision will be made without any knowledge as to who are the fortunate competitors.

AN EMPLOYES' CONFERENCE.

How One Grocer Keeps in Touch With His Staff and Gains Valuable Ideas.

The proprietor of one of the most up-to-date stores in Montreal has a system whereby he keeps in touch with all his employes. This is accomplished by means of weekly meetings. At these conferences everyone has an opportunity of airing their views. Drivers sometimes find fault with the way goods are packed, and they also have a better opportunity of feeling the pulse of the people, as they come in contact with them in the privacy of their own homes, and when the customer thinks the goods have not been delivered according to the order given, the driver very frequently finds it out, and if he is tactful and diplomatic he can smooth out their ruffled feelings and save a customer for his employer. If the fault is with the store, and not an imaginary one, he has an opportunity of reporting it at the meeting, and in this way the difficulty is obviated at the next delivery to that house. New ideas emanating from the members of the staff are enunciated and discussed, and a concensus of opinion rules as regards adaptability. In many cases, this gentleman states, he finds himself on one side and all the staff on the other, and he immediately yields, because he knows the clerks are in closer touch with the people than he himself, and he finds this method of deciding questions works out admirably. The advantages of such a system as this are manifold, as it gives everyone an opportunity of having "a finger in the pie," so to speak, and each one feels that they are an integral part of the machine. This engenders interest, and interest brings more effort, and more effort brings more sales, so they feel that they are contributing their share towards the success which the store is winning. It is surprising how many bright ideas are hit upon in this way, and what is more surprising still, sometimes they come from the most unexpected sources. Very frequently a new idea at first seems ridiculous, but upon more mature consideration the salient features begin to assume worth, and, after discussion, the plan evolves into a feasible one. The employes soon learn that they can give expression to their ideas, however radical they may be at first, and they learn to have confidence in their employer and confreres, and they also know if their suggestions come within the pale of reason they will be considered and respected.

THE C. P. R. AND RUNNING RIGHTS

Correspondent Questions Statement Regarding the Matter in a Recent Issue.

The following letter regarding an item which appeared recently in these columns was received during the week. It is self-explanatory. If the article in question was, as the correspondent says, misleading, it was certainly not intentionally so. The letter, naturally, is written from the St. John viewpoint. —Editor.

"Editor Canadian Grocer,—Permit me to call your attention to the editorial in your Maritime Board of Trade number of The Canadian Grocer, dealing with the resolution introduced by the Halifax Board, requesting the granting of running and haulage rights over the Intercolonial to the C.P.R., which as it stands is very misleading.

"You state the resolution was finally carried by a majority of twenty-eight on a vote of seventy-six, and this may be taken to pretty well represent the concensus of feeling regarding the matter in the three Provinces represented.

"While it is a fact that those in opposition to the resolution, as presented, were greatly outnumbered, a glance as to how the vote was made up will readily show that it is by no means the 'consensus of feeling regarding the matter in the three Provinces.'

"The representation which the Halifax Board alone had at this meeting, owing to the fact that it was held in Halifax City, was more than sufficient to have outvoted the entire representation from New Brunswick.

"There were seventy-six votes recorded, fifty-two for the resolution and twenty-four against. New Brunswick had nineteen delegates at the meeting when the vote was taken, made up as follows: Moncton, 8; St. John, 7; Chatham, 2; Sackville, 2.

"Sackville, a town near the Nova Scotia border, voted with Nova Scotia for the resolution, reducing New Brunswick's opposition to seventeen, and two of the five P.E.I. delegates voted against the resolution. In order, therefore, to make up the twenty-four who voted in opposition, five of the Nova Scotia delegates must have voted against the resolution.

"According to the vote taken the 'concensus of feeling' would be something like this:

For running rights—Nova Scotia, 47; P.E.I., 3; New Brunswick, 2—52.

Against running rights—New Brunswick, 17; P.E.I., 2; Nova Scotia, 5—24.

"I hardly think that the action taken at the Maritime Board meeting in carrying this resolution by an overpowering Nova Scotia majority, can be considered to represent the feeling of the Maritime Provinces.

"Trusting that you will give this letter publicity in the next issue of The Canadian Grocer.

"W. E. Anderson, Secretary St. John Board of Trade."

DON'T NEGLECT THE SIGN.

It is often the case that customs, because they are old, fall into disuse, with disastrous results. Undoubtedly one of the best forms of publicity is the old-fashioned sign bearing the firm name and the character of the business. Frequently the stores having the most unpretentious exteriors have the finest interiors. This, however, is to be regretted, as the outside of the store is the part which comes under observation first, and sometimes first impressions count for a good deal.

A good, generous sign is always a help, and many a person has been influenced by it. Some municipalities forbid signs which project over the sidewalk, but where they are permitted they are first-class trade getters.

Illuminated signs are also excellent publicity mediums, but their use is not so applicable to the grocery business.

THE DEADLY HOUSE FLY.

E. P. Felt, the New York State entomologist, has issued the following special warning: "Dwellings with hundreds of house flies are hardly sanitary, while buildings devoted to traffic in comestibles and swarming with flies are not only insanitary but a menace to public health. Recent studies have shown a close parallel in large cities between the abundance of flies and the frightful mortality among infants during the heated term. The deadly typhoid fever will soon demand its heavy annual tribute in both life and strength. The common, apparently harmless, house fly is known as a carrier of the intestinal germs so deadly to both infants and adults, yet its baneful potentialities are ignored for the most part.

"Nothing but criminal indifference or inexcusable ignorance is responsible for the swarms of flies so prevalent in many public places. A general insistence on the part of purchasers that all foods and drinks be kept free from danger of infection by this insect would soon render unprofitable stores and other places of traffic where the house fly is allowed to swarm unchecked."

Curators have been appointed for the general store business of Jos. Morin, St. Theodore de Chertsey, Que.

LARGE MEXICAN ORANGE CROP.

Advices from Mexico state that the railroads of that country are doing a good business in handling orange shipments for the United States. The movement of the fruit began the latter part of August. The crop is said to be unusually large and several hundred carloads will be shipped to the United States. The first carload of oranges ever made from the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, destined to United States points, was made this year. It is stated that large shipments will be made from the Tampico territory and from the older orange districts of Jalisco and Sonora.

So far none of these oranges have been placed on the Canadian markets, but Toronto has received some Jamaica oranges in barrel lots, about 33 dozen being in a barrel. The California orange crop will be a large one and will be placed the latter part of October, about two weeks earlier than past seasons.

FIGURING PROFIT.

The great trouble with many grocers is that they figure out their profit when they buy the goods. If they figured out their profit after the goods were sold Salada would wonderfully increase in the estimation of the retailer, as it is far more profitable than bulk or other packet teas that take so long to sell that they eat all the profit up in interest and deterioration.

PRETTY COMPLETE ORGANIZATION.

Forty Hull grocers assembled recently to consider a scheme for protecting themselves from loss by bad debts. Joseph Martel, the President, was in the chair. Three new grocers were admitted into the association, leaving only a few more in the city to be organized. These the association expects to get in for the next meeting.

A PURE FOOD CONGRESS.

Gathering in Geneva, Switzerland, Will Define Pure Foods.

Great interest is being taken in all parts of Europe in the "White Cross" Congress, which opened at Geneva on September 8. The White Cross Society was formed a year ago, its object being to fight disease of all kinds, and particularly to devise means for the suppression of adulteration of food.

More than 700 delegates from various countries are in attendance, and one day will be set aside to decide on a definition of what are and what are not pure foods.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR PROVISION DEALERS.

E. H. S. Flood, Canadian Trade Commissioner in the West Indies, writing from Barbadoes under date August 14, speaks encouragingly of the opportunity for Canadian trade with the Leeward Islands. After telling of an increase of imports to the islands the past year he says in part:

"It will be seen that these colonies have imported much more largely than last year. It has been a prosperous year, and there is every hope of a continued prosperity. Canadian manufacturers and dealers in provisions and breadstuffs would have an opportunity to increase their trade in these islands. It will be seen that the greater part of the imports come from Great Britain and the United States. There is a strong Canadian feeling developed there, and an effort is being made by the legislature to induce the different islands to agree to such a rearrangement of the tariff as will give Canada the benefit of a scale of preferential duties, the friendly sentiment now existing should induce Canadians to push for a greater share of the trade."

TRADE NOTES.

J. J. Burton, grocer, 1156 Queen St. west, Toronto, has assigned.

The Rex Fruit Co., Moose Jaw, has completed the erection of its new warehouse.

W. J. Corbit, confectioner, Orangeville, Ont., has sold his business to M. Henry.

W. E. Mitchell, fruiter and confectioner, Vancouver, has discontinued his business.

A meeting of creditors of A. Ross & Co., general merchants, Miniota, Man., has been held.

A curator has been appointed for the grocery business of H. A. Chary & Co., Campbellton, Que.

The assets of J. E. Paquin, general merchant, Normandin, Que., are to be sold on September 11.

Frank L. Benedict, of Montreal, has been appointed local agent for the Niagara Falls Canning Co.

Church & Moore, Brantford, have sold their grocery business to Geo. J. Harp, who will conduct it as well as his West Brantford business.

W. and J. Kennedy have opened an attractive retail store at 231 Maisonneuve St., Montreal, under the style of Kennedy Bros., where they are handling teas, coffees, and spices. Both are young men of progressive ideas and should make good.

The Washburn Co., wholesale fruit dealers, Brockville, have amalgamated with the C. E. Plain Co., Ottawa, and the latter concern will conduct the Brockville business as a branch of the Plain Company.

The People's Brewery, Hamilton, has been incorporated with a capital of $250,000, to manufacture, besides beer, aerated, mineral and soda waters. The provisional directors are: W. H. Yates, jr., S. Hill, F. A. Lee, W. I. Le Dioyt, and H. Carpenter, all of Hamilton.

A. L. Bennett, formerly of Jamaica, and now of Montreal, has entered the firm of W. S. Goodhugh & Co., sugar and molasses importers. Mr. Bennett's entry, as partner, will not make any difference in the firm name, which will remain the same as formerly.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted at 10 cents per agate line.

The first shipment of new Valencia raisins for Geo. E. Bristol & Co., Hamilton, arrived in Quebec by steamer Empress of Ireland, on Friday, September 11. Send in your orders.

The Onward Manufacturing Co., of Berlin, Ont., whose advertisement appears on another page, are placing on the market a new scale, particularly suitable for grocers' use, for which several advantages are claimed. It is a computing chart scale, weighs up to 30 pounds, and gives a range of prices from 4 to 30 cents a pound. Further particulars are given in the advertisement.

It is the common belief of grown-ups that the charms of the other sex do not make much appeal to the extremely young, but an incident that happened in a Cleveland school the other day would seem to prove the contrary.

Little Nellie Jones, aged ten, seemed to be very uneasy. She wiggled around in her seat for a long time, and finally gave a little jump. The teacher noticed the girl start and asked what was the trouble. Nellie declared that Willie, in the seat behind her, had pinched her.

THE HEN AND THE DOORKNOB.

By Herbert Kaufman in the Montreal Gazette.

Once upon a time there was a fool hen who sat on a china doorknob for three weeks expecting to get a family. The only thing she did get was experience.

The advertising field is full of "china doorknob propositions"—examples of merchants who expect good newspapers to hatch money out of bad egg businesses, or who put sound nest eggs under the wrong "advertising hen."

There are three principles to follow in an advertising campaign:—First of all, find a business that will stand advertising; secondly, find the newspaper that will make the advertising pay; thirdly, give the newspaper time to pay.

You can't start in to breed dollars in less time than it takes to hatch them any more than you can pull a hen off the nest before she has had the chance to incubate. In both cases you simply waste what has been invested. If you stop too soon you will get a rotten egg instead of a chicken.

Advertise something out of which you may reasonably expect returns and when you have found what to advertise, take care that you place your copy in a newspaper that can turn the trick. Don't delude yourself with a china doorknob, and don't confuse a "rooster newspaper" which spends its time cock-a-loruming, for a "hen newspaper" that is too busy hatching out dollars to strut about crowing.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Sept. 18, 1908.

Once before during this season the dairying industry of Eastern Canada has suffered from drought, as it is suffering at the present time. The prospects were very good for an excellent Autumn make, but this long-sustained dry spell will consume a large amount of the available time, even if it comes to an end soon. Reports from all over the Province tell of forest fires and lack of rain. The result of this has been to cut down the production one half. Nearly all the farmers of the Eastern Townships are badly off for sufficient water for their stock. The unfortunate part of all this is the fact that the cows have entered upon this long drought in a very unsuitable state, owing to a not too great abundance of feed during the whole season and last Winter. There is, according to reports from England, a demand for Canadian second grade cheese in spite of the high prices which are prevailing. The demand for the finest grades has fallen off almost entirely, but seconds are being bought. Last week several large shipments went forward, which were being held for English accounts. The prevailing high prices, which have put export trade out of the question as a profitable investment, to a large extent have shown us that the English people have formed a decided taste for our cheese, as the anxious inquiries arriving would indicate, also even limited buying in the face of these high prices is further evidence. The British buyers are losing some confidence in the Canadian market owing to the contradictory statements which are being received. They are convinced that some powerful combination on this side is manipulating the market to suit their own purposes. This, however, is not serious, as very frequently conditions arise which might convey this idea, but subsequent events remove doubts, and trade comes down to a sound basis.

Just at the present time New Zealand cannot be reckoned with as a factor in the English market, as this is her least productive season. Her cheese begins to arrive in large amounts after the close of our own trade.

The "New Zealand Dairyman" publishes a paper read by W. M. Singleton, Assistant Dairy Commissioner, at the Dairy Show, Palmerston, North N.Z. "The phenomenal increase in our cheese industry during the past season suggested the advisability of preparing a paper for this conference, which would open the subject for discussion. During the past season our exports of cheese increased from 176,379 cwts. in 1906-7, to 291,617 cwts. in 1907-08, an increase of 65 per cent. on the previous season's exports. This in itself is one of the records in a dairy season which has been so replete with exceptional experiences in the history of dairy produce and its marketing, that the season itself becomes a record-breaker on account of the number of records it has established.

"Our registrations of cheese factories in 1905-6 numbered 82, this season there are 150—an increase of 83 per cent. in the two years, while the season of 1908 shows an increase of 41 registrations, or 38 per cent. over the preceding season. From 82 cheese factories in operation two years since, have been requisitioned managers and first assistants for the increase of 68 factories—or from every six factories we have had to procure men to direct the work of five additional factories." This goes to show that England yearly has a greater field to draw her supply from.

Receipts of cheese last week amounted to 87,813 boxes, as against 87,334 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. Total receipts of the season, since May 1, 1,320,455 boxes, as compared with 1,496,910 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

Shipments of cheese from Montreal last week were 60,675 boxes, as against 68,972 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. Total shipments, since May 1, 1,192,938 boxes, as against 1,358,735 boxes for the same period of last season. The prediction made some time ago that this year's yield would equal last year's production, looked like a possibility well within reasonable judgment, but receipts show that we are 176,455 boxes behind last year's record. With favorable weather this could be made up, but the present conditions will just about render it an impossibility. Prices rule at 12¼ to 12½c for Westerns, and 12⅝c to 12¾c for Easterns. For small lots, 13c is asked.

The butter market is firm, in sympathy with stronger prices ruling at country points. The present prices are a trifle too steep to foster much export trade, although shipments have by no means fallen off completely. Dry weather in the Townships has curtailed the production largely, and it now looks as though last year's record would be out of the question. The falling off in price in the English markets has been due to the increased supplies arriving from Denmark and Siberia. The advance in prices some time ago resulted in smaller consumption, and this was followed shortly by increased supplies from Denmark and Siberia, and as a consequence the price has now gone down a little.

Receipts of butter last week were 13,522 packages, as against 13,860 packages for the corresponding week of the last year. Total receipts since May 1, 308,211 packages, as compared with 306,066 packages for the same period of last year.

Exports of butter last week amounted to 1,612 packages, as against 5,098 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Total exports since May 1, 74,282 packages, as against 62,682 packages for the corresponding period of last year. Prices rule 24c to 25c for best creamery, and 20c to 22c for best dairy.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Sept. 17, 1908.

With their plants running at half to three-quarter capacity, some of them even less than that, and with a demand for pork products at home alone that can scarcely be satisfied with the output, Canadian packers of hogs are naturally feeling somewhat intensely the short hog supplies. From all parts of the country comes the same story. Farmers either have not the hogs or else will not deliver them, with the probability falling on the first reason. Reports of slight receipts have been given for some weeks but lately this condition has been more than ever apparent and is rapidly becoming apparent. This, too, in the face of the fact that the packers' price, $6.75 f.o.b., ought to be rather a good inducement, gives additional color to the often-repeated statement that the Canadian farmers are going out of hog raising.

The British market is in more favorable condition this week. Prices have advanced from 1 to 2 shillings on Irish and Danish bacon, which is almost certain to be felt in Canadian shortly, and the feeling generally is stronger. Shipments of Danish, about 35,000 weekly, and Irish also, have been considerably lighter than earlier in the season and stocks are said to be pretty well cleaned up. This looks encouraging for business for Canadian firms, but with home conditions as outlined above the outlook is not so promising.

In face of the continued light supply, the price rose from $6.25 to $6.75 this week, off cars prices being $7.10 to $7.20. Even this has not effected any noticeable improvement.

Local trade is very good, with an increasing demand for the better cuts. These lines and lard also, are feeling a good deal firmer, the whole being attributable to the short hog supplies.

The United States market has seen a crisis during the past week, owing to short supplies and manipulations on the part of the packers. In the last two weeks the price has been steadily climbing, the movement being based ostensibly on the reduced corn crop prospects, helped later by the reduced number of swine in the country according to the Government report, but really engineered by the packers, who own the comparatively large stock of hog products at this time of the year owing to decreased consumption on account of the high prices at which they have held them the past six months on the idea that the relatively higher prices and scarcity of beef would stimulate demand for hog products.

On Friday, Sept. 11 the price went to $7.20, and the strength in the market continuing, on Saturday the price was advanced to $7.30, the highest figure which has been reached since 1903. Retail butchers say that if the price is sustained, pork will be a luxury. Pork chops, bacon, tenderloins and hams will go up at a bound.

The situation has not been reflected in Canada to any extent, but if present conditions in the markets are intensified as they have been across the border, such a state of affairs is possible.

PROVISIONS—There is a stronger feeling in this market for bacon owing to the shorter supplies which are arriving. Locally prices have not changed yet, but it is highly probable there will be an advance soon. Advices from England state there has been an advance there in Canadian bacon. The demand has been fairly good, and prices steady.

BUTTER—The butter market is steady and the price is firm, around 25½c. The make at the present time is showing excellent quality. PROVISIONS — Continued steady business is being done in all lines with the bulk of trading in high-priced cuts and products generally. Quotations on nearly all lines have advanced from a quarter cent to a cent and a quarter. This is due principally to a scarcity of hogs. Commission and provision men generally have been drawing on their reserve stocks to fill orders, and some dealers have been unable to supply certain lines. Bacon, shoulders and backs are up and lard, too, has advanced. There is very little lard to be had at present.

HONEY—Prices are somewhat easier this week, and on account of this more business has been done. For 60-lb. tins 8½c to 9¼c is asked, and the smaller sizes are going at from 9c to 10c. Combs run from $1.60 to $1.75 a dozen.

BUTTER—Supplies continue fair and demand is quite equal to the pace set. Packing continues and with the cooler weather for keeping the butter the better grades are somewhat firmer in price.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Markets Generally Strong Though Little Change Since Last Week—Local Business Good and Outlook Very Encourag ing.

Very little change is evident in these markets since last week's reports. The advance in rolled oats was general and the market continues active on the new basis, bearing out statements made recently in these columns. Local business seems to be particularly good everywhere and there seems to be a really evident revival of trade.

The flour market, also, continues firm. No changes are noticed since last reports. Manitoba wheat is coming down in quite heavy supplies and the outlook is very encouraging.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Improvement in volume of business can be reported for the past week. This condition is due to increasing business in the country. Inquiries are also arriving from foreign countries. Locally, stocks held are not large, and the price remains firm.

FEED—Bran has been in good demand during the week, and the price has been well maintained. Stocks are very small. There has been considerable activity in the shorts and middlings market, inquiries coming in in greater volume. Some of the smaller mills, which have been closed down, are reopening, so in a short time supplies, which at the present time are limited, will be sufficient to cover requirements.

CRANBERRY CROP IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Annapolis Valley Will Yield About $50,000—Best Season on Record.

Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

Halifax, September 14.—The cranberry crop in the Cornwallis and Annapolis Valleys this year is reported to be one of the best on record. The owners of the bogs are now watching for frosts and are burning fires at night to protect their crops. There are between five and ten thousand barrels in the Valleys and these are worth at least five dollars per barrel. At Lower Weymouth the bogs are in full bearing and the quality is first class. There is also a very large crop along the Sissiboo River and tributaries. There promises to be a good market for cranberries this season as the crop in the United States is short.

"Men Who Sell Things"

What Respect for One's House Really Means—A Homily on Dress and Orderliness, One of the Important Factors of Salesmanship—Something About Displaying Samples.

By Walter D. Moody—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publishing Co. from the publishers, A. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

My line was displayed in a large, hustling, northern Michigan town. Our house had practically no business there, and my first three visits were devoted largely to an effort to interest the largest concern in the place; but I failed.

On my fourth trip I found the buyer of my line away on sick leave. The head of the house was a crusty, nervous old man; but not wishing to be turned down altogether, I summoned courage enough to approach him.

In the place of the curt refusal I expected to receive, to my surprise, he asked in a quick, sharp manner if I would be in my room at the hotel at twelve o'clock. Receiving a reply in the affirmative, he promised to meet me there at that hour. With eager expectancy I went back to wait out the interval. I was nervous and dreaded his coming, for that was my first experience face to face with a big merchant.

He was on time to the second. With youthful indiscretion I greeted him rather more effusively than the occasion required, which he failed to notice, however, for he pushed right by me into the room without any ceremony whatever. Before I had recovered my mental equilibrium, he was firing questions at me, two at a time, concerning the value of various items in the line. Without giving me time to answer even his first inquiry, he started for the door, with the remark that he guessed there wasn't anything he wanted. Stopping on the threshold, he turned and said, "If you have a black silk at——. I can use a few pieces."

"Certainly," I said, "I'm sure we have it," and commenced a search that ended in despair. The piece-goods samples were jumbled in a telescope with two or three other lines, and in spite of desperate efforts to locate that silk sample, I couldn't put my hand on the right one, although I knew it was there.

He got impatient, and I got nervous, which gave me blind staggers, and I couldn't have found that sample if it had stood in front of me as large as the statue of Liberty. Muttering something about "disorderly salesmen," he rushed out, banging the door behind him. I dropped into a convenient chair in a cold sweat. Ten minutes later I located the offending sample and started to run over to his store with it, when it struck me that he was probably at luncheon. At one-thirty I found him in his office and hastened to apologize for the delay.

"Never mind troubling yourself, young man," he said, in a rasping tone, "I have just placed an order for twenty pieces of the silk I wanted with a New York salesman who keeps his samples where he can find them." And then to give good measure, he added, "If you remain on the road and expect to succeed, you'll have to keep your wits about you."

The loss of that order amounted to four hundred dollars, besides a chance to get an opening-wedge in with a gilt-edge concern. I didn't need any coaching after that, on how to keep stock in the sample-room.

Proper care of samples is as necessary as effective display or orderly arrangement.

Three Vital Factors.

The three vital factors in the successful sale of goods from samples are: first, the standing of your house; second, your own power of persuasion; third, the condition of your samples.

The most painstaking salesman will find that with packing and unpacking his trunks every day, his samples soon become worn and unattractive. What then hapepns to the careless man? Many a time I have seen a line of what had once been choice goods in an utterly shabby condition before they had been out ten days, and for the balance of a trip of several weeks the salesman carrying them was obliged to make the best showing he could with ruined samples.

It is a difficult matter, even for a buyer possessing the keenest imagination, to stretch his fancy from a straw-hat sample that looks like a punctured bushel basket to the smart article of headgear it was when it came fresh from the factory.

When a clothing salesman extracts from a pile a garment that resembles a linen duster instead of the snappy, up-to-date coat that it once was, his customer is very likely to class it with the "has-beens" and ask to be shown something in the prevailing style.

A good-looking sample is a sale half-made.

An Illustrative Story.

When I was in the jobbing business at D——, a prominent straw-goods manufacturer called on us, accompanied by his regular salesman.

The occasion of his visit was to introduce a new line. He succeeded in arousing the interest of our hat-buyer, who induced me to go along with him to the manufacturer's sample-room to look his line over. Picking up a certain block that he thought was destined to have a great run, the manufacturer started to show forth its merits. Stopping suddenly, his eyes riveted on a certain spot on that hat, he called his salesman over to our group, and there in front of us all gave the unlucky fellow the worst "roasting" I ever heard.

"Do you see that dent in the crown of this hat?" he asked.

It was so small that the rest of us had failed to notice it; but his salesman admitted it was there.

"Well," continued the manufacturer, "haven't I told you repeatedly to pack your samples so as to insure them against damage? In another two weeks this sample will be utterly worthless. Do you expect to finish your trip introducing this hat, and to take orders from it in a dilapidated state?"

The manufacturer worked himself up to a great state, while his salesman stood before him, utterly unable to defend himself. Although he was guilty of carelessness, he was too manly to offer excuses, so said nothing.

"Perhaps you know where another line is coming from; I don't," his employer started in again. "I tell you

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Canadian Fruits Expanding Their Markets—Preserving Season Now On—Grapes a Bumper and Peaches a Good Crop—New Brunswick Potatoes Displacing Native Lines in Interior Markets—Smoked and Dried Fish Lines Coming to the Front.

Canadian fruit lines appear to be enlarging their markets. British Columbia is looking after territory as far east as Winnipeg, and will this year try Australia and Great Britain. Niagara Peninsula fruit is now being sold on practically all the Ontario markets and not a few centres in Quebec Province, Montreal being a remarkably good customer, and Nova Scotia is looking after the Eastern Quebec and Maritime field. Southern and Western Ontario and the districts about Georgian Bay are increasing the output of hardy fruits and are cultivating the export trade as well as enlarging their local selling boundaries.

Preserving is now going on up and down the country, and this fact has kept all fruit and vegetable preserving lines firm in price, although supplies are freer than last year. Grapes will be a bumper crop this year about St. Catharines and the Niagara River, and much of them will find their way to the markets, as the wine-makers are offering but half the price they did a year ago. Something like 20 cars of grapes went out from St. Catharines to Montreal one day recently. Of course this does not mean that that city took them all, but that they would be distributed from that centre. Peaches, too, are a good crop. They do not seem to last long on the markets, however. If there is any financial depression in the country, there certainly is no reflection of it in the fruit line.

New Brunswick potatoes are increasing their hold farther and farther away from home, some Ontario markets selling practically no other line. They sell from five to ten cents a bushel more than the natives, but the demand is for New Brunswicks, even at the higher price. They certainly look better than Ontarios. Western Ontario, however, reports the home variety as more than holding their own, and at a price better than New Brunswicks obtain in the larger centres.

Fish lines are beginning to undergo a seasonable change. The interior markets are beginning to handle dried and smoked lines, though as yet the demand is light. Fresh fish just now are better and firmer than for three or four weeks past, but by October supplies will be rather scarce.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—A strong feeling prevails in the fruit market, many lines having gone ahead since our last quotations. Bananas are an exception, however, and are a little easier, while some fruits remain the same as at our last report. The sudden firming up of the market is due to the fact that supplies are not keeping up to the demand. Canadian applies are going forward to England in fairly large quantities, and the local trade in apples is good.

VEGETABLES—The vegetable market is about evenly divided between declines and advances. Some lines have gone forward, while others have weakened. Among the former are parsley, green peppers, lettuce and cabbage. Celery, beets, carrots, tomatoes, beans, corn, turnips and squash have declined. Other lines remain the same. The demand has been only fair during the week.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The Exhibition over, business is settling back to the old grooves. There was a waver for a day or two, but quite early in the week trading was growing brisk again. This week peaches and grapes will hold all the attention. The former are plentiful and the latter a bumper crop. Demand, however, is so great that prices have remained pretty firm—that is, peaches are firm, being picked up immediately at whatever is asked, and grapes, while selling at a reasonably low price, seem to be bringing satisfactory returns to the growers. Plums are getting scarce and are firming up a little. Melons, too, were not plentiful enough in supply, with a consequent tightening of prices. The preserving season is now in full swing and this one feature more than any other has caused a very big demand to be made for all domestic lines.

VEGETABLES—Ontario potatoes are no more numerous on the Toronto market than they were a year ago, even though there is a larger crop. New Brunswick Delawares have the call, and appear to be working their way westward. For some reason or other the scabby skin on some of the Ontarios debar their sale. Pickling lines are firm in price and are productive of much business. Some fancy tomatoes are offered this week. One line is called pear tomatoes because of their resemblance in shape and color to the pear. Another line is a miniature tomato about the size of a quarter.

FISH—Smoked, cured and dried lines are arriving presaging the advent of fall. Fresh lines are more plentiful than during the Exhibition weeks, and are firmer in flesh, too. Prices are unchanged, except oysters, which are now graded, running from $1.65 to $1.85 per gallon. There was a decline in demand for a few days during the crowded week of the Exhibition, but trading is becoming active again.

MEN WHO SELL THINGS.

what it is, I want you to take more care with these samples. If it takes all day to pack up, you see to it after this that they are packed to avoid breaking."

The salesman was saved from further reprimand by a telephone call from the office. When he had left the room I asked his employer if he wasn't a little rough on him, and whether such talks were not more effectively conducted in private.

"Perhaps so. No doubt you are right," he answered in a half-apologetic manner, "but it is so exasperating. I lost my self-control for the moment. Permit me to explain, however, what my salesman knew from long experience, that a new line of samples like these is made ready only after weeks of work and great expense. Our sample line is our stock in trade until the orders are all in and the factory running. A duplicate line could not be had, excepting at great cost and a loss of time. In any event, there is really very little excuse for careless packing. A damaged sample is a poor foundation argument upon which to build a satisfactory business in a new line."

Barring the unpleasantness of the sample-room incident, that talk impressed me so, that, immediately on returning to my office, I caused to be sent out to our own traveling men a detailed account of what had taken place.

The Duty to the House.

A salesman's duty to his house does not consist alone in reaching a satisfactory figure in volume of sales. Other things require his attention to complete his real worth. Profit, not sales, is the objective point of every house. Chasing sales instead of profits is a disastrous game for either salesman or employer. Wanton extravagance in expense, loss from damage on samples, returned goods, and claims of whatsoever nature, resulting from loose methods in making sales, are all profit-drainers. If you wish your sales to increase, and if you have an honest interest in seeing your house make profits, see to it that your sample-line is kept in the best possible condition.

Again: orderliness plays an important part in the clerical work every salesman is obliged to do each day. Your bad penmanship may be pardoned if you have not had the advantages of thorough training, but there can be no possible excuse for you if your orders are so carelessly transcribed as to be incomprehensible.

We had in our employ a man of exceptional ability as a salesman; but in spite of his superior attainments in other respects, it seemed impossible for him to transcribe an order properly. The habit of carelessness had such a hold upon him that, in spite of the repeated efforts of the head of the house and others, down to the order clerk, he could not be made to reform. He would invariably omit the name of the town, or the customer's name, or neglect to state departments, so that the office was in a constant turmoil when filling his orders. He was great on abbreviating. He would so abbreviate words that only he and a mind-reader could have deciphered them. We never could get him into the habit of being orderly about these things.

Avoid Disorderliness.

Don't let the habit of disorderliness grow upon you if you want to be a help instead of a nuisance to the order-filling department, where so much depends upon quick service. Be particular also to see to it that your manager is kept in constant touch with your movements on the road. At times it means much to any business to be able to reach a salesman within a few hours by wire.

Some men travel their itinerary with the precision of an advance agent for a theatrical company. The office can put its finger on them any time, anywhere around the circuit, almost on the instant. And their return home occurs on the very day and hour of their original schedule left in the office on their departure. Others leave behind a carefully prepared route list, and from the moment their backs are turned on headquarters, they proceed to hop, skip and jump erratically over their territory. They are never to be located, and seldom return within three or four days of scheduled time. When they do come in, it is ten to one that a bee-line is made for the manager's office, where they begin to kick about being "neglected" on new samples and other current matter such as was sent out to the men every few days.

Keep in touch with the office if you want the office to keep in touch with you.

Be orderly about everything pertaining to your work, and your interests and the interests of your house will move forward with clock-like precision, bringing satisfaction of a triple alliance nature to customers, house, and salesman.

AID FOR THE TRAVELER.

Some people think it's an easy matter—selling goods. A man in the manufacturing business said the other day: "It's easy enough when the salesman is showing something the trade KNOW ABOUT. But it's a mighty hard proposition to sell anything, however good, which is not known to the trade." That manufacturer knew what he was talking about; he had tried the selling game under both conditions and now he helps his salesmen by continued and GINGERY advertising in good trade newspapers. Stands to reason, too, when you come to think about it!

WHERE TRAVELERS STOP.

Good hotel accommodation makes the life of the traveler on the road for weeks much more "like at home." Ottawa has a number of fine hotels, but for cosy, home-like rooms, excellence of cuisine, and attentive politeness of the attendants, none can surpass, and few equal, the Hotel Cecil. Walter B. Walby is the proprietor of this hotel for commercial men, and he has endeavored to make it perfect from the standpoint of the man with the grip. That he is succeeding in his efforts is evidenced by the increasing number of travelers stopping at the Cecil, and still further by the good words all have for the Cecil who have stopped there. Being up-to-date in every particular, running water in the rooms, rooms with bath, electric light, etc., and being centrally located, it appeals to the business man every time. Mr. Walby's many friends who knew him during his 17 years at the Grand Union will be pleased to learn of his success.—Advt.

MORE NEW BOATS.

A few days ago Boston joined the choir of American cities chanting a dirge over the loss of the grain-exporting trade.

An eminent Canadian statesman has said that "the 19th century belonged to the United States, but that the 20th was Canada's." It begins to look like it. News has reached this side of the launching of the White Star liner Laurentic, designed for the St. Lawrence route. A sister ship, the Magantic, will also soon slide down her ways into the water.

These steamships are specially constructed for the St. Lawrence route, and the Laurentic will be the largest ship plying these waters. All of these happenings are significant, and point to the high probability of the prophecy relating to the possession of the 20th century by Canada.

Patriotic Canadians will be delighted to see the great progress being made by the national port, Montreal.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information of Interest to Grocers and Clerks Regarding the Goods They Hand Over the Counter.

Sugar in Olden Times.

Cane sugar was produced by the Chinese at a very remote epoch. In Western countries it was a more recent introduction. The Roman writers, Pliny, Varro, and Lucian, at the beginning of our era, barely mentioned it. It was then known by the name of Indian salt and honey of Asia, Arabia or India. In 1090, Crusaders arriving in Syria discovered sugar cane, which became a favorite dainty of the soldiers. During the following centuries the sugar cane was introduced into Cyprus, the Nile Delta, the north coast of Africa as far as Gibraltar, Sicily, and the kingdom of Naples. It reached Spain in the fifteenth century and thence was carried to Madeira and the Canaries. In 1644 the French imported it into Guadeloupe and a little later into Martinique and Louisiana. The Portuguese introduced it into Brazil and the English into Jamaica.

According to the Rivista Scientifico-Industriale, a hundredweight of sugar cost the following amounts in London and Paris, from the middle of the thirteenth to the end of the nineteenth century:

Date.	London. Francs.	Paris. Francs.
1260	1,031=$206	....
1300	1,250= 250	....
1350	837= 167	....
1372	....	2,845=$569
1400	1,156= 231	....
1426	....	1,441= 288
1450	1,500= 300	....
1482	....	1,375= 275
1500	267= 53	....
1542	....	340= 68
1550	458= 92	....
1598	....	534= 107
1600	397= 79	....
1650	402= 80	....
1700	266= 53	....
1750	103= 20	....
1800	191= 38	....

In regard to the price of transportation, in 1550 it cost 10 francs, or nearly $2, to send 250 kilogrammes or about 553 pounds of sugar from Antwerp to London, and 24 francs to send 50 kilogrammes by sea from Venice to Antwerp. It is well known that the discovery of the saccharine principle of beet root was made by Olivier de Serres, the gardener of Henri IV., in 1605. The first beet sugar factory was established in 1795, near Berlin, by Achard. In France, at the time of the continental blockade, the increase in price of sugar to 6 francs or $1.20 per pound proved a powerful stimulant to the establishment of beet-sugar factories. On January 2, 1812, Benjamin Delessert, a Paris sugar refiner, presented for the first time specimens of indigenous sugar to Chaptal and declared that the manufacture of beet sugar was in actual operation at Passy. —Scientific American.

Honey in Australia.

The method of obtaining the honey in South Australia is interesting, and even suggestive of poetry and romance. A large number of beekeepers who have taken up the business seriously travel their bees around to wherever the best blossoms are to be found, and the honey is gathered from the flowers of the sugar gum, and, therefore, in addition to the delicious flavor, contains the valuable properties of the eucalyptus, though one would never imagine there was any eucalyptus in it from the taste. South Australian honey is obtained also from the red gum and the blue gum, but the beekeeper is careful not to pitch his camp or place his hives anywhere near many stringy barks or peppermint gums. —Practical Confectioner.

SALESMEN AND ADVERTISING.

Advertising introduces the goods and paves the way for the salesman.

Advertising insures for the traveler a respectful hearing when he arrives.

Advertising brings orders when the salesman is not on the ground.

Advertising increases the volume of the order which the salesman can secure in person.

Advertising makes the merchant respect the firm and the salesmen.

Advertising cements the friendship between the house and the merchant.

Advertising tells the merchant what the salesman forgets to mention.

Advertising supports the salesman in his statements to the merchant.

Advertising brings about a better acquaintance and understanding between the merchant and the traveler.—Profitable Advertising.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

& SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

A Peerless Product Seville Orange Marmalade

We have never introduced to the Canadian grocery trade an article that commanded more attention or warranted more searching criticism than

Maconochie's Orange Marmalade

Maconochie's Marmalade is made at one of the most original, complete and scientific factories in the world from Seville Oranges and Sugar—and is undeniably pure.

The motto of the firm is to combine quality and price; to produce a standard article that will create business and pay a good profit.

Ask your jobber to show you the new stone jar to retail at 10 cents. It will be worth your while.

"OLD MISSION"
BRAND CALIFORNIA
OLIVES

NEARLY a century and a half ago, a little band of Spanish soldiers and priests, under the leadership of Father Junipero Serra, sailed into the bay of San Diego, California, and landing, took possession in the name of King Carlos III. They established a "Mission" and planted out orchards of olive trees and fields of grain, and in a short time had a thriving colony.

RIPE OLIVES

are a delicious novelty which the Mission Fathers bequeathed to those who succeeded them. The olives are allowed to ripen, so that when picked they are of a brown to purplish color, and rich with the natural oil. They are "cured" and packed in cans in such manner that they retain the natural color of the ripe olive, and, like all ripe fruit, are rich and mellow. They are packed without the use of any coloring matter or preservative. These olives received the Highest Award at the great Expositions at St. Louis and Portland.

During recent years improved methods of packing have made it possible to ship the delicious, matured, ripe olives. No more healthful food can be conceived, no more delicious delicacy can be placed on your table than the

"OLD MISSION"
BRAND RIPE
CALIFORNIA OLIVES

Not to be nibbled, as are the green olives, at banquets, etc., one or two at a time, but to be eaten freely, alike by young and old, as a delicious, health-giving, wholesome food, delightful alike to the "gourmet" or the child. They are generally served covered with cracked ice, just as they come from the can, and are eaten as a relish with fish, flesh and fowl alike.

A Safe Platform For The Merchant

Political platforms and policies are being much discussed this fall. The merchant is always interested in a "platform" or method that will help him to do more business. There is no retailer so big or so little that he can afford to overlook studying schemes for improvement.

Handle Canadian Canners' Fruits and Vegetables

and you will be standing on a progressive platform. There isn't a single unsound plank in it. Our Factories are located in the choicest districts. Sanitary and successful methods are a scientific study with us. The result is Canned Goods that would grace the King's table.

ORDER FROM YOUR JOBBER:

Quality Does Pay

in more ways than one—not only in the confidence it inspires in knowing that you are offering to the consumer a superior class of goods, but the fact that satisfied customers mean increased business. Business that comes and remains as a direct result of square-dealing methods. You cannot sell inferior goods and be successful. In order to establish a feeling of confidence with the retailer you must offer him the best. His business requires it and it is to your best interest to see that he gets it. There is nothing that the consumer is so particular about as canned goods—he demands quality in this line almost more than any other. You will make no mistake if the next time he asks for canned goods you offer him

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND
Canned Fruits and Vegetables

They are made from rich, ripe, juicy fruits and vegetables—sound, wholesome and clean—prepared by up-to-date canning methods that preserve the natural flavor and nutritious qualities of the contents. Old Homestead Brand of goods are honestly prepared. Every possible method is employed to ensure their cleanliness and purity. We have made this feature the basis of our reputation, and the ever-increasing number of "repeat" orders we are receiving, offers a most convincing argument in favor of their quality. All the best jobbers carry Old Homestead Brand; all the best class of customers demand it.

Advertising Cannot Make People Continue to Take Something They Don't Like

It is possible with good advertising to get the consumer to TRY a new article, but the best of advertising won't make people continue to buy it. Just stop and consider the remarkable growth of the Red Rose Tea business in so short a time. It has been well and consistently advertised, but could advertising alone do it? No; but

Unequalled and Strictly Uniform Quality Can

When Red Rose Tea was introduced on the Ontario market we were told that there was no room for another package tea, but Red Rose was not "another" one; it was a better one, and there is always room for the best. Our Faith in the Canadian Consumer Confirmed

We have packed and shipped more pickles in the last 45 days than we sold last year, and we are still 4,000 cases behind.

Does this not prove to you that the Canadian consumer will support home industry, when the goods have quality? We are packing as fine goods as firms of international reputation, and at a price that will appeal to the pocket of your customer in every walk of life. Do not doubt this, but try a small quantity if you have not already done so, and be convinced, as hundreds of retailers have been in the last year. This is proven by our sales.

TO THE TRADE:

England consumes nearly four times as much of

CEYLON TEA

as of all others, save India, although she has been getting it only one-eighth as long.

"WHY?"

Mainly because, of all Western peoples, the English best know tea.

For the Same Reason

England consumes about 6 lbs. and Canada 5 lbs. to the United States 1¼ lbs. of tea per capita. Every English Grocer knows tea; he has made it a study.

Facts Worth Noting

News of the Canadian Grocery Trade

Western Province Notes

Excellent Fruit Prospects in British Columbia—New Zealand Canned Goods Coming Into Vancouver—Saskatoon is Receiving Large Fruit Shipments.

VANCOUVER.

September 19.—Advices from the interior are that the fruit crop will be much better than it was thought earlier in the season. The prune crop, in particular, which was reported very short, will be nearly a full crop, and of excellent quality. On the coast, the apple crop is not quite up to the average, but in the interior it is excellent. The pear crop is the only one that may be regarded as light, although in some districts, notably Kelowna, it is up to the usual standard. At Peachland and Summerland the peach crop is fine, while at Salmon Arm it is up to the standard, with grading and packing a great improvement over former years. Other main line points, such as Ashcroft, Lytton and Kamloops show their usual high quality. An expert, discussing the subject, stated to The Canadian Grocer that a great difficulty here is the lack of adequate arrangements for cooling fruit after picking. He points out that this should be done in the shortest time possible after the fruit is removed from the trees, and the low temperature maintained until it reaches its destination. No matter how well the cars may be iced, unless the fruit is thoroughly cooled before starting it will not carry in the same good condition as if these precautions were attended to.

Great expansion is noted in the fruit growing industry in the Province, and according to data furnished the Provincial Board of Horticulture, the investment now totals $15,000,000, as compared with $3,000,000 fourteen years ago. Thomas Cunningham, one of the members of the Board, says it is reasonable to expect that in five more years this will have increased 100 per cent., at the present rate of increase. That it pays to grow fruit free from insect pests is further demonstrated by the quest of a buyer from Australia who is after 75,000 boxes, but who will only take fruit absolutely clean. On one day 1,800 boxes of California fruit were condemned in Victoria, and the same amount in this city. The State of Washington, following in the steps of this Province, has adopted very stringent laws, with the result that the fruit coming from there is very much better than in former years. British Columbia imports considerable early fruit from the South, and the utmost vigilance is exerted to keep out any that may bring pests into the country.

Canned products from New Zealand are making their appearance on the market here and with good quality are quoted just a trifle under the same kind of Canadian goods.

An instance indicating the amount of fresh prunes shipped from British Columbia is the ten tons which were shipped from Victoria on Tuesday of this week, a whole carload being sent through in unbroken shipment to Regina. This fruit grows well on Vancouver Island. The Progress Fruit Packing Company, a new organization, shipped.

It looks as if butter will be higher than ever this Winter in Vancouver, and it is not improbable that it will climb over the 50c mark. It has not been very plentiful all Summer, and word comes from Australia that there is a famine in butter there. Much butter is brought from Australia in the latter part of the Winter, and it may be that, as it is Spring in Australia by that time, the market will be in better condition. Eggs, too, are climbing up. Select eastern are quoted as high as 35c this week, with other grades at 28c and 30c.

T. Booth, fruiterer and confectioner, of North Vancouver, has taken H. S. Aikens into partnership, and the business will be enlarged.

B. C. Rainsford, wholesale fruit dealer of this city, is building a handsome residence in North Vancouver.

S. R. Bailey, managing director of the Bailey Broom Company, of Kingston, Ont., is on a trip to the coast.

James Sargent, Secretary of the Commercial Travelers' Association, of Toronto, was in the city this week. He is here on a combined business and pleasure trip.

The death took place at Princeton of George W. Fish, manager of the A. E. Howse Company, general merchants. He was formerly with W. J. McMillan & Company, wholesale grocers, of Vancouver.

What might be called an avalanche of fate last week overtook C. Dynes, who was proprietor of a grocery store at Sapperton, near New Westminster. On the 9th instant his store was burned out, he and his family having a narrow escape, and on the 10th he was run down by a street car in New Westminster and instantly killed.

The Okanagan Fruit Union, with a capital of $250,000, has been organized at Vernon to handle the output of Okanagan orchards. C. G. Guy is provisional Secretary, while the committee to look after the details of incorporation is composed of W. C. Ricardo, J. Kidston, W. R. Pooley, R. H. Agur, R. M. Palmer, J. Barnett, B. McDonald, E. M. Carruthers, and W. T. Shatford.

A tobacco plant was on exhibition last week in Vernon that was eight feet in length and had made its growth from a seedling in six weeks. Another, a foot longer, will be exhibited at the Fall fair. The plants were grown under canvas, the plan advocated by Felix Charlan, tobacco expert of the Dominion Government.

CANADIAN STORE INTERIORS—VIEW OF STORE OF A. J. CLARK & CO., LONDON.

SASKATOON

September 21.—The grocery business of Young & Co., on Avenue C, has been purchased by J. F. Friesen, who was lately in business at Dalmeny, Sask.

J. F. Cairns has returned from a business trip to the east, where he has been in connection with the forming of a company of wholesale grocers to be established here at an early date.

A plentiful supply of fruit is on the market at the present time. Several grocers have received car lots and are making special displays in their windows. The Rogers Fruit Co. were in receipt of six cars of California fruit on Thursday.

The Canadian Northern Railway have announced the rate on which wheat will be handled from points on the Goose Lake line, just under construction. The rate will be 23 cents per 100 pounds to the lake front. The rate from Saskatoon to Port Arthur is 22 cents.

Asquith, some 30 miles west of here, on the C.P.R., has been incorporated as a town. Many new buildings have gone up lately, amongst which is an elevator for the G.T.P.

A. Creighton, of Saskatoon, has bought the store occupied by the branch of J. F. Cairns. He will run it in conjunction with his Saskatoon business.

Misses E. and H. Walker have recently built a restaurant, which is now in operation. They are also running a grocery business in the new building.

Residents of Warman are living in prospects of a new flour mill in the near future. E. C. Smith, an eastern capitalist, paid a visit to the town lately and was pleased with the location.

Apple Prospects Good in Nova Scotia—Some Advice to Shippers—News From New Brunswick.

HALIFAX.

September 21.—The farmers are again busy through the Annapolis valley gathering the year's harvest of fruit. Taken altogether this has been one of the best fruit-growing seasons Nova Scotia has had for years. The continued dry weather of July did not harm the fruit, and the long continued warm weather of the early autumn has served to give the apples a larger form and finer color than last year. In Maine, New Hampshire and some other sections the crop of winter fruit has fallen considerably behind the usual output. This will greatly favor the market for the larger varieties of Nova Scotia apples in Great Britain. R. Starr, president of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association, says that this year our province will send out the finest apples in the world. As to the market, the Gravenstein and other early varieties have, and are still commanding a good price on the local market. Already the Furness steamers have begun to carry their share to the Old Country. Regarding apples shipped to England, Robert Starr has a word of warning for the shippers who are inclined to send fruit too early. He attributes the great loss sustained last year by the Nova Scotia shippers to the men who clogged the English market at the beginning of the season with ripe fruit, thus ruining the reputation of Nova Scotia apples. He says that if we are to regain our reputation this year we must leave the fruit on the trees until it is well colored and put up a good appearance. The shipping facilities were never better than this season. There are several new warehouses along the line and the railway has made additions to its rolling stock. There are also plenty of steamers to carry the fruit. As yet there are not many buyers through the valley. Advices from London state that prospects are good for winter fruit. Steamers sailing from this port carried away about thirty thousand barrels of apples for the English market this week.

Plums are coming in in fairly good supply, but the price is high, 70 cents being asked for a six-quart basket of the choicest quality. Some very fine Ontario plums arrived here this week.

Advices from Charlottetown, P.E.I., say that the potato market is dull at present, but the stock in Prince County is splendid, dry, sound and well grown. There will be a large crop in Prince County and the opinion of the best authorities is that all the potatoes will be wanted at a reasonable price. They have been bringing thirty cents and over all along. The market is somewhat off at present, on account of an overstock in the Montreal market. Eggs declined a half cent per dozen this week. The oat market is very firm. The crop in Prince County will not yield more than half the export surplus of last year. It is being harvested in remarkably good condition. Hay is in a moderate supply. Turnips, carrots, parsnips and beets are plentiful and the prices reasonable.

ST. JOHN.

September 21.—The rush of visitors incident to exhibition week is now over and business is back again to normal conditions. The wholesale and retail merchants report a good week's business as a result of the big crowds that were here to attend the fair. The Exhibition Association is now looking toward some action to secure the Dominion grant of $50,000 for an exhibition here next year, or in 1910. At a dinner given to the Press by the Exhibition Association on Saturday night last, Vice-President T. H. Estabrooks advocated strongly that immediate steps be taken to press St. John's claims.

There has been little change in market quotations during the past week. Sugar has advanced ten cents per hundredweight.

The quantity and quality of river produce which has arrived in St. John during this season has been, in most cases, equal to previous years and the crops have been equal to the average, The early apple crop has surpassed that of last year, but the prices received are lower. Last year was an "off year" in apples, but the crop this season doubles that of several years previous. The green crop is better in quality than last year and tomatoes have never been so good for years. Potatoes will be an average crop, although the late product has only started to come in. Dealers find that the red potato will not sell, but there is a great demand for white potatoes and the prices compared with last year are about the same.

Butter is scarce and is now higher than it was at this time last year. Very little is coming in and the farmers are holding what they have, believing that the price will go up.

John McMulkin, factory inspector, has retired from the grocery and provision business, having sold his stock and trade to Fred McMulkin and Harry G. Titus. Mr. McMulkin has been in active business life for forty years and has earned an honorable reputation throughout the province, both for ability and integrity. He gives up this work in order to devote his whole time to that of factory inspection.

Fredericton butchers have been importing beef cattle from Ontario, owing to the scarcity of domestic beef. The importations of western cattle to St. John continue to increase.

It is quite apparent that New Brunswisk farmers can make butter equal to any in Canada, if not better than most, when the prize-winner at the Toronto Fair had to take a back seat when competing with the butter-makers at the exhibition held here last week. Of the prizes awarded New Brunswick makers got first honors, with Nova Scotia and P.E.I. close behind. J. H. LeClerc, of Foster, Quebec, who captured the silver cup and sweepstakes for butter at Toronto, had an exhibit here, but failed to get prizes. The same judge, Geo. H. Barr, officiated at both exhibitions.

ATTRACTIVE ADVERTISING MATTER.

A couple of attractive hangers, which would aid materially in brightening up the store are just being issued by Bovril, Limited. One of these represents an attractive girl, whose beauty and happy style may presumably be attributed to the use of the beverage. The second is an exact reproduction of a member of the Northwest Mounted Police. A postal card sent to Bovril, Limited, 27 St. Peter St., Montreal, and mentioning The Grocer, will bring a parcel of attractive advertising matter prepaid.

Chatham May Get a Sugar Refinery—Kingston Troubled With the Pedlar Nuisance—The Local Fair Brightens Guelph Business.

PETERBORO.

September 22.—W. H. Kline, who has been carrying on a grocery and cut-rate drug business on the corner of Water and Smith streets for the past year, has sold out to S. J. Guthrie. The latter has secured a lease of the premises. Mr. Kline was doing a successful business, but owing to ill-health was compelled to refrain from active work.

J. V. A. Coon, general merchant, of Havelock, has assigned to Osler Wade, Toronto. In a recent fire in Havelock Mr. Coon's buildings were completely destroyed. The loss together with book debts of $4,000 account for the $12,000 liabilities.

A new grocery and confectionery store has been opened on Park street by W. McCann, a former contractor.

It will be welcome news to commercial men to know that a new station is being constructed at Omemee in the village. The present station is about a mile from the business centre.

The window of White & Gillespie's grocery store was artistically decorated last week with a miniature fair grounds. The Peterboro Exhibition was held last week, and the window attracted the attention of many of the visitors. An exhibit building, race track, live stock sheds, etc., were among the features shown.

H. B. Collier, of the Canada Flakes Company, was in Toronto during the exhibition, superintending the company's display of Canada Flakes as well as the inventions of the Collier-Cunningham Company.

CHATHAM.

September 22.—The opening of the election campaign seems to have had no deterrent effect on the business revival. Many merchants report the last few weeks the best they have had in a long time.

The city market is flooded with fruit these days, peaches being particularly plentiful. These sell for from $2 to $2.50 a bushel. Eggs are scarce, but last Saturday there was evidence of a drop in the price of poultry, as chickens are now beeoming quite plentiful. Butter has sold all summer long for 25c a lb. for dairy, creamery butter ranging several cents higher.

The visit of a delegation of sugar beet magnates from Mount Clemens to this city last week has revived the talk of a beet sugar factory being established in Chatham. The men in question were all connected with the Mount Clemens factory, which draws largely from Chatham and vicinity for its beets. Chatham being directly in the centre of the beet-growing district, with ample connections by rail and water, is an ideal spot for a sugar factory, and from time to time during the past few years there have been rumors of the establishment of a factory here, either by the Wallaceburg Company or by Michigan capitalists. Supt. Widrig, of the Mount Clemens company, who looks after that concern's acreage here, states that beets sufficient to supply a factory could be grown within 50 miles of Chatham the soil being specially adapted to the crop. The Mount Clemens factory is buying about 1,300 acres, and will pay out about $75,000 in Canada this year for beets, in addition to $16,000 or thereabouts in wages. The harvesting of the crop commenced this week, the crop being good, though the tonnage will be lessened by the dry weather. The Wallaceburg factory resumed operations this week.

H. E. Trent, of the Fleishmann Yeast Co., Toronto, and Mr. Hilton, of the Hilton Baking Co., Toronto, were both in the city on business last week.

A. L. Cummings, who formerly conducted the West End grocery, at the corner of Gray and West Streets, but last July sold out to C. H. Seeley, has started in the grocery business again, this time at the corner of Raleigh St. and Lorne Ave., within a couple of blocks of his old place of business.

The threshing of the Kent bean crop is now well under way The crop is only a fair one, though the prices are good, $1.80 being paid in Blenheim last week.

The Highgate Monitor says: "One of our citizens last week spent 11 cents for postage and sent to a big department store for goods which cost him $7.65. The goods were not just as represented in the catalogue and could be purchased right here in our own town for $6.25—a saving of $1.51."

LONDON.

Sept. 22.—According to brokers' reports wholesale trade is very brisk, although the volume of business is scarcely equal to that of this time last year. Both wholesalers and retailers are buying sparingly. Prospects are very bright.

Fair week was a busy one for the retailers. The vast influx of visitors to the city meant a great many more mouths to feed, and it was the grocer, the baker and the butcher, who had to do it. The farmers who came in had plenty of money with them, and spent it freely—for farmers. Stores were kept open until late at night and the clerks were kept busy until closing time. Judging from appearances, hard times do not exist in the agricultural district surrounding London.

Ben. Sloan has disposed of his grocery business in West London in which is located the post office, to a party from the country.

Two grocery rigs came into collision in the street a couple of days ago and it is not a little singular that the owner of one, Percy Brown, was formerly a clerk in the employ of the proprietor of the other, W. Richards. Neither driver was injured but the rigs were damaged.

KINGSTON.

Sept. 22—R. J. Carson, wholesale grocer, may feel pretty proud of his eldest son, who has just completed a brilliant course at the military college, coming out first in nearly all the subjects.

George Gibson has bought out the stock of P. G. Wilmot, corner of Princess and King streets, and intends going into groceries, hay, feed, etc.

Hello! have you got any gem jars? No, where can I get em? Don't know, everybody sold out. Big demand ain't there? Guess it's the low price of tomatoes; 25 cents a bushel.

The big honey man on the island sold his output to a Toronto firm for a good price.

Bower Campbell, once owner of a flour mill here, is renewing acquaintances after an absence of five years. He saw the great possibilities of the flour industry in the far west and took Horace Greeley's advice. He is now part owner of one of Edmonton's largest mills.

Kingston has not had so many buildings in course of erection for many years. Looks as if times would be good this winter nothwithstanding prophecies of the blue ruin society.

Fruit shipped by freight comes to Kingston in an awful shape, baskets broken and some nearly empty. Grapes sold as low as 15c. a basket last week. Every store had them piled up like cord wood.

Our city is overrun with peddlers, owing to the fact that 90 per cent. escape paying licence. Our officials are too philanthropic to look after them, but our merchants pay taxes for the privilege of selling in their stores. Stores make a city beautiful, what do peddlers do in that line?

GUELPH.

Sept. 22.—Many friends in the trade will regret to hear of the death of Thos. Hewer, who early in the year took over the grocery business on the corner of Dublin and Nottingham Sts. from his brother, James.

Does a clerk need holidays? Well, I know he does. Not so much as a rest but the change does him good. Take a day off and see how the other fellows do and you will not regret your time spent. Each clerk should at least have a week once a year just as well as the boss. Clerks, or the majority of them don't. For one reason, they are afraid to ask. The boss will never mention it if the clerk doesn't. Get in touch with your boss, don't be afraid to ask for what you want and talk it over with him. Don't mind what other people say, but be with him and you will find you have a good boss.

C. T. Hicks and his driver, H. Sibbley, deserve credit for carrying off the 2nd prize in the delivery rig class at the Guelph Central Exhibition. There were some good outfits and a lot of argument after, but the judge did not decide with the public. However, the same rigs will come in competition at Fergus and then there will be doings.

The market on Saturday was not up to the usual standard so far as the produce offered was concerned, but the plentiful supply of buyers made it interesting for an hour or so. The scarcity of butter and eggs was quite noticeable, the prices of both going up a notch or so. Tomatoes were a good seller at from 10c to 15c a basket. The other varieties of fruit were quite in evidence but there was no change in prices.

The new mail boxes and also the paper boxes have been distributed throughout the city and are giving good satisfaction except in one very important particular and that is, the time the mail will be collected.

It is a good idea for any exhibition committee to offer a special prize for delivery rigs. Some rigs would never get a coat of paint nor some horses get properly cleaned as well as numerous other little attentions but for this special prize at show time.

Wm. Stevens has bought and taken possession of the store on the Brock Road formerly owned by A. Mathews. Mr. Stevens has had some experience at the grocery business and ought to do well.

BRANTFORD.

September 22.—The death occurred on Monday, Sept. 14, of John B. Harp, at the age of 61. The four sons, Fred C., George, Jasper and Arthur, are all prominently connected with the grocery business in this city.

Geo. S. Winter has returned from a two months' vacation at Bala, Muskoka.

Business has been brisk the past two weeks. The demand for fruit jars was exceptionally heavy, and stocks were very light, but the timely arrival of second shipments (badly broken) saved us from a jar famine No doubt the large tomato crop was responsible for the increased demand They were selling on Saturday three baskets for 25c. Butter 27c. eggs 25c dozen.

A new brick grocery is in course of erection at the corner of Terrace Hill and High Street.

Frank Lake who had an operation for appendicitis about three months ago, was able to resume work this week.

Fred McArthur charged with breaking into Geo. J. Harp's grocery, West Brantford, recently, was given the benefit of the doubt and allowed to go last week.

ST. THOMAS.

September 22.—Saturday's market was a large one and the fee collector succeeded in collecting about ten dollars on the east end or Norton market. Very little difficulty, except in one or two instances, was met with, this being the first Saturday under fee system. The grocers were conspicuous by their absence until after nine o'clock, as the new by-law enacts.

The continued dry weather has had its effect on the crop of potatoes, and they sold readily at 25c per peck, and the supply was not equal to the demand. Tomatoes were quite plentiful and sold for 40s per bushel. Butter was also a scarce article and the drought has caused the make to fall off more than a third. Twenty-eight cents per pound was the ruling figure. Eggs were in light supply and 22c per dozen was the price readily paid.

About 500 baskets of peaches were expressed into the city on Saturday, and it is surprising the demand that continues for them. Eleven-quart baskets sold from 40c to 75c each.

The scarcity of fruit jars is being felt and most grocers are sold out of them. W. D. Boyce had a consignment, but most of them arrived smashed.

The grangers of Middlemarch held an indignation meeting as the result of the city's action in making the farmers attending the market pay market fees, and threaten to attack the legality of the by-law. A committee was appointed to report at next meeting to confer with some merchant as to taking their produce on commission.

Fergy Ferguson's store, on Wilson Avenue, has been sold, and he has not yet secured another building in which to place his stock. It is reported Mr. Vansyckle, the butcher, moves in shortly. Mr. Ferguson has the sympathy of his brother grocers in his trouble.

One or two grocers have been cutting the price of sugar lately, but the good business sense of the majority, and the experience in the past of the folly of such work, has prevented them from taking any notice of it and they are not following suit so far and it is to be hoped the offenders will shortly see the error of their ways.

J. Smale, grocer, Yarmouth Heights, has sold his store and stock to Joseph Hatch, dairyman. Mr. Hatch takes possession on Sept. 28. Mr. Smale did a good business and had to sell owing to ill health in the family.

Jas. Tremblay, owing to his increasing business, has had to put on another delivery wagon.

OTTAWA.

September 22—The Central Canada Exhibition opened on Friday, the 18th inst., together with the Pure Food Show, but they only got down to real business on Monday the 21st., which was children's day. The show is now in full swing, and promises to be a huge success. The show looks very pretty at night when all the lights are on, making it as clear as day, as it is to be remembered there are six hundred lights in the building, put in especially for the show. Any amount of space is in evidence, so that there are no chances of congestion of traffic.

R. J. MacDonald, of the Quaker Oats Company, is in town looking after their exhibit, and calling on the trade.

The Canadian Shredded Wheat Company, are giving a complimentary banquet in St. John's Hall, on Thursday night, and have requested the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association to send invitations to their members and friends.

Because the Ontario bees have not maintained their proverbial reputation for business, some of the fruit crops will suffer. One is apt to forget sometimes how much in agriculture depends upon such a simple thing as fertilization.

GALT.

September 22.—The grocery business in Galt has brightened up considerably during the past two weeks. Not that it has been at all depressed, but the arrival of the preserving season with the consequent large demand for sugar, vinegar, spices and such like has added a bustle and confusion to the everyday business.

A merchant, in discussing trade affairs with your correspondent the other day, made the statement that it has been more than three years since a grocery firm in Galt has become insolvent. This is a remarkable showing when it is considered that fully a dozen new groceries have been started in that time.

The peach season is at its height in Galt and prices range from 60 to 90 cents per basket. The merchants are not at all pleased with the results of the fruit trade this season, stating that with the low prices and great risk owing to fruit spoiling, the profits will be exceptionally small.

Tomatoes have been the banner crop this year in Western Ontario, and incidentally they have been gladly received by the grocers. Allan Deans, of the Red Front, stated to your correspondent that never before had the crop of tomatoes been so large or the quality so high. "Every basket of tomatoes we received was perfect. The crop was so large that many growers have found it cheaper not to pick the tomatoes. I know of one man who turned under more than five hundred baskets rather than pick them. The price has been as low as ten cents per basket."

This season's demand for preserving jars has been the largest in the history of Galt grocers. The cheap price of fruits of all varieties, particularly tomatoes, is responsible for the increased demand. The housewives find that it is cheaper to can tomatoes than to buy them during the Winter.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted at 10 cents per agate line.

W. B. Stringer, Toronto, is giving his attention to filling orders from retail grocers and fruit dealers who look to Toronto for their supplies.

Chr. Bjelland & Co., packers of King Oscar brand sardines, have erected a new factory for the exclusive packing of sardines at Skaanedick, near Stavanger, Norway. Of late years the fishing has moved farther north, and the fact that the new factory is in the centre of the new fishing grounds will facilitate the immediate packing of the sardines, a most important feature. The same firm has been successful in procuring an olive oil of exceptional quality, all of which goes to keep up the excellence of the brand. John W. Bickle & Greening, of Hamilton, Canadian agents, advise that delivery from the new pack are arriving and are obtainable from all wholesale grocers.

THE JOBBER AND THE RETAILER

Relations of the Two Classes Discussed From Several Standpoints by United States Journals—A Question of Interest in Canada.

The following article from a recent issue of the New York Journal of Commerce, dealing with relations between the jobber and the retailer, will be of general interest to the trade in Canada. The question is one that is receiving a great deal of discussion across the border, and while so much attention has not as yet been paid to it in Canada, this will come in a short time.

"Ain't It Awful, Mabel?"

"Retailers are you to be used like cattle and forced to take what you can get and not murmur? There are about 350,000 of you engaged as retail distributors of food, of which the bulk are in the cities. You are a disorganized mass and therefore your power of resistance is slight, and such as you have centres in the comparatively few existing retail grocers' organizations. Just now there is a combined onslaught on the rights of the retailers which seeks to 'treat every retailer exactly alike,' as if they were so many bits of metal, cut from one die. Brains, experience, capital, capacity for work, and all other qualifications are no longer to have sway. 'The race is not to be to the swift, nor the battle to the strong.' Individuality, as well as the measure of integrity and morality, are to be placed on a dead level and the hard-working, intelligent grocers of the United States treated exactly as the ignorant, inexperienced, slovenly, incompetent retailers of food products.

The above strange mixture of lachrymose wail and heroic clarion blast is from a recent issue of the "American Grocer," and represents that paper's view of the recent tendency of large national manufacturers to conduct their business on strictly consistent and logical lines—lines that treat everyone alike and eliminate preferred classes and favored buyers. In a diatribe that teems with most glaring inconsistencies the esteemed weekly chooses to characterize it as the creation of an iniquitous "dead level line."

The one great fundamental need of the grocery, as well as every other trade, is "a fair field and an open market." They can never be attained so long as there are preferred customers and unequal prices—when this merchant can buy at one price and the next at a better price, just because he happens to be able to sell a little more in a given time than his neighbor. Followed to its sequence and ultimate end, it would mean nothing short of allowing the great to become greater and pushing the small dealer to the wall and out of the porthole of oblivion. And because the manufacturer has recognized that very fact he is fast changing his policy to that of consistency and the "dead level line." The "American Grocer" raises his voice in lamentation, a pitiful tale, when it says:

Some More Selections.

"The representative retailers of this country, the great traders who have built up huge distributing plants, doing a trade into the millions, are to be "treated exactly" the same as those foreigners, inexperienced in American life, unable to speak English, with little knowledge of weights and measures. The unthrifty mass are to be placed on a level with the men who have lifted the modern grocery store to the front rank, the peer of the dry goods or jewelry shop.

"You are to be denied your rights as buyers, so that the retailer that sells five, ten or twenty cases of a protected article in a year is to have every advantage of the purchaser who buys in carload lots, and whose channels of distribution are multitudinous and widespread.

"Such firms as Park & Tilford, Acker, Merrall & Condit, S. S. Pierce Company, and all other firms, greater buyers than seven-eighths of the jobbers, but sellers at retail, have been denied the right to buy certain proprietary articles on the most favorable terms, no matter how great the quantity taken."

Now if the "American Grocer" held a retainer as the faithful defender of the 350,000 retail grocers in this country, to whom its tearful plea is addressed, it would really talk very differently. Its logic rather suggests that it is really the special pleader for those others whom it mentions, "who have built up huge distributing plants"—the "Park & Tilford, Acker, Merrall & Condit and S. S. Pierce Co." type. If this be true, why not frankly say so and not beat out their weapon on the anvil of the rest of the retail multitude? As a matter of fact, it is just such big factors and their claims for preferred treatment that jeopardizes the general retail trade. Instead of antagonizing the "dead level" policy, the great mass of grocers will applaud it as the hope of their salvation.

Ethics or Economics.

But there is altogether too much of a tendency in certain circles to regard the evolution of the grocery trade, now in progress, as an ethical rather than a commercial question—to forget that the manufacturer is shaping his policies not from academic theories but in a way to conserve his own business prosperity right. It is a happy reflection of his righteousness, however, that he also discerns that that end is best attained by the preservation of "a fair field and an open market." No manufacturer would undertake to market his wares directly through 350,000 retail channels—each with its uncertainties and expense—if he could accomplish the same end through 3,000 jobbers. It is the acceptance of this fact that has brought about the fact that 85 to 90 per cent. of the grocer's manufactured wares are to-day distributed through jobbers, and only 10 to 15 per cent. through direct buyers. The chain and department stores—and it is they who are now wailing most loudly—buy not 1 per cent. of the whole. In other words, 35,000 retailers sell—on the basis of the latest official estimates of the grocery trade traffic of the country at three billion dollars—300 million dollars worth, while the other $2,700,000,000 worth is sold by 315,000 retailers. In looking after his own best welfare, in reaching every corner of the country, which side of this problem appeals most sensibly to the sane manufacturer—as a pure question of economics? Or, as an ethical question, if you choose, which is fairer in a mercantile sense, to use ten customers and agents all alike and on a fair basis of a living chance to make a living profit, or to select one for special benefits and special profits at the cost of the other nine, particularly when that one may use his very advantage as a weapon to eliminate the other nine and "hog" the whole trade for himself? This is the viewpoint from which the manufacturer has discerned which is his best and most equitable course. It is also the viewpoint of nine-tenths of the 350,000 retailers. Wherefore the occasion for shedding crocodile tears?

Again, take the view of the consumer. It is for his welfare that the 315,000 retailers flourish and thrive rather than that 35,000 may swallow them up. The man next to the housekeeper is the retailer, and the nearer he comes to the housekeeper the better everyone is pleased. The civic welfare is promoted by the thrift of the small dealer and retarded by the growth of monopoly. Popular prosperity expands from the leaven of the corner grocer, and it is manifest that if the 10 per cent. displaced the 90 per cent. the corner grocer would be eliminated—with reasonable reductions, of course, for the inevitable drift toward centralization, which cannot be entirely stayed.

Developing "Big Fellows."

There is something else in this growth of "the big fellow" that is a growing menace to the manufacturer. Experience shows conclusively that when a retailer—or a jobber, for that matter—gets big enough to swing the proposition, he invariably seeks to further eliminate everything in sight by eliminating the manufacturer. First come the big contracts under "buyer's label," followed by the retailer's own packing from bulk, and, eventually, by "our own manufacture." With this staring him in the face, what incentive is there for a manufacturer to "help make a rope with which to hang himself?"

It is not to be said that the retailer who seeks to grow into a "Park & Tilford," etc., is doing other than perfectly right. Nor is he wrong in trying to buy direct or in becoming his own manufacturer. It is entirely legitimate from his standpoint. But the mind which can reach that conclusion ought, in common fairness, to admit that the manufacturer has an equal right to look out for himself and his welfare, present and future. The whole trouble to-day is—and it always has been in the process of evolution—that two conflicting rights have met in the narrow path of expediency. Because one has been pushed aside in the interests of several others —manufacturer, jobber, the majority of the retailers and the most of the consumers—is no occasion for the onlooker to put on sackcloth and ashes and weep great salty tears. The majority are disposed to smile at the adjustment of one more knotty complication.

THE GREEK CURRANT CROP.

Output Restricted Owing to Prolonged Drought.

Vice-Consul Haworth J. Woodley, of Patras, has prepared the following forecast of the currant crop in Greece for this season:

The weather conditions which prevailed during the spring and early summer of 1908 have been generally favorable for the regular development of the season's crop. Provided that the weather continues fine for another three weeks until the currants have been sun-dried and stored, the fruit will be of excellent quality, but probably slightly smaller in size, owing to the prolonged drought that has prevailed. Although no accurate estimate can be made until the currants have been gathered from the drying floors, the new crop is generally estimated at between 165,000 and 170,000 tons. From this quantity the retention or export duty of 35 per cent. in kind on the total shipments must be deducted in order to arrive at the quantity actually available for export. The total shipments during the past season of 1907-8 in round figures amounted to about 125,000 tons, which, plus the 44,000 tons retained as 35 per cent. retention duty, made a total covering actual requirements of 169,000 tons. Owing to the comparatively small stocks in foreign markets there appears good reason to anticipate that shipments will exceed those of the past season, while the present statistical position shows that given normal requirements, there will be just about sufficient currants available for export to supply the average world demand.

In marked contrast to the heavy forward buying of last year it is noteworthy that this season only a very limited quantity of fruit has been sold for future delivery, and it is therefore not improbable that when all consuming markets simultaneously commence covering their requirements spot market prices will advance in response to the universal demand.

WANT NEW FRUIT MARKET.

Toronto Wholesale Dealers Discussing Several Propositions for Improving Conditions.

Again there is talk among Toronto wholesale fruit men, regarding a new central fruit market. Ever since the days when the dealers began selling Niagara fruit on the Yonge street dock as it was taken off the boats, this has been a live question. The first wholesale market was the old warehouse on the dock, but some time ago that building became too small. The boats, too, soon were unable to handle all the fruit-carrying business and the railways took a hand in the game. After some agitation, the Grand Trunk Railway set apart half of the old Great Western depot, which had degenerated to the uses of a freight shed, as a better location for the market, and it was certainly a lift.

Last winter and during the early spring months, a number of fruit dealers pressed the matter on the city council to take some action in regard to securing a new central site and erecting a suitable building. After some discussion between the council, a committee representing the fruitmen, and the railway authorities, an agreement was come to by which the G.T.R. promised to devote the whole railway building at the foot of Yonge street to the purposes of a wholesale fruit market during the summer months. They have done so, and on the whole, have brightened up the building and given a good train service as well. There still remains a part of the market unoccupied, and from present indications the structure would be suitable for several years to come—that is providing all necessary repairs are made. But the dealers are not all satisfied.

Last week a proposition was made to the city council suggesting that eight or ten fruit dealers were willing to pay $40 or $50 a month rent for the use of a part of the north section of St. Lawrence Market, and a sub-committee was appointed to look into the matter. Some of the fruit men wish to go to St. Lawrence Market during the winter months; others say that the lower floor of the south section would be preferable, as the railway would pass right by the door. It might in time, too, become a permanent wholesale fruit market.

The most ambitious project launched is that the city erect a new building on what is known as Bayside Park, on the harbor front, between Bay and Yonge streets, the building to contain a cold storage plant for summer use and a steam-heating plant for winter, the market to be used all the year round. The city could have the control of the tracks entering the building, and wharfage accommodation for boats could be made on the south side. Fruit dealers aver that they would be willing to recoup the city in rental for any outlay, and that in time it would be a paying proposition.

Some of the larger dealers say this proposition comes from men who have no regular warehouse accommodation, and that they are content with things as they are, as endless confusion would result and men who had invested their all in the business would stand to lose by any sudden radical change. The discussion may help in the long run by improving conditions at the present market, and, at any rate, healthy discussion can do no harm.

Grocery travelers doing Galt report that business all along the line shows a decided improvement, and that once more the populace is forsaking the meagre fare for the more expensive articles, a sure sign that public confidence in the future is being restored.

SCHEMES FOR BOOMING BUSINESS

Plans Other Merchants Have Adopted for Keeping Things Moving.

A Michigan merchant sent out a thousand self-addressed return post cards with a list of the principal goods he handled and suggested that the farmer mark any article that he wanted to buy during the season. It was explained that the checking in no way obligated the farmer to purchase. Replies were satisfactory and a great number of sales were closed.

"29c each for first 20, thereafter 50c," is an example of the general marking of cards for an introductory sale of a California merchant. This idea, carried out in pricing all his offerings, made the morning of his introduction sale busier than the afternoon. Such a plan is a fair one to use on the arrival of new goods and for the introduction of new departments.

On the back of his show window in a general store an Iowa merchant has a large sign reading "Just In." His display of fresh seasonable goods is completely changed each week. This man also believes in plenty of plain price marks and generally has an attractive display of 5 and 10-cent leaders in his window. He finds that the biggest looking values can be offered at these prices.

An ingenious Arizona merchant who had just enlarged his store left one show window unfinished and stated on a card in the window that as soon as trade let up a little bit he would get a chance to complete his window.

If all your wall space is already in use, how about conspicuous signs for the ceiling? Also hangers extending from pillars, fixtures, etc., marking locations as well as specials—such signs as may be read both coming and going. Supply the churches of your town with strong Japanese fans bearing your advertisement.

Keep your store front as clean and cool as possible. If your store fronts south, east or west an awning is well nigh indispensable. One merchant made a hit with his town's people by supplying a big sprinkling cart bearing his advertisement. He employed a man all Summer to keep the more important residence streets of his town well sprinkled. At least, be sure to keep the dust laid in front of your store.

Plan a gigantic 9c sale. Price everything in your store at a multiple of 9. Sell a few leader 15c goods at 9 cents; some 25c goods at 18c, others will go at 27c; dollar goods in general should sell at 84c or 80c, etc. Open and close your store at 9 o'clock. To the purchasers of each ninth sale give one chance in a good guessing contest with each 9c of any purchase. Or, refund each ninth purchase, not exceeding a certain sum. One merchant displayed a mammoth 9 as a background to his attractive 9c window. A lot of small squares were ruled on this figure and a good prize was given to the one guessing nearest to the number of squares. The best 10c values in his store were hung up in and around this figure.

To keep trade at home, place a large, handsome card in a prominent place reading, "if we haven't got it, we'll get it."

OUR CHICAGO MANAGER.

J. P. Sharpe has been appointed manager of the Chicago branch of the MacLean Publishing Co., with offices at 933 to 935 Monadnock Block. He will have charge of all the company's business in that city and surrounding territory, and will give it his undivided attention.

The MacLean Company's complete list of papers are:—Canadian Grocer, Hardware and Metal, The Dry Goods Review, Canadian Machinery, The Power House, Plumber and Steamfitter, Bookseller and Stationer, Printer and Publisher, The Financial Post, Busy Man's Magazine.

Mr. Sharpe knows Canada thoroughly, having traveled in every part of the Dominion. For some years he has been a resident of Winnipeg, and has covered the West from Port Arthur to Victoria in the interests of the MacLean Publications. This, with his previous business experience in Chicago, fits him to look after the interests of this company in the Western States.

This makes our second branch office in the United States, the other being in New York, at 544 West 145th Street, with R. B. Huestis as manager.

FREIGHT CARRYING BY STREET RAILWAY.

Again the Montreal City Council has been memorialized by the business men of the city, regarding the movement of freight by the Street Car Company. This question has been on the tapis for thirteen months, and the promotors are becoming impatient as may be gathered by the text of the petition. This petition savours somewhat of a demand, and certainly does not possess the usual hat-in-hand commonplaces of such documents. It is from business men who obviously mean business and the fact is patent that they are tired of the dilatory manner which the council has displayed toward them and their prayer. All this is significant, as the petition contains the names of some of the most powerful business men in the city. Ald. Sadler in commenting upon the petition said, that there was no objection to the Street Railway carrying freight, but that the city's interests must be protected. He also stated that several meetings had taken place between the city authorities and the Street Railway Company, but as yet no definite arrangement had been arrived at. The franchise to be given was a valuable one and the city must get proper compensation for it. The following is the text of the petition :

"To the Mayor and Aldermen :

"Gentlemen :—On July 3, 1907, a largely signed petition was sent by the undersigned and many others of the large and important business houses, asking that arrangements be made at once with the Montreal Street Railway Company to carry freight in the city. Apparently nothing has been done, although some thirteen months have elapsed. In view of the fact that this question is of paramount importance, directly to the business interests of the city, and indirectly to the public generally, we cannot understand why an arrangement has not been arrived at long ago. The undersigned would strongly urge upon your Council that the matter be dealt with without further delay ; and while not desiring to take any active steps in the matter, must inform you that unless something is done shortly, they do not intend to let the matter rest."

TOURIST-TRAVEL IN MARITIME PROVINCES.

At the annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade in Halifax the other day, a good deal of attention was given to the attractiveness of the Maritime Provinces as a Summer resort.

President Bell, in his address, declared that "one important asset of these Maritime Provinces is the cool and invigorating climate in the Summer time." A resolution subsequently carried by the convention recommended a scheme of advertising, and urged subordinate boards of trade to furnish information regarding the peculiar advantages offered tourists by their respective localities.

Resolutions alone will not bring tourists. There must be an active and continuous campaign. And to ensure active and continuous campaigns there must be organization among the business men in the respective localities. The possibilities make the venture well worth while.

Tourist travel is estimated to be worth $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year to Maine. It should be made worth a great deal more to the Maritime Provinces. Their scenic and climatic conditions are certainly as attractive to Summer tourists, while in historic interest they transcend anything that the neighboring States of the American Union can produce.

Now is the time to make preparations for next year's campaign. Possibly the Provincial Governments might be induced to financially aid the enterprise. But the success of the movement will depend more upon the organized effort of the business men than any other factor.

THE EGG SITUATION.

The egg situation is at last developing a little interest. With the cooler weather eggs of better quality are arriving on the markets, and the shrinkage is not at all so great as during July and August. This has caused an upward tendency in price. In fact, this past week the quotations have advanced one cent, and from present indications the price may go higher.

There is not now the export business in eggs there was some years ago, local demand having increased very rapidly. There are, however, sections of the country where supplies are freer than in others. Take around Toronto, for instance. During the spring months there are not sufficient eggs to fully meet all demands. Then when September comes round, other parts of the country feel the pinch, while Toronto has a few eggs to spare. Buyers at distant points, say west of the Great Lakes, must, however, pay more than local consumers, because the price of the case is added. This will run up to almost a half cent a dozen more than the local quotations given. Local buyers are not charged for the cases because they are returned; but buyers in distant places must pay for cases because they are not returned.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, September 23.—After a whole month of the most gloriously fine weather, many of the days running 90 in the shade, the West is having a little rain and the hearts of all the railway men are rejoicing, for the question of car shortage has already become acute in many districts, particularly in the South and West, where the harvest was early and there has been nothing to delay threshing. Anything that will delay the separators for a few weeks would be acceptable to the C.P.R. There passed inspection at Winnipeg between Sunday morning, 13th, and Saturday night, 19th, 3,898 cars, or 4,170,800 bushels of wheat. Oddly enough, the first new wheat noted in the inspection of 1907 was posted on the 20th September, so that the contrast between last year and this is very striking. Up to the last few days the grade has been holding up well and things generally were so favorable that there was a tendency to place the grade of the whole crop and the average of yield on the best then being received, but Thursday, Friday and Saturday the proportion of No. 3 Northern began to increase and dealers and farmers were alike reminded that though the ideal weather of the past four weeks had done much to bring the harvest off without bleaching or damage of that kind, it could do nothing to fill the wheat frozen to a greater or less extent while it was yet green, and there were many thousands of acres that were more or less touched. The wise farmers, who are in a position to hold their wheat, are doing so, but apparently the bulk are obliged to sell, judging from the rush that is coming forward. Prices have held remarkably firm in the face of receipts, most unusually firm on an incoming crop, and indicate the world's need of wheat. Indeed, there is every indication that they will continue good throughout the year. There has seldom been a year when the world had so thoroughly cleaned up an old wheat crop before it got a chance at the new, and though the crops of the present year are good the world's wheat crop as a whole is not a bumper one. The crop of the United States is estimated at 627,000,000, with an exportable surplus of 128,000,000. This is 7,000,000 less than in 1907, and 108,000,000 less than in 1906. Canada's exportable surplus out of a crop of 102,000,000 will be from 80,000,000 to 85,000,000. Russia's exportable surplus may be 88,000,000, but it is doubtful. The total exportable surplus of exporting countries is estimated at 561,000,000, and in this is included the possible surpluses of Argentina and Australia, where the crops are yet to be made. The world's requirements are placed at 484,000,000, so that the amount of wheat in sight above requirements is only 77,000,000 bushels, a very narrow margin indeed. These figures all point to good markets and good prices, though there is no suggestion of world shortage and phenomenal prices.

In Winnipeg it is claimed that not since 1896 has there been so good a demand for cash wheat at this season of the year. Representatives of American houses have been big buyers all week, running about half a million a day of cash and future delivery, and it is rumored that some at least of this wheat is to be accumulated by Armour as a hedge against his shortages in American wheat. This wheat is mainly going out through Buffalo, though there is some trade all the time through Montreal for export, and eastern millers are endeavoring to get their share. There is difficulty in getting cars forward after inspection at Winnipeg, owing, it is claimed, to shortage of motive power, due to the strike. On Saturday there were 50 trains of wheat, averaging 50 cars each, on sidings waiting to be moved to Fort William. This condition of things is leading to the paying of high premiums for individual cars that are past Winnipeg, in order to fill boats that are chartered and waiting for cargo. Considering that a strike is in progress the C.P.R. have done wonders, but it is not possible to replace the number of men who went out and maintain the standard of efficiency of motive power at a time when there are such heavy demands upon it.

The Railway Commission has been sitting all week in Winnipeg, and one of the matters that has come before them was the old one of the commodity rates to the Kootenay, in which connection the Winnipeg merchants did not get their request, Judge Maybee declaring that the commission would have to take the matter up again with the Vancouver people before they could reverse the decision previously made in favor of that city.

Cattle trade is active, but it, too, is beginning to feel the shortage of cars. The shortage in this connection is actually cars and not motive power, and the railway claims that it is due to the large number of cattle cars which were detained west of the burned bridges and which had to make the trip to Montreal and return after the bridges were repaired, making a delay of over a week.

Although 60 per cent. of the export stuff was out a week ago, the other 40 per cent. will take some hauling, and cattle men are anxious to get them forward while the present fine weather continues.—H.

A NAW BANANA.

A new variety of banana is being offered on the Toronto market. It is called "Suriname," and comes from South America. The United Fruit Co. invested $1,000,000 in plantations in Dutch Guiana, and the "Suriname" is the product of these plantations. The banana itself is a cross between a Jamaica and a Port Limon, and has qualities possessed by both. The fruit is large and clean and the bunches are of good size and attractive looking.

SHABBY BUSINESS LITERATURE.

When you send out literature to your customers, or probable customers, see that it is not shabby.

Literature that is shabby, like a man in rags, does not create a good impression, and the office of business literature whether in the form of an ordinary letter or advertising matter, is to create a good impression.

CHEAP FRUIT AND CANNED GOODS

The question as to what effect the enormous sales of fruit of all kinds this season will have on the canned goods business during the winter and spring is an interesting one just now. Reports from all over the country indicate that more fruit and vegetables are being canned at home this year than ever before. This is borne out, too, by the enormous business which is being done in fruit jars, the demand for these being almost unprecedented during the past week or so.

A good deal of this undoubtedly is due to the plentiful supply of tomatoes. Tomatoes at 10c and 15c a basket offers a big inducement to the housewife and thousands of quarts of these goods are being put up at home, which will take the place of canned goods formerly purchased from the grocers. The same thing is evident, though to a lesser extent with several lines of fruit.

The matter is one that may be reasonably expected to have some effect on the price of canned goods before next season. The pack of the same lines put away by the housewives is at least comparatively large and when the home product is used in preference to the factory goods there seems certain to be some results felt somewhere.

ONTARIO SUGAR CASE ENLARGED.

The application for the appointment of a receiver for the Ontario Sugar Co., of Berlin, which came before Justice Falconbridge on Saturday was not granted, the case being enlarged indefinitely. It was felt that the company could be carried on satisfactorily under new management, and the fact that the factory has resumed operations this week seems to be an evidence that the matter will be settled satisfactorily outside the courts.

A HOUSECLEANING WINDOW

Timely Suggestion for Grocer's Display—Further Hints for Effective Window-Dressing.

September—house-cleaning time—the season when the housewives are in search for dirt removers, and the time when a window full of suggestions would bring in considerable extra business. With this in view the window display shown in the accompanying engraving, the idea for which appeared originally in the Grocery World, should be of considerable help.

This window does not need much explanation, unless it be the background. The brooms are fastened to a half-circle, made of boards, by either nailing or tying with twine or wire. To do this bore two holes in the board of a trifle less than the width of the broom handle apart, then put your wire or twine through the holes, around the broom and tie in back.

Between the broom handles on the board are scrub brushes and around the edges are clothes pins. A clothes line is run from broom to broom, on which are clothes pins. The sign, "Enemies of Dirt," is on cardboard and tacked outside of the brooms.

The soaps, soap powders, ammonia, blue, etc., are arranged irregularly. Do not overcrowd this section of the window.

AN ARGUMENT HELPS.

The problem of making displays a drawing card is one which all tradesmen are trying to solve. Weekly visits to the trade are always productive of new ideas and as no two men think precisely alike the result is a large variety of opinions which invariably produce new points. Questioning a grocer about the value of his window displays he stated that they were comparatively valueless unless they carried with them some convincing argument or information regarding the stock displayed. By this he meant to convey that while a solely artistic window might attract attention by the character of its make-up, but this did not accomplish so much as a more simply-arranged window with nicely printed cards setting forth the salient features of the product.

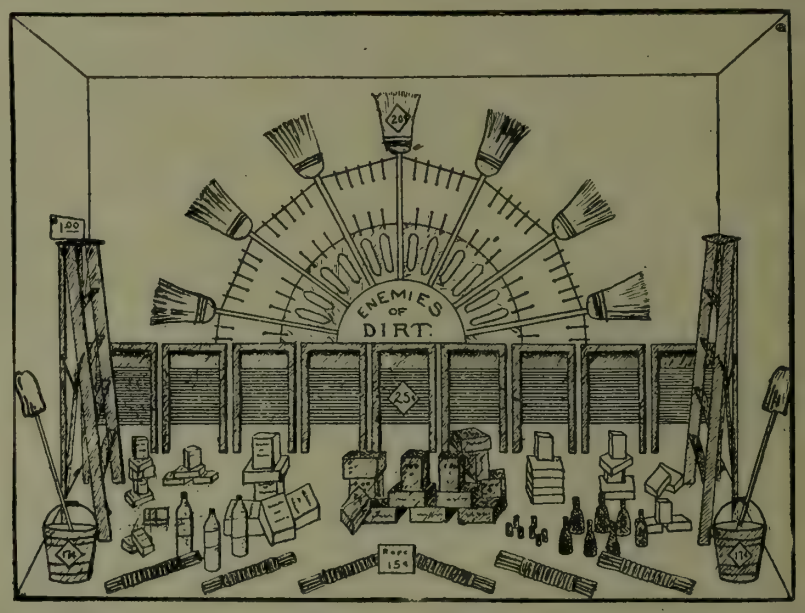
Take, for instance, coffee. This one product may be arranged in various shapes on the floor of the window as the brands will afford variety, or glass jars may be employed. In any case simplicity should be aimed at so as to avoid confusion. Now, a fine placard telling something about coffee and last of all, but most important, a good recipe for making coffee. It is a fact that not one woman in a hundred can make good coffee and the most of them know it and when they see this tip the chances are they will buy and commence to experiment. If successful they will think perhaps it may be due to your good coffee as well as the recipe and consequently they are predisposed in your favor. This idea of giving recipes opens up a new field which this grocer has been using to good advantage. He believes if a woman gets poor results due to herself, she is prone to blame the grocer and not herself, therefore, he tries to direct his customers as much as possible.

BRIEF HINTS FOR THE WINDOW.

Don't let your window display be confined to the holiday trade. Keep at it every day in the year.

Don't forget that the best printers' ink for the retail grocers, is the show window.

A well displayed window gives the best returns of any kind of advertising and at a nominal cost.



SUGGESTION FOR A GROCER'S WINDOW IN HOUSECLEANING SEASON.

It is not always the elaborately dressed window that brings the most results. It is the window that "tells the story" of what you have to sell, that brings returns every day in the year.

Give the grocer clerk a chance to show his skill in dressing the show window. There are many clerks who would be glad to have the opportunity. Many of the grocers' windows (and they are among the finest) in the city are the handiwork of the clerk.

Don't display goods you cannot duplicate from your stock. It hurts your trade when your customers learn that only samples are shown.

CONDITIONS IN JAPAN TEA TRADE

W. H. Halford, of S. T. Nishimura & Co., Montreal, called at The Grocer office last week. Mr. Halford is making a call upon the trade in Canadian and U. S. cities in interests of the Japan Central Tea Trading Asociation. Interviewed on the question of condition of the Japan tea trade, Mr. Halford stated that although the first and second crops this year had fallen short, business this year, taken all through, was very satisfactory and orders were complete and to the satisfaction of merchants. The somewhat higher price prevailing on Japans had, in a measure, permitted Ceylon greens to be imported, but it was very evident that users of Japan were supporting their favorite tea. The conditions, taken generally, were most satisfactory and he looks for stronger support in the future.

SAVING ON ICE.

Any device which will save money for a business man is always welcome, and sometimes in the most remote corners such things are found. The matter of ice, comes to quite a considerable figure every year, and if no ice was required, this would be a saving, to say nothing of the trouble of keeping the refrigerators full. A grocer near Montreal has hit upon a plan which is proving an admirable one. He has a small elevator shaft in the rear of the store, and in this a small car into which he places his butter and various other things, which he wishes to preserve. By moving a lever, this car can be sent down five feet below the cellar floor into the cool ground. The temperature of the ground remains the same winter and summer at this depth. The best way to operate the car is with a lever acting upon two wheels, around which is wound the rope that operates the car; an arrangement can be made by any ordinary mechanic. It will be observed that it is necessary for the drum to wind up sufficient rope by moving the lever a quarter turn.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, Sept. 24, 1908.

POINTERS—
Fish—Declined.
Sugar—Steady.
Butter—Advanced.
Vegetables—Advanced.
Spices—Steady.

The week has been a fairly good one among the trade and collections have been reported as showing an improvement. Butter and cheese have been hard hit by the continued dry weather in the country, which is burning the feed in the pastures. Spices and sugar have been under a steady demand. This is the result of the pickling and preserving season now being in full swing, Teas have been somewhat quiet, whilst coffee has preserved the even course which has characterized this market for a long time. New crop dried fruits are beginning to make their appearance on the market, and from now out new arrivals may be expected almost daily for some considerable length of time. Reports arriving from the east, nearly all state good quality in the crops. Evaporated apples are practically a thing of the past and no interest will be taken in this market until the new stock puts in its apearance. Syrups and molasses are in good demand. Maple products are slow, comparatively no interest being taken in this line. New beans are being quoted by dealers and this is looked upon by buyers as a welcome release from the thralldom of Hindoos and Austrians. Eggs are coming in in good quantity and are improving in quality. The honey market is very active and supplies are large in quantity, consequently there is a large volume of business passing. Vegetables are a little stiffer this week, whilst fruits in some lines are cheaper. Fish has weakened slightly this week. Other lines remain the same.

SUGAR—The past week has been an active one in the sugar market. The unseasonable dullness which the market experienced for some time is now being more than made up for. Ships now in port are unloading foreign sugar and it is stated that importations will be heavy this fall. Prices unchanged.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES — There has been a good demand for molasses during the week for grocers requirements but the buying has been for immediate wants. Stocks are pretty low and this fact has kept the market firm. No large sales have been reported. Syrups are in fair demand also, and prices have not altered since last reported.

TEA—Locally the Japan market is somewhat quiet this week, only changing hands for smaller quantities for immediate requirements. The home market is reported unchanged and firm. Reports from the primary markets state an improvement in the quality of Assam-grown teas and Darjeelings. This condition exists in other high grade teas. Imports of Indians up to the present are not appreciably heavier than they were a year ago, but cabled shipments from Calcutta to London to the end of August are three and a half million pounds more than in 1907; whether the total may be disarranged later ion or not by optional bills of lading, is not yet known. There is no improvement in the quality of teas arriving from Cacher, Sylhet and Dooars, but Assams and Darjeelings have been specially good. The Assams are considerably better than last year's, and whilst they may hardly be said to be up to the 1905 crop, they are on the whole very satisfactory at present. As to prices there has been a fall of about ¾d per pound on the lowest grades of Cacher and Dooars teas up to the end of August owing to their generally poor quality in cup, and because buyers deem it unlikely that there will be any immediate shortage in supply, and have therefore no inducement to add stock. But on the other hand, the keenness of the competition for good to finest teas shows that buyers were very short of them, and were anxious to secure working stocks, lest in a month or two following the precedent of previous seasons, the supply should again become indifferent in quality. Advices from Calcutta also state that the outturn as far as they have been able to ascertain in the producing districts, was about on a par with last year. They also report a hardening tendency in the values of better liquoring teas and this rather supports the views of the London market in regard to buying finest sorts freely now.

In Ceylons the quality has been steadily improving for some time, and given buyers increased confidence, as the improvement has extended to almost all growths of low country tea, as well as to the hill-grown sorts. Prices of low grades, however, have fallen about ½d per pound on the month, but they are still ½d above the average price of similar tea for the same month in the last four years. The grades above common are all dearer than they were a month ago, and the fine to finest sorts in consequence of the improved quality are bringing much better prices, so that notwithstanding the decline in common tea, the average for the month for all kinds sold on garden account is 1-5d higher than in July, consequently whilst the relief to the trade in a lower quotation, for common tea is much appreciated, it is at the same time satisfactory to note that the return to the produce on the whole is better.

Chinas are somewhat dull, having suffered in sympathy with lower quotations ruling for Indians and Ceylons.

COFFEE—A good steady trade is being done in coffees, with a little preference in the direction of some of the higher grades. All dealers report a steady growth in this business. Reports from the primary markets say that the visible supply on June 30, 1908, was 14,000,000 bags. Total visible supply on June 30, 1908, and estimated production for the year ending June 30, 1908, and estimated production for the year ending June 30, 1909, 29,197,000 bags, less the consumption for the fiscal year 1909—17,197,000 bags—which leaves the visible supply at the close of 1909, 12,000,000 bags.

DRIED FRUITS—The first steamer with dates left Bussorah on Tuesday and arrived at Muscat to-day (Friday) where she will complete loading with Fards, and from thence she will sail direct to New York, where she is due the latter part of October. Consignments for Canada will arrive a few days later. Dates are selling freely and the market is easy on recently revised quotations. Reports from Bussarah say that the quality of those packing is all that could be desired. The Fard crop is not as late as it was at first thought it would be owing to adverse weather conditions. The first figs to arrive were opened Tuesday. Reports from Smyrna indicate an active and advancing market. For the first half of September shipment prices ruled around 7c for 3-crown, 7½c, for 4-crown, 8c for 5-crown and 10½c for fancy 6-crown, 1-lb. glove boxes 6½c.

The currant market is fairly active and stocks of old fruit are light. Advices from Greece state a strong market. The first arrivals are expected to-day (Friday) or to-morrow (Saturday). Prices will rule around 6c for barrels and 6c to 7c for package goods. The old difficulty of properly housing the output to prevent any destruction by rains has been satisfactorily obviated this year. This condition will render the quality of a higher standard.

New crop Sultanas are being offered for September shipment at the following prices: 3-crown 7½c, 4crown 8c, 5-crown 9c, 6-crown 9½c, 7-crown 10c. Locally there is not much interest being manifested in the market.

CANNED GOODS

No particularly new developments are noticed during the week, though canners report sales as very good. Jobbers, too, are doing a nice business in vegetables and fruits.

With the exceedingly cheap tomatoes of the past week or so, it is rather problematical as to how the price of canned tomatoes will be affected. Undoubtedly there will be a large pack and in the face of this arises the fact that all over the country more tomatoes are being put up at home than ever before. This may have some effect on prices next Spring.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Sept. 24.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Firm.
Dried Fruits—New apricots in.
Teas—Firmer in primary markets.
Collections—Better.

Without doubt there is generally a better feeling in the grocery markets this week. Jobbers are less conservative in speaking of business conditions and more activity is noticeable around the warehouses. The past week has been somewhat improved over the week before, and things seem to be approaching the old basis. Collections, too, are reported better this week and the purse strings seem to be opening up in all directions.

Glass jars, sugar and spices seem to be in special demand during the week. There has been an almost unprecedented demand for jars as a result of the large supply of cheap fruit and both jobbers and retailers have been kept busy. Sugar, too, has gone out well, the demand at last coming to be something like what has been expected all summer. The new dried fruits, also, are passing out fairly well. Demand in other lines is fair with no special features.

SUGAR—The market is steady with no particularly new features.

Willett & Gray, in reviewing the situation in raws say: "The week under review developed no specially new features, although on the whole the details are favorable to the markets here. Beet sugar which was 9s. 6d. at last report is now 9s. 9d. for present month, and is ¾d. higher for October and May new crop deliveries at 9s. 6¾d. and 9s. 10½d. respectively. Canada entered the market and took some San Domingo Centrifugals that are coming here at basis of 3.95c., 96 degrees test say 5c per 100 lbs. above current quotations for use here, but a later sale from warehouse of 27,000 bags Centrifugals to the Arbuckle refinery at 3.95c., 96 degrees test, established the quotations here to this basis. The stock remaining in Cuba is but 44,000 tons, against 50,000 last week and 79,000 tons last year. Under present and prospective conditions of the raw and refined markets, it ought not to prove difficult to find buyers for all the Javas that may not be diverted to the United Kingdom.

"A continued firm and steady market here seems to be assured so long as Europe holds to its present firm position. The smaller receipts of Russian sugars than was looked for in the United Kingdom is having a very healthy effect upon that market. Free arrivals of Java cargoes previously sold are noted at different ports of the United States, but total receipts are but 38,386 tons, against 56,251 tons previous week, which, with meltings increased to 40,000 tons, reduces stocks to 256,212 tons, against 257,826 tons last week. The tone and tendency at the close is to continued steadiness in values at the advance noted."

TEAS—A slightly firmer tendency all round is noticeable this week and while this has not affected local prices to any extent still it is tending to a better feeling.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton, in reviewing the situation, say: "With considerably more enquiry from the country, and combined offerings of Indian and Ceylon tea on a moderate scale, a distinctly better tone has now set in, and a further advance on last week has been made in quotations for nearly all descriptions. It is to be hoped that importers will not unduly press forward supplies during the next few weeks, which might minimize the appreciation in prices which has recently taken place."

COFFEE—Demand locally continues good with no change in prices.

DRIED FRUITS—Business is very fair with emphasis on the new crop goods. New apricots arrived this week and are priced considerably below last year's high figures. New crop currants are also in, and prices are about the same as on old crop goods. Some demand is being felt for the new crop valencias, which are going at 7½. Prunes are reported advanced in the primary market, but there are as yet none in stock here. Prices generally are unchanged.

A NIBBLE AT THE GUILD CASE.

Long-delayed Case Taken up on Monday .—Adjourned Till October 19th.

It looked like business at last on Monday morning, Sept. 21, when the long-standing Guild case was brought before Justice Falconbridge in Judge Morson's court room at the city hall in Toronto. S. F. Washington, K.C., of Hamilton, and George T. Blackstock, K.C. appeared for the crown, while E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., E. H. Ambrose and Eric Armour represented the defendants. Several of the wholesalers interested from Toronto, Hamilton and London were also present.

The indictment officially pronounced reads as follows.

"That Henry C. Beckett, George E, Bristol, John I. Davidson, T. B. Escott, W. C. Craig, J. F. Eby, T. Kinnear, Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, did during the years 1898—1905 at the City of Hamilton and elsewhere—combine and agree—with the Cordova Sugar Refining Company, Acadia Sugar Refining Company, and about one hundred wholesale grocers in Canada to limit the facilities in producing, manufacturing and dealing in sugar, tobacco, starch, canned goods, salt, cereal and other articles to restrain and injure trade, to unreasonably enhance the price of these goods, to lessen competition and in a word to form what is commonly known as a combine."

The first witness called was J. Stanley Cook, of Montreal, the secretary of the Guild, now the Wholesale Grocers' Exchange. He was questioned regarding the composition of the Guild, and said that it included nearly all the wholesale grocers from one end of the country to the other. There was also a Provincial Guild and a Local Guild in nearly every city of importance.

Most of the morning was taken up by Mr. Washington reading extracts from a book containing the constitution and by-laws of the Guild, and also the minutes of various meetings since 1903, with the ostensible purpose of showing that illegal arrangements had been made to restrict prices. Nothing of much importance, however, was uncovered.

After a morning of tedious reading, His Honor Justice Falconbridge stated that he would be unable at present to devote more than the one day to the case as previous arrangements interfered. With this in view, after some consultation, the case was adjourned till Oct. 19th, when it is understood it will be finally gone through with. In the discussion, Mr. Johnston for the members of the Guild, stated that they were anxious to have the case carried on and to have the matter finally settled.

WILL HAVE TRIP TO OTTAWA.

Committee of Toronto Grocers' Association Arranging for Week-End Outing.

There will be something doing down in Ottawa on Saturday and Sunday of this week or something will be the matter. Why? Well, eight or ten of the heartiest and liveliest members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association are going down to take in the tail end of the big Fair and the Pure Food Show, and incidentally to have a friendly outing together. The excursion was arranged at the association's regular monthly meeting, in their rooms in the Temple Building, on Monday evening, Sept. 21, the first meeting, by the way, for some time.

Not a great deal of business was transacted, the minds of the members being occupied with other things. A report was given, however, of the results of the big excursion conducted by the association so successfully last Summer, and a nice little balance was favorably received. Then came the discussion regarding the outing. Several members felt that the committee which had worked so hard for the success of the excursion deserved a little appreciation shown them and it was suggested that a little trip be given them. Several points were suggested, including Markham Fair and Detroit, but the general opinion went in favor of the Ottawa trip, and as many of the committee as can be persuaded to leave their business over Saturday will be sent down to enjoy themselves in the Capital City. These members of the Toronto association are great fraternizers, and all of them jolly good fellows, and it is safe to say they'll have a trip that will be remembered for all time.

EGG-O-SEE CO. IN TROUBLE.

Advices from Chicago on Wednesday stated that the Egg-o-See Cereal Company, with headquarters in Chicago and factories in Buffalo and Quincy, Ill., has been placed in the hands of a committee of creditors. The assets are valued by the company at $1,500,000, but the creditors are said to regard them as about equal to the indebtedness. An auditing committee now at work on the company's books is expected to make a detailed report by Saturday.

In turning over the assets and liabilities of the company to the committee of creditors President Cassidy also gave unissued bonds of the company, whose par value is $220,000. These bonds are a leaving from an issue of $400,000 made about a year ago. The factories of the company are valued at $1,000,000, and the good will is estimated at $300,000. The receivership appointed for A. Booth and Company, recently, is said to have precipitated the appointment of the committee.

CANNING FACTORY BURNED.

The South Bay Canning Co.'s plant, near Kingston, was burned on Friday morning, September 18. Everything was destroyed but the office. Fortunately the loss of $50,000 was well covered by insurance, $10,000 having been added just the day preceding the fire, on account of the large stock carried.

The fire, however, comes at a particularly unfortunate time, in the midst of the canning season, with contracts of various kinds made and a large stock of goods already packed.

CONGRATULATIONS, MR. VEREY.

There is joy evident in the Toronto office of the Edwardsburg Starch Co. this week, and justly so. A little son was introduced in the home of Manager Fred. A. Verey, on Tuesday, hence the happiness. May he grow and prosper, is The Grocer's wish.

The Don Storage and Cartage Co., 81 Front St. E., Toronto, offers special facilities for the transferring of incoming and outgoing goods. Their outfit is large and of the best. Special attention is given to handling carlots.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, September 24, 1908.)

The canned goods situation is still the most interesting feature of the local wholesale grocery market. Sales of corn, peas, and tomatoes are heavy at the low prices quoted since the war of prices started. Dealers expect that the present low prices will not be maintained very long as they entail actual loss on the part of the wholesale houses and consequently purchases during the last fortnight have been heavy.

Business is showing considerable improvement. From the former's standpoint, September has been an ideal month, as there has been nothing to interfere with harvesting and threshing. Crop money is getting into circulation as wheat is being rushed to the lake front and all classes of business will benefit thereby.

CANNED GOODS—The price war in corn, peas and tomatoes is still on and the low figures quoted last week still obtain. We quote:

MAY BUY BOOTH COMPANY.

Canadian Interests to Take Over Business of the Concern in This Country.

It is announced that the Canadian shareholders in the Booth Fish Company, the large United States concern, which was recently forced into the receiver's hands and which has been doing a large business in Canada, will buy out the entire Canadian rights of the company and in future will run it on exclusively independent lines. Negotiations are being carried on through the Northern Crown Bank, the vice-president of which, Capt. William Robinson, is managing-director of the company.

The failure of the company has brought out some interesting features. Stories of combinations and uniform advances in prices; alleged double dealing and account juggling that have come to the surface and are now being sifted by the district attorney's office.

The company has been in existence over forty years, having been started by A. Booth in a small way and growing into an enormous business. The assets, which cannot be immediately realized on are said to be larger than the liabilities and it is stated that the company will in time be able to again get on its feet. Recent developments, however, may present a resumption of business on the old basis.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Geo. McFarlane, assistant general manager of E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., Toronto, is making an extended business and pleasure trip to the Pacific coast. Just at present Mr. McFarlane is in Vancouver, where a married daughter resides. Mr. McFarlane reports that business on the coast is all right.

A Busy Saskatchewan Store

Successful Business Done Under Novel Conditions With the Ranchers in the West—Argue & Cooper, Ontario Men, Have Made a Success in the Grocery and Supply Business—A Merchant Mayor.

Argue & Cooper, whose store is shown in the accompanying illustration, have built up a splendid business in Swift Current, Sask. Situated in the ranching country, they are confronted with conditions quite different from those with which the merchant farther east has to contend and necessarily their business has to adapt itself to the peculiar conditions of the country.

Those conditions render necessary the carrying of a large and varied stock of miscellaneous goods and they also make for large sales and resulting prosperity. This part of the country is not cut up by railroad to the north and south of the C.P.R. main line and consequently it is nothing unusual for ranchers to travel 100 to 200 miles to lay in supplies. Naturally they buy in large quantities and demand guaranteed goods. They want to deal with a firm whose reputation for the strictest honesty is well established, a firm that handles only goods that it is prepared to guarantee. The ranchers' trade and goodwill are worth cultivating. The writer knows of one rancher giving a merchant an order for $216 worth of miscellaneous supplies, allowing him only two hours to have the goods packed for the return trip to the ranch and paying for them in spot cash.

Argue & Cooper cater to the ranching trade and also to the best town customers. They have been in business in Swift Current for five years and they have made a good success of their enterprise.

D. E. Argue is Mayor of Swift Current. He and his partner, W. W. Cooper, are each Ontario men who received their business training in Toronto. Before opening in Swift Current Mr. Argue was connected with the Medicine Hat Trading Co., Medicine Hat, and Mr. Cooper followed ranching.

J. S. DONALDSON INJURED.

Toronto Broker Knocked Down on the Street on Saturday.

An unfortunate accident occurred on Saturday morning, September 19, at the corner of Front and Scott Streets, Toronto, by which J. S. Donaldson, one of the city's best known brokers, was seriously injured. Mr. Donaldson was crossing the street to enter one of the wholesale houses when a heavy lorry going down Scott St. passed rather closely. In passing one of the horses either swerved or shied and struck Mr. Donaldson, the blow knocking him to the pavement where he fell on his face, striking his head severely.

Mr. Donaldson was at once aided by members of the trade in the vicinity but the shock and fall caused a lapse of unconsciousness from which he did not recover until Monday. At the time of writing he was progressing as favorably as could be expected, having enjoyed a good night's rest on Tuesday and hopes are held out for his recovery, though his advanced age, 78, makes the injury a very serious one.

Mr. Donaldson is one of the oldest brokers in Toronto and has been a familiar figure on the street here for many years. Members of the Toronto trade generally are expressing regret at the accident and hoping for a speedy recovery.

QUALITY IN THE GROCERY BUSINESS

A great deal has been said about the value to a merchant of having a reputation for always giving good quality upon everything he handles. There is absolutely no doubt that a reputation of this kind is one of the best assets which a man, particularly in the retail grocery business, could have, for it insures him of the patronage of the class of people which is satisfied to pay good prices for what they buy.

Since the passage of the national pure food law, the consumers of the country have been awakened to the necessity of demanding quality in the food they buy, and the old bait of cut prices has been weakened to a considerable extent, says The Retail Grocer Magazine. The number of quality merchants has increased, while the number of bargain counter merchants has decreased. Consumers are more critical than they have ever been before, and the grocers who have preached quality and value rather than cheapness, have been well repaid. A quality customer is worth as much as two bargain hunting customers any time simply because a quality customer stays with you as long as you give him quality, while the bargain hunting customer goes to the other fellow who may happen to beat your price a few cents.

There is no longer the demand for the cheaper class of goods, and perhaps that is the reason why some who are overstocked on their cheap goods are so willing to advertise them now in order to get rid of them. Such advertising, however, teaches the public that the advertisers do not run quality stores, and these stores soon have to depend upon the bargain hunters' trade to support them. This trade is elusive, however, and it may be their trade to-day and some other cheap merchant's trade to-morrow. We do not believe that any man can build up a profitable trade by advertising goods at cheap prices. When a man gets a reputation for being an advertiser of cheap goods, and a dealer in goods that can be sold cheap, he should not kick if the high-class customers go to a high-class store, but the chances are that he will kick and he will blame some one for losing this trade.

He always blames some one else, be it the association or others who preach quality. He does not stop to consider that he is telling to the world his reputation as a dealer in cheap lines of goods. The moment he advertises standard goods at cheap prices he confesses his failure as a merchant. A man who is a merchant can sell quality goods, but a man who is not a merchant has to resort to cut prices, a plan that has been used as a bait by men who lack the qualities of a merchant in all times and in all climes. If you are going to pay money for advertising, pay it to build up your reputation, and not tear it down. The cut rate grocer is in a worse position than ever before since the passage of the pure food law. The wise consumer is skeptical of cut prices, and the wise merchant helps to make him skeptical. Anybody can sell goods at cut prices, but it takes a merchant to sell goods at a profit.

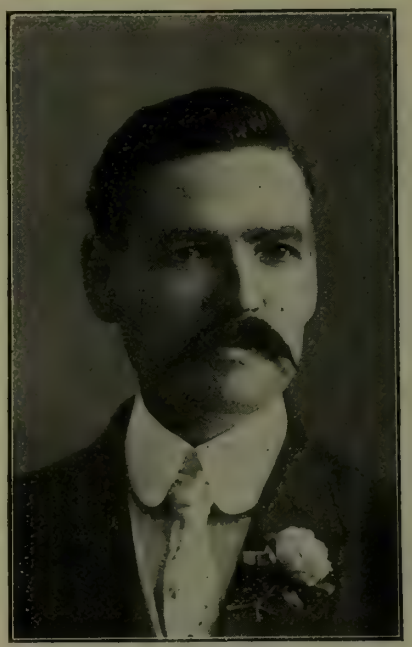
If there are any of our readers who have the false idea that cut prices is the only and true panacea for business ills let them look at the example of price cutters in this city, or in any city, and see what their career has been. We do not speak of every case, nor of isolated cases; there are exceptions to every rule, but we speak in general. Of course, we refer to the dealer who deals exclusively in groceries. He is the man that cannot afford it. The man who sells groceries at cut rates to attract trade to his other departments does not care for his reputation as a grocer, but the man who does deal in groceries exclusively should care. Do you care? — Trade.

A VISITOR FROM B. C.

President of Vancouver Grocers' Association Tells of Work Done on the Coast.

W. J. Andrews, President of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, who has been on a trip east on a visit to his mother in Renfrew for a couple of weeks, was a caller at The Grocer office this week and spoke enthusiastically of the work of the association in his city.

"We have a collection and dead beat system," he says, which works like a charm. The secretary of the association devotes his whole time to this, and to him is due a good deal of its success. The system includes an index, in which 30,000 names practically all the customers in the city are listed. These are arranged so that they can be referred to instantly and information as to their habits of payment is furnished to any member of the association by the secretary in a few moments. "Why yes, the system works admirably." Mr. Andrews says, "and about its immediate advantages, it is leading gradually to the adoption of the cash system.'j "I'm adopting a straight cash system myself, when I get home," said Mr. Andrews, "and I'm going to make it go, or know what's the matter."



W. J. ANDREWS.

President Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association.

"Yes, the association is pretty well organized," he says. "We have 90 out of perhaps 150 grocers, and they are all good fellows. We have a plan to prevent cutting on sugar, which might be interesting to some of you people in the east. By arrangement with the refiners and wholesalers, sugar is charged to the grocer at retail prices. If any member of the association cuts, he loses the rebate, which is paid to the other members. This scheme has been found to work admirably."

Mr. Andrews is full of enthusiasm regarding the future of British Columbia, and is well versed in trade conditions generally on the coast.

KEEPING IN TOUCH.

One of the essentials of success in running a store, wholesale or retail, is keeping in touch with the merchandise.

To be in touch with one's trade, important as it is, is but half. To be in touch with the goods is equally necessary.

Therefore, the wholesaler who plays his part in the modern way sends his buyers into every country and every district where the wares he handles are produced.

They are required to go to the factories where goods are made, to acquaint themselves with processes of production, to know the goods from the raw material to the finished article.

No matter where else he may economize the wholesaler must at all costs keep in touch with the sources where new goods and fresh styles originate.

If he fails in this regard, no effort in other ways will avail to keep him from falling behind in the race.

And every year, to an ever increasing degree, retailers are finding that the store which keeps in touch with the merchandise is getting the cream of the trade.

Only a little handful of big stores in large cities are able to send their representatives to original markets. Yet the retailer in smaller places also must find a way to keep in touch or his share will grow less from year to year.

He must keep in advance of his trade, anticipating their demands. Must learn of new goods while they are new. Shifting fashions must not find him unprepared, with shelves loaded with goods which have gone out of favor. He must lead, not follow.

He cannot live in the same narrow groove all the time, doing the same old thing in the same old way, and not grow into a narrower man.

It pays the retailer, too, to keep in touch.

And the only way to keep in touch with the goods is to go to market at least several times a year.

Drummers and satalogues both are good as far as they go, and both are indispensable to keep one in touch between trips to market. But both fall short in that they do not show the actual goods. —Butler Brothers' Drummer.

John Diprose, one of London's leading grocers, was in Toronto on Tuesday and made a pleasant call at The Grocer office.

Hints and Advice for the Benefit of the Retail Clerk and Salesman—The Secret of Success and Advancement—Sunshiny Methods are Invaluable Aid in Meeting all Classes of Customers—The Place of Enthusiasm in Retail Business.

CHAPTER XVIII.
RETAIL SALESMEN.

Sunshiny salesmanship softens the frostiest buyer.

"Not yet, but soon"—the "near-salesman's" motto—explains the reason why more salesmen measuring calico at eight dollars per week are not earning eighteen hundred dollars a year or more at the silk or dress goods counter. Yet there is room for real salesmanship even behind the calico counter, and the essentials are the same there as anywhere else.

It is an honorable occupation, to be sure; but when a young salesman is content to remain at it longer than a year, his gumption is several degrees below ambition. If he cannot in some manner raise it up a few degrees at a time, until it reaches an ordinary man's thinking and working capacity, he will be rooted there for the remainder of his days.

Many retail salesmen drudge along, satisfied with a mere treadmill existence. "Oh, what's the use?" they argue, "there's no chance in a retail store, anyway."

If there is no chance for you where you are, it is a dead certainty that you are not suited for the work you are doing, and the sooner you get out and give some one else a chance, the sooner will you be giving both yourself and your employer a square deal. As a rule, the salesman's position behind the counter is a pretty fair measure of his capabilities.

Capacity for Managing.

Some salesmen have the capacity to draw molasses from the bung-hole in a barrel without smearing it over the measure and on the floor; they can weigh out a dollar's worth of sugar, and do it so well that the balance is a hair's weight in favor of the customer; but if they were put in charge of the general order-filling department, with several salesmen under them, they would fizzle out completely. They have not the breadth of mind to grasp the requirements of a large position, and they attempt to apply their small conception of trotting from the molasses-barrel to the sugar-box to the more important matter of mastering many details. It can't be done; and naturally they fail.

As the retail salesman broadens his position, he asumes new responsibilities, and he must change his viewpoint to fit the expanding scope of his greater undertaking. Floaters, life-buoys, and danger-ropes are all right for timid surf-bathers, but to swim out into broad, deep water requires physical courage and well-seasoned powers of endurance. Inability to leave the shore line marks the man who would better stay in close to shore, where little boats are safe.

There is, oh, so much for a salesman to be, to do, to get, to earn, to try, in every retail establishment, that there is little excuse and less hope for the man who says there is no chance.

I have no desire in my heart to say one thing derogatory to your position, no matter how humble it may be.

The "Near" Salesman.

The man whom I am after, whether he is at the five-cent counter or taking orders that run up into the hundreds, is that self-important, small-calibre "near-salesman" who so thoroughly neglects his customers that they grow chilly in his presence, even though the day is hot. Few retail shoppers escape frequent experiences of that kind, and it is safe to say that no one ever becomes a better customer of the house where salespeople of that stamp are tolerated. The house may be a good one, but one goes away feeling that they do not appreciate his trade.

Now, if you "near-salesmen" don't like what I am writing about you and to you, don't look at me. Get your eyes open so that you can see yourself—that is the first sight to look at.

What are you cutting up about? Putting on airs with a twelve-dollar-a-week position! That's what every one who patronizes your counter is trying to figure out.

Your house does not pay you to strut around like a farm-yard bantam rooster. All that your customers want from you, and have a right to expect, is courteous, business-like attention, without frills of any kind.

I want to get you mad. That's why I'm using unceremonious language in developing your picture. When a man gets good and angry because some one has told him the truth about himself, he can generally be depended upon to go out and "clean-up" in a thorough, wholesome manner. If he makes a good job of it, it won't be long before you hear of him doing something of real account.

I never saw an uppish salesman in my life in whose salesmanship I had any confidence. A "smart" salesman is a man whom no one cares to have much to do with.

Getting Inoculated.

When a man becomes inoculated with the germs of true salesmanship, he gets it in his blood, muscles, head, and soul, all over from head to foot, and it makes a sensible, industrious man of him,

Carry a smile through your work. Whenever a salesman cannot be sunshiny with his customers he is in need of a liver tonic.

"Blessed is he who, having found his own work, clutches it, clings to it, directly, consecutively, and always."

Therein lies the secret of accomplishment. When a salesman has little or no conception of the obligations his position imposes upon him, to say nothing of lack of desire for advancement, then it is that soft platitudes and high-sounding phrases are of no avail.

This book is for negative salesmen, not positive ones. The man who is surrounded and choked up with weeds of indolence, neglect, and carelessness is the one I want to reach.

Pulling weeds loosens the roots and injures the growing plant for the moment; but soon it lifts its head and takes on new growth in the free soil, becoming sturdy and eventually fruitful, instead of a weak, withered, inanimate thing almost crushed out by the weeds that were gradually sapping its life.

The Secret of Advancement.

The safest and surest way for the retail salesman to advance from a lowly position to a better one is by performing his daily work in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. His present surroundings may not be congenial, but all that can be changed if he will set his mind on something better and strive hard to reach it. Wishing will not do it. He must work and be patient.

Begin by being polite and obliging to every customer that visits your counter, whether you think there is a chance for a sale or not. Make it plain that it is not only no trouble for you to show goods, but a pleasure. Make your customers feel at home with you on the instant by an immediate willingness to serve them intelligently. Create desire by making tactful, helpful suggestions.

There is considerable difference between the salesman that attempts to force facts down the buyer's throat and the one that offers information in reasonable, smooth, and pleasing doses. Do not thrust your ideas upon your customers, but in an easy, natural and pleasing way attract their sympathy and secure their confidence. You will then experience little trouble in making sales, even where desire is totally lacking, as indicated on the surface.

Inspiring Confidence.

Get over the idea that where there is no desire there is no chance to make a sale, and that almost everyone entering a retail store has his mind fully made up on what he intends to purchase. Nothing could be farther from the real facts. The average shopper is glad to have suggestions when he knows they are honestly and intelligently given. But the whole matter rests on confidence. You can do nothing to aid a customer in making selections until you have first secured his good-will by that indefinable something in your manner that leads him to believe that you are to be trusted, and that you really wish to be of service to him.

It is important also that you do not fool yourself into believing that your employers are unmindful of your presence in their establishment, and that whether you are serving them ill or well makes no difference, because either way it escapes their notice.

That mistaken idea is at the foundation of many a clerk's failure. Depend upon it, your weekly sales are closely scanned, and your general deportment keenly observed. That you do not receive periodical lectures from your superiors, or that you are not discharged, as you might have expected, is not good evidence that you are not being watched. On the contrary, every move you make is mentally or otherwise recorded.

If you are a half-hearted, go-as-you-please salesman, the chances are that you would have been discharged long ago, but for the fact that your employers know from experience how hard it is to get capable, trustworthy salespeople, and that the best they can hope for is a fair average.

It matters not so much to your employers to which class you belong, so long as the average remains good, but it is of the utmost importance to yourself. If you are below the average, the responsibility rests solely with you to get on the other side of the dead-line. That there is plenty of room goes without saying; it only remains for you to show your real worth, and the transfer will take place without your giving notice that you are ready to move up.

There are as many opportunities for advancement in the retail as in the wholesale branch of any business; but if the wholesale salesman conducted himself as thousands of retail salesmen are doing every day all over the land, he would last just about one trip, and that would end his career on the road.

Selling at Home and Abroad.

The traveling salesman goes out and digs up business, while his retail brother stays at home to receive it. In either case the chances for advancement are about even.

The average traveling salesman does not miss many towns without making sales of some sort; but hundreds of prospective buyers are turned away from retail stores every day without being properly waited upon, and this results in a serious loss of business to the house where indifferent salesmen are employed.

How many customers visit your counter or department every month and go away without buying anything, is a question for you to decide. One thing is certain to the man who is familiar with both branches of the trade, and that is that many sales are lost at retail in large establishments every day from lack of attention and proper selling ability, such as is absolutely necessary on the part of the traveling salesman.

If every retail salesman could take a trip on the road for a few weeks, he would return to his counter and increase his sales fifty per cent. the first month thereafter.

Hints for Clerks.

The best way for a retail salesman to decide on how to treat his customers is to pay an occasional visit to other retail houses for purchases, and to take particular notice of the treatment accorded him by the salesmen in each place, and the effect it has upon him. Then he should remember to put himself in the place of the salesman who made the best impression on him, whenever his customers come to buy.

When a prospective buyer approaches you, who has just been treated in a cold-blooded manner by an inefficient, neglected clerk in a competitor's store, and you greet him with a pleasant smile and obligingly show him everything he wants to see, and especially something that he will be much interested in, you will generally succeed in making a sale, and your new-found customer will go aawy feeling that he has done well to change his trade from the cold-blooded house.

Now, Mr. Retail Salesman, stop and give this matter some thought. Remember that while behind the counter in your employer's store, you take the place of your employer to every customer with whom you come in contact. Also remember that in other stores, and perhaps at other counters in the one in which you are employed, there are plenty of salesmen who are cold and "chesty" to their customers, and that if you can manage to be never out of sorts with any customer, you gain a signal advantage over your grouchy neighbors.

Which salesman do you think it will best pay you to copy—the one who made the best impression on you on your own purchasing tour, or the one who, with a cold look and an impudent sneer, freezes the very buying instinct out of every possible customer that comes within his reach?

Do not think that because your neighboring salesman is discourteous and neglectful of his trade without losing his position, you can afford to be that way whenever you feel like it. Your worst competitor is yourself. The most important battles to fight are from within, and not without.

Incidents in the Fight.

By always being pleasant to your customers, great and small, by showing your appreciation of their trade, and by interesting yourself in the things you know will interest them, you can soon out-distance your ill-natured neighbor in the race for success. A continuation of the same kind of treatment which puts him out of the race will, also, soon show results in the fight you are making for promotion.

You can be sure of one thing—if you try your best to be friendly and accommodating to all customers and show them you appreciate them, you will be doing all that any one could possibly do to get and hold their trade, all that was ever done by those who were once struggling as you are for a foothold, but who now enjoy high-salaried positions and a share in the profits in the house where you are employed.

Every successful retail merchant started where you are and won out by being faithful to his trust.

Your very biggest club with which to despatch all doubt as to your advancement is the good-will and confidence of those above you in authority, and the friendly feeling of every one with whom you have dealings of any sort. With this, a thorough knowledge of your particular line of goods, and a careful study of the duties of the man just ahead of you in a more responsible position, you will find you are in mighty good shape to hold your own against all newcomers, and to be a candidate for promotion on the first opportunity that arises. There is no such thing as good salesmanship without enthusiasm. I know we have what we call "near-salesmen," but they do not possess that precious quality.

The Place of Enthusiasm.

I do not believe you can separate enthusiasm and true salesmanship. In fact, enthusiasm is the life of salesmanship.

The salesman who is enthusiastic in the sense that he pays more attention to the sporting edition of the daily papers than to his customers, who hands out a yard and a half of unbleached cotton and a mile and a half of self-importance for twelve cents, does not know the meaning of enthusiasm.

And I want to say to you men who profess to be salesmen, but who are just plain every-day shams, that I do not intend to lose a single chance to pour hot shot and grape and canister into your ranks. You are the gentlemen I am after.

Now, if the sham salesmen who happen to encounter these lines want to continue to be shams in the open, I say, "Go it, go it, boys"; but if you members of the profession who are only "near-salesmen" posing as the genuine article want to continue so to pose, I will brand you as no-accounts until you either reform or renounce your faith in the profession of salesmanship, and start to look for some other kind of employment.

Having it Out.

Somebody has a right to say a few things along these lines, and I propose to have it out with your class before I get through with you, whether you interpose any objections or not. I want to talk to you men who have made your sham pretences in the world of salesmanship and drawn pay for work wretchedly done, keeping a real salesman out of the game that you are trying to play. You have been at it long enough to be a stumbling-block and a disgrace to the science of the greatest of all professions.

I can stand anything better than I can stand a sham or shirking salesman. I always did have a hatred for near-things, humbugs, and cheats, and of all the humbugs that ever plied a profession, the "near-salesman" is the "humbuggest."

When a man who thinks he is a salesman gets a little swell-headedness, a little "I'm-it-ness," and a little of almost everything, and is made up out of a hundred different sorts of negative things, and attains a little twelve-dollar-a-week position, then he is a first-class humbug in every sense of the word.

With your salesmanship right, with the fountain clear, the stream will be clear. With a good tree the fruit will be good. And I declare to you, "near-salesmen," that the hardest work a man ever tried to do is to be a salesman without salesmanship; to be a good salesman with a shallow nature and a sham heart.

Softening Sunshine.

There's no denying the fact that every retail salesman is at times sorely tried with people who look at the world through blue glasses, but the professional salesman knows that sunshiny salesmanship softens the frostiest buyer. It is difficult to keep patient while waiting on a grumpy customer, but it pays in the end to keep your temper, even with the most obstinate and surly.

The salesman who is intent on achieving the greatest selling results literally burrows into the business of selling goods. He must have a nose for sales-making as true and keen as the scent of the bloodhound. That is enthusiasm. It can be developed. Fall in love with your work, and you cannot help becoming enthusiastic.

Fall in Love With the Work.

Enthusiasm is a soul quality springing from knowledge and confidence. The more knowledge you have, the greater becomes your confidence, and your enthusiasm increases in the same proportion.

Look on the bright side of things. Nothing so paralyzes enthusiasm as pessimism.

Next to honesty, enthusiasm is the most essential quality in successful retail salesmanship.

Arguments are of no avail, and tact is worse than wasted, if you do not present your subject with all the enthusiasm you can muster.

The listless answers and hesitating manner of "near-salesmen" cause all shoppers to wonder why these men are not displayed in the show-cases in front of them in place of the goods they represent.

Put the goods on top of the case and crawl inside, Mr. Near Salesman. Almost any article of merchandise in your department is able to plead its own case much more eloquently and effectively than can you, if you will give it half a chance.

Who has not been angered and driven away in disgust by having their goods banged down in front of him and the price hurled in his teeth by a dyspeptic salesman with a makes-little-difference-to-me-whether-you-take-it-or-leave-it expression, who, believing his whole mission is performed, stands glaring at him, waiting for his decision?

THE NAME SINKS IN.

Perhaps no fact has been more thoroughly proven than the fact that the name of a well-advertised article records itself on the mind unconsciously, whether the reader will or no. When an advertiser talks up his goods to an audience composed of the people who are destined to handle them, his name becomes as familiar to the trade as are the names of certain soaps and pills to the public generally. The traveler carrying samples of goods well advertised in the trade press has an easier and more profitable time than the man selling unknown goods.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Sept. 24.

At the time of our last report, the condition of the pastures throughout the country was very bad indeed, but now, owing to the continuance of the dry weather, it has reached an acute stage.

The situation is a very serious one and farmers are hard pressed to supply water for their stock, to say nothing of the needs of pastures. Cattle are running about bellowing in a wild endeavor to find a drinking hole. This deplorable condition and the forest fires, which are jeopardizing life and property, have placed the farmers in a very serious position. Considerable discussion has arisen of late, regarding the status of Canadian cheese, in the English markets. The statement was made by a Canadian newspaper, that our cheese was a necessary factor in the markets on the other side, judging from certain indications which pointed in that direction. This statement, however, did not seem to find favor in England, and one gentleman who evidently does not want us to entertain a too lofty opinion of ourselves, took exception to it.

It might be pointed out, before going farther, that the reason for making the statement was based upon the fact, that the English buyers have been taking our cheese at fancy prices when they could have obtained the amount required in other quarters. From this, it was naturally conjectured, that our cheese was so much preferable to other makes that they were willing to pay better prices than they were obliged to pay for the products of other countries. This seemed a logical conclusion, but obviously has not been received with grace by the buyers on the other side. When prices were high here the British buyers made them higher by buying, to be held for their account. At the same time the availability of New Zealand and Cheshire cheese was suggested in no unmistakable way, to the Canadian exporters. This overt, but gentle threat failed to accomplish its purpose, and prices continued to soar. The whole thing seems to be in the superior keeping quality of Canadian early fall make. This fact predisposed the English buyer in our favor, and seems to be the reason why he is willing to pay a better price for our cheese, when he can get apparently as good cheese at a more advantageous price.

Receipts of cheese for the week ending Sept. 19 were 82,349 boxes against 67,641 boxes for the same period last year. This is very creditable in view of the depleted condition of the pastures. For the season up to Sept. 19 the receipts were 1,402,804 boxes against 1,564,551 boxes for the corresponding length of time last year. These figures show that the production up to the present time is 161,747 boxes less than last year. With favorable weather and a continuance of the gains which were being made it is safe to conjecture the yield would have been ahead of last year's. Westerns are quoted at 12⅞c to 13c and Eastern at 12⅝c to 12¾c. Exports of cheese from Montreal last week amounted to 69,580 boxes as against 60,675 boxes for the previous week and 59,520 boxes for the corresponding week of last year. There were also shipped from Quebec 1,653 boxes, making total exports for the week of 71,239 boxes. Total shipments from Montreal since May 1, 1,217,846 boxes, as against 1,373,370 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total shipments exports since May 1, 1,264,177 boxes as compared with 45,830 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Total exports since May 1, 1,246,177 boxes as compared with 1,419,200 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

There is a considerable amount of uncertainty about the butter market, just at the present time, owing to the new complexion affairs have assumed, due to the much reduced make. This condition of affairs also exists in England, and has resulted in a lull in the export business. At the present moment, the stocks of butter held in the city are large but as much of this is held on English account, the residue will in all probability be only sufficient to supply home requirements. There is a possibility of the English requirements falling below the expected demand and then someone is going to be left with top heavy supplies. This possibility becomes all the more menacing owing to the favorable reports arriving from Australia and New Zealand. At the present time, there is not much taking place in the English markets with Australian and New Zealand products, owing to poor supplies arriving.

Receipts of butter for the week ending Sept. 19 were 10,481 packages against 10,022 packages for the corresponding week. This is an exceptionally good record in the face of the prevailing weather conditions. The receipts for the season up to Sept. 19 were 318,692 packages against 316,088 packages for the same period of last year. Prices rule at 25½c for finest creamery in round lots and 26c in a jobbing way.

Exports of butter last week amounted to 2,365 packages, as compared with 1,612 packages for the previous week and 2,579 packages for the corresponding date last year. Total exports since May 1, 76,647 packages as compared with 65,261 packages for the corresponding period of last year.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, Sept. 24.

The need of some action being taken to bring the interest of Canadian farmers back to the matter of hog raising has not been more evident from the packers' standpoint for a long time than at present.

This week everything is favorable for large business at good prices both at home and abroad. The English market is reported short of bacon and the price has advanced materially, ruling from 66 to 68 shillings. The Danes have not kept up their usual large shipments for several weeks, and with little going forward from the United States and practically nothing from Canada supplies have been eaten up and the market is short. This has shoved the price up a couple of notches and at present there is every opening for good business for Canadian packers. The packers are willing enough to do the business all right, but the old trouble, no hogs, handicaps them and thus a golden opportunity is lost.

Packers seem to be doing their part to bring out the hogs. $6.75 continues to be offered generally for f.o.b. shipments and this should do the work if there were any hogs to come. The fact that they are not forthcoming at this price is surely an evidence that there are very few in the country. The few that are being shipped are of very light quality and not at all satisfactory. As a result the packing houses are running at half time or less. Some factories are not killing at all, and are disposing of their stock of the less choice cuts to parties, who would not look at these for a moment earlier in the summer.

If present conditions continue, pork products will be dear food this winter.

Advices from Denmark state that shipments will probably be light from that market for two or three weeks. This will tend to keep the British market stiff and receptive for Canadian bacon. If a supply of hogs could be secured there would still be a chance for a term of good business but chances are not at all encouraging.

Conditions in the U. S. markets have been rather more quiet the past week, as is evidenced in the following summary from the New York Journal of Commerce.

"There has been a sort of bull market on provisions the past week without activity or much advance. The bullishness has been on the near deliveries, which the packers have held up in order to work off their high-priced stocks without loss, and at the same time induce the speculators to buy the late options, because they were at a discount. At the same time packers were talking bullish on January products because of the corn crop shortage and prospective higher prices until mid-week, when improvement in this prospect was so great that it proved a bear argument rather than a bull one in sympathy with the sharp and continued decline in corn. At the same time the packers withdrew the support of active operation in the near months and let the market fall back until near the close, when they rallied it again and ran in the shorts made on the decline, but the cash market has shown very little improvement, here at least, in any branch of the trade, though Chicago has kept shouting about the good cash demand which was confined chiefly to the Cotton States' demand for bacon and to the interior demand for lard, which it is drawing from Chicago in many sections because of the unusually light yield of lard, owing to the fact that few hogs have been fed with corn at ruling high prices this season."

PROVISIONS—Not much change has come over the complexion of the market during the week. The continued warm weather has kept to the front the lines prominent during the summer. Price quotations remain unchanged and pretty much the same conditions prevail. Packing houses are running short. Hogs are very slow in coming in, and supplies are in consequence rather scarce. Inquiries are frequent enough, but some orders going out are short on certain lines.

"MAKING BOTH ENDS MEET"

is a problem for most housewives in these times of pinched purses.

You can help "the woman behind the pocket-book" by telling her about

SHREDDED WHEAT

It contains more real nutriment than beefsteak or eggs, is more easily digested and costs much less. Two Biscuits (heated in the oven) with milk and a little fruit and a cup of coffee will supply all the nourishment needed for a half day's work at a cost of five or six cents.

Try it yourself and then tell your customers about it.

No other grocer makes a larger profit on Shredded Wheat than YOU do — no "deals," no premiums, no "sugar," no bribes. The same old policy — A Square Deal for a Square Dealer.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Strong Outlook in Both Markets—Flour Exceedingly Strong With Good Export Demand and Business.

The feature of these markets this week is the strong outlook in both flour and cereals. In Ontario, business in flour is exceedingly good and prices on winter wheat grades have advanced in consequence. In Quebec and the east, the situation continues strong, though so much activity is not in evidence.

Export demand also is more in evidence this week and considerable business is being done. Indeed the whole situation is very encouraging, with good outlook for a splendid winter's business both local and export.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—The flour situation remains practically unchanged since our last report. There is, however, a small but steady improvement to nate. Stocks are not large and prices remain firm. There continues to be some inquiry from foreign points, but this has not culminated in any buying yet.

FEED—Demand for bran is good, and supplies available are very limited, so dealers are not pushing business. Sources of supply which have been cut off are now becoming productive, so the tension will soon be removed. Shorts and middlings are also in good demand and prices are unchanged.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The market is strong and booming with good demand both locally and for export. Shipments have been made during the week to South Africa, Bristol, London and elsewhere. The strong all-round demand has caused a firming up in winter wheat, which has advanced 20 to 30 cents.

A SUCCESSFUL AD.

A story now traveling the rounds of the press is credited to Lillian B. Hill, the well-known writer of humorous advertisements, who said at a dinner a short time ago:

"Advertising lends itself to almost any imaginable purpose. For instance, at Sea Beach, the other week, a confectioner found himself with a great number of stale tarts on hand. He rid himself of these tarts, and of all his fresh ones besides, by inserting the following advertisement in the local press:

"'Personal—A young man of agreeable exterior and ample means desires to form the acquaintance of a lady. Object matrimony. Beauty and wealth are not so much in requisition as a good character and an amiable disposition. Young ladies who may feel inclined to look with favor upon this young man are hereby asked to call at Dough's confectionery on Atlantic Avenue at three o'clock this afternoon and, as a means of identification, to purchase and eat a tart.'

"A few minutes after three that day Dough's tart shelves were quite bare."

E. J. Cahill, general merchant, Jersey Mills, Que., is dead.

G. S. Potts, general merchant, Duncans, B.C., died last week.

How often have you sold soda biscuits to a customer only to have her come back and complain that they weren't fresh? It was not your fault, of course, but that didn't seem to help matters much, did it? There was just a little slackening of confidence noticeable that made you feel rather unpleasant. Why not try and avoid such risks by stocking with goods you can positively recommend? You can always rely on

MANUFACTURERS' MEETING IN MONTREAL.

Questions of Importance Discussed—First Meeting of Biscuit and Confectioners' Section.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association met for the 37th time at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, last week. Many questions of paramount importance to the manufacturers of Canada were discussed. The meetings were largely attended and every section of trade in Canada was represented.

The meeting was presided over by Hon. J. D. Rolland, president of the Association. He was assisted by John Hendry, of Vancouver, vice-president, and G. M. Murray, Toronto. The magnificent growth of the Association was pointed out and it was also shown that there were yet some 500 manufacturers available for membership. The treasurer, George Booth, presented the financial sheet of the Association, showing a favorable balance.

The president in his address referred to the general revival of business as evidenced by returning confidence. Throughout the troubled period Canada had perhaps suffered the least on account of the activity in railway building in the West and the tide of immigration which is flowing into that country. The president drew attention to the enormous amount of money being expended in the development of transportation lines. A menace to Canada's control of her own freight carriage was shown in the way of construction of railroads leading to the American boundary which acted as feeders for the great American railroads. The preservation of the forests next came in for some attention. The vastness of Canada's wealth in her forests was pointed out as a great national asset and it was urged that measures be adopted to save for Canadians this great possession.

The question of pulpwood was involved in the last discussion and the president pronounced in favor of the total prohibition of its exportation to the United States. The value of a cord of pulpwood increased many fold when manufactured into pulp here.

The tobacco industry was next touched upon and various methods of enlarging it were suggested. The precarious condition of the woolen trade was alluded to and a higher protective tariff was considered essential to its rejuvenation.

Following this there was a strong appeal for a greater and more comprehensive system of technical education. The value of this in a young country like Canada was shown. The discussion of this subject culminated in the voting of a grant of $5,000 for the furtherance of the work.

Reports regarding the tariff were read and much talk ensued regarding abuses of the dumping clause, showing how American manufacturers had succeeded in evading it. The appointment of additional trade commissioners was urged in Great Britain.

Several sectional meetings were held, the one perhaps of most interest to the grocery trade being the confectionery and biscuit manufacturers' section, which has been recently organized and met for the first time. The meeting was not important from a business aspect, as it was of a social nature and provided an opportunity for those engaged in this line of manufacturing to meet one another in an informal way.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Peaches and Grapes the Centre of Fruit Lines—Cranberries Have Made Their Appearance—Idaho Prunes a New Line—Excellent Sweet Potatoes—Plenty of Tomatoes—Whitefish Scarce.

If there is one line that is more than free in supply that line is grapes. Green and blue grapes in car lots are going out daily from the Niagara Peninsula to the nearby Canadian markets, and even Montreal is displaying this line. Prices, too, are less than reasonable. One packer, at least, is showing his business acumen in looking ahead for future business by putting up choice bunches of assorted varieties in convenient and neat packages ready for the table. California fruit has been arriving in choice packages right along, and this fact, no doubt, has much to do with the better price obtained for imported fruit.

Peaches are much in demand at present and though supplies are free prices keep up. The Niagara district appears to supply the whole of Canada with fruit outside of portions of the Northwest, but with the demand growing larger every year the limit of what the fruit belt can produce will be reached very soon. Take London alone, about six cars a day are sent to that city to be distributed to nearby points. Toronto takes eight and ten cars daily and if the cars of bananas, watermelons, oranges and lemons, which are unable to get into the market there, be added there must be a daily average of fifteen cars of fruit disposed of in that city. Montreal, of course, takes a great deal of all kinds of fruit and being a shipping port the amount of business handled could not so easily be reckoned. Winnipeg and the West are beginning to dip deeply into the Niagara fruit basket and the Government recently appointed inspectors at Fort William to examine all fruit going through to the West.

Some splendid apples of the "Wealthy" variety are seen on the various markets. Pears and plums are getting scarce. Bananas have declined 25 cents both in Montreal and Toronto.

New celery and lettuce are offered in the vegetable line and the potato season is opening to good business. Pickling lines are in demand.

Oysters are being asked for all over the country and the fresh water fish are in much demand, but are very scarce. Sea lines are freer in supply and smoked and dried lines are exhibited everywhere.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Peaches are somewhat lower, now ruling at $1.25 to $1.50. Verdelli lemons are also lower, having declined $1.75 and are now offered at $3.25. Bananas are cheaper for best grades by 25c. Blueberries are practically off the market, none being offered. The best grades of canning peaches are a little firmer. There are no blackberries being offered this week, the season being over. Grapes are in good supply at low figures. The demand for fruit during the week has not been very brisk. Other prices are the same as last quotations.

VEGETABLES—There is a fairly general advance to be noted in the vegetable market this week. The tomato season is coming to a close and supplies are not arriving in such quantities as for some time past. Celery is stronger now, being quoted for the best grades at 75c. Lettuce is quoted at 50c and is rather scarce at that. Beets have gone forward 5c. Pumpkins are cheaper at $1 a dozen instead of 16c to 20c apiece. Locally, trade is very dull. Other prices rule the same as last week. Bonsecours market has not seen the same volume of trade as formerly and a dealer there said, "The class of people who frequent the place are different than in the old days. Those who come now are not so profitable as they might be," and continuing he said "The scarcity of ships in the harbor is also a source of great loss to the dealers in this part of the town."

FISH—Haddock and cod are scarce this week, especially the former. This condition is the result of the appearance of the dogfish along the coast. Lake trout are in good supply and fine quality. Dore and pike are beginning to come in more freely and prices are a little lower. Halibut is in good supply, also haddies, kippers and bloaters. New Labrador herring is arriving and is of good quality. Bulk oysters are in good demand and supply. Trade has been very good during the week.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Peaches and grapes have the call and are still very plentiful. The former line hold their price well, it being almost impossible to get choice peaches below the dollar mark. Grapes, however, are easier in price, and may be had from 15c a basket. Some choice varieties of table grapes are now put up by fruit men in the Niagara district in neat wood and cardboard boxes. This shows that there are some live men about. No doubt the experiment will pay. California Tokay grapes are coming in and are in a class by themselves. Plums and pears are scarcer and are firming up in price. Some choice plums from Idaho have arrived, and from the bloom on the fruit must have been packed by experts. They certainly give pointers to packers in these parts. California prunes are expected before the week is out. Cape Cod cranberries are here and are sound and firm. All other berries are off the market. The past season was a good one for blackberries and huckleberries. Apples of better quality are beginning to come in.

VEGETABLES—The warm weather of the past several weeks has brought along a great quantity of tomatoes and they are easy at about 15c a basket. Some choice late second growth celery and lettuce is being offered and other lines are free in supply. The preserving and pickling season is in full swing and the popular lines of vegetables for this purpose are much in demand.

Sweet potatoes are improving in quality and Jerseys have the biggest call. Virginia sweets can be had for less money, but the stock is inferior to the Jerseys. Canadian onions are now being offered in bag lots. The potato season is again becoming active and St. Lawrence market and Colborne St. present a much busier appearance than during the summer months.

FISH—There is not enough fresh water whitefish arriving to meet the demand for this line. The sea lines however, are coming in freely and are bought up, too. Other fresh lines are sound and of splendid quality, though not so plentiful as one might wish. Sturgeon is actually very scarce. Perch and trout among the fresh water lines, are easier in price, and so are bluefins and mackerel. Sturgeon, sea salmon and pike are firmer. The dried and smoked lines are being inquired about, but are not yet in brisk demand.

WATCHING WESTERN FRUIT SHIPMENTS.

The staff of Dominion fruit inspectors has been increased for this season by new appointments. An inspector will be stationed at Port Arthur and Fort William to watch shipments to points between the Soo and Winnipeg. It is intended to give particular attention to shipments in bond, via the Niagara river. Shippers using this route are warned by the Department of Agriculture that it may be necessary to detain cars at the frontier in order to make a proper inspection.

HOW A TRAVELER SAVES "QUARTERS."

The season when Fall Fairs abound is not a pleasant one for the commercial traveler. Not only are the hotels crowded and accommodation inadequate, but it is always a source of annoyance to the knight of the grip when he is lining up to pay for his meal at the small country hotel and has to pay 40c or 50c while the farmers in front of him and behind him are only taxed 25c. There is one traveler, however, for a well-known Toronto oil firm who has recently adopted the plan of passing to the hotel clerk as he comes out of the dining room the sum of 25c. One day last week in an eastern country hotel as he put his quarter down the proprietor remarked:

"Here, you're a traveler aren't you?"

"No, I'm a farmer," he replied, "just for times like these. I am not going to pay 50c when the man beside me, who ate twice as much as I did, is only charged a quarter."

The proprietor smiled and the traveler passed on.

FACTS ABOUT GROCERIES

Information of Interest to Grocers and Clerks—How Ginger is Raised and Prepared.

Ginger in the quantity produced and consumed probably ranks next in importance to pepper among spices used by man. It is a pungent, aromatic spice, largely used in confectionery, as a dessert dish by itself, and in medicines. This plant, indigenous to Asia, has been introduced into many tropical countries, where it flourishes under cultivation. A large amount is grown in India, but Jamaica now ranks high as a producing country, and Jamaica ginger is a regular trade term. Besides the East and West Indies, British West Africa, Queensland, Siam, China and Brazil are producing countries. Siamese and Chinese ginger are identical, but are from another plant, reaching a height of four or five feet. It is quite possible that zingiber is grown to some extent as well, as some of the so-called Chinese ginger, preserved in jars, is reported to be the preserved young shoots of an edible bamboo, though this seems doubtful, as the ginger plant is so common.

Heat, moisture, and a good soil are the plant's main requirements, or it is quite a tropical subject. It needs a rainfall of 800 to 1,000 inches per annum, although it is grown in some districts where the fall is as low as 150 to 200 inches a year; but where the rainfall is not sufficiently well distributed, irrigation answered well. The soil cannot be too good for ginger, which is rather an exhausting crop.

Like Potato Planting.

Ginger planting is much like potato planting. In March or April the divided tubers or fingers, each containing an "eye," are planted in trenches in the prepared soil about a foot apart. Cultivating the soil is carried on, and its needs must be supplied regularly while the plant is in growth. It is a grass or reed-like plant, reaching a height of four or five feet, and the plantation when in full blossom is an attractive sight. The blossoming takes place in September, and in the following December-January the crop is ready for digging. The flowers wither and die, and then the foliage and stems follow suit. This is the time when the root is fully developed and fit for lifting.

The swollen roots, or rather rhizomes, as they really are, are dug up with a fork; this must be done with care so as not to break or bruise the "hands." The tubers are piled in heaps, the small, fibrous roots are taken off, and the soil is removed. This must be done speedily before the soil dries, or the ginger will not preserve its white color. It is then thrown into a tank of water preparatory to peeling.

Peeling and Curing.

Peeling ginger is a process requiring practice on the part of the laborers. The "hands" are carefully peeled with a narrow-bladed knife, and special care is required to do the portions between the "fingers." The importance of proper peeling will be seen from the following quotation:—

"Examination of a transverse section of ginger will show that there is an outer striated skin, under which there are numerous oil cells, the oil cells being numerous at the bud points. The oil obtained from these cells in specimens obtained fresh from the ground is almost colorless, very pungent, and exceedingly aromatic. It becomes yellow very quickly, on exposure to the air, and even upon drying, without removal of the epidermis, its delicate aroma is found to be fleeting. On drying the ginger, the contents of these cells appear as a yellow, pitchy mass. As this dark layer is the seat of the greatest amount of oil and resin cells, it will readily be seen that the deeper the peeling so much more of these substances will be carried away with the epidermis and more cells opened from which these principles may exude."

After peeling, the ginger is again placed in clean water and very thoroughly washed. If the roots are left to soak in water they lose some of their aroma, and if washed in running water they are cured lighter in color.

Fats and Oils Defined.

Few consumers and a considerable number of handlers know but little of what the different oils and fats in ordinary use are made from. The following definitions will be of interest to those who have not given the matter thought.

Oleo oil is the oil pressed out of the choicest fats in the beef, after having been rendered.

Oleo stearine is rendered beef fat from which the oil has been pressed.

Lard stearine is the solid portion of prime steam lard from which the oil has been pressed.

Extra winter strained lard oil is pressed from choice prime steam lard.

Extra lard oil is pressed from steam lard of an inferior quality, and is used in the manufacture of lubricants.

No. 1 lard oil is pressed from choice yellow hog grease, and is used in keeping dies cool.

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Chicago may follow example set in New York where manufacture and sale of inflammable and explosive liquid stove polishes is forbidden on account of the dangerous nature of this material when used by housekeepers.

A recommendation has been introduced into Chicago City Council calling attention to repeated accidents and a recent horrible death in Chicago from this cause and calling attention also to protection from like accidents, secured by ordinance in New York City.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish which are always safe in the hands of the user. They please the housekeeper too. Good profit in them besides

Variety is the Spice of Life

IT is change which relieves the monotony of existence and adds to the enjoyment of both work and play. In the matter of reading, Noah Porter, the eminent American philosopher, once said, "No man can read with profit that which he cannot learn to read with pleasure." The October edition of the Busy Man's Magazine is so varied in contents and entertaining in character that it will afford profit and pleasure to all. Procure a copy and you will be thoroughly well satisfied to become a permanent reader of this popular periodical.

DWIGHT'S BAKING SODA

"To Sell the Best"

This motto is one that every grocer catering to trade he desires to retain should bear constantly in mind.

The housekeepers' good opinion is worth dollars and cents to him. Every housekeeper and cook prides herself on her baking.

"COW BRAND" BAKING SODA

is a guarantee to her that she has the best, purest, strongest and most satisfactory baking soda made.

It is good policy to stock it.

Every jobber in Canada sells it.

A Safe Platform For The Merchant

Political platforms and policies are being much discussed this fall. The merchant is always interested in a "platform" or method that will help him to do more business. There is no retailer so big or so little that he can afford to overlook studying schemes for improvement.

Handle Canadian Canners' Fruits and Vegetables

and you will be standing on a progressive platform. There isn't a single unsound plank in it. Our Factories are located in the choicest districts. Sanitary and successful methods are a scientific study with us. The result is Canned Goods that would grace the King's table.

ORDER FROM YOUR JOBBER:

BRANDS:—"Canada First" (Aylmer), "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe" (Bowlby), "Auto" (Canadian Canners), "Kent," "Lynnvalley" (Simcoe), "Maple Leaf" (Delhi), "Lion" (Boulter), "Thistle" (Brighton), "Grand River" (Lalor), "White Rose" (Lakeport).

THE CANNED GOODS OF QUALITY

You cannot get away from the fact that quality counts. Results prove it. A buyer looks to be satisfied with his purchase before everything else. The price may make a little difference but often it does not. He knows that the only way he is going to secure and hold trade is by giving satisfaction, therefore he demands quality as a first consideration. And the class that ask for quality before everything else is getting larger every day.

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

Canned Goods and Vegetables

are the best you can offer in canned goods. We say it—our customers say it—and say it most emphatically because they repeat their orders, and repeat orders is the most convincing kind of an argument.

OLD HOMESTEAD Brand of Canned Goods and Vegetables are honestly prepared. Every possible method is employed to insure their cleanliness and purity. We insist on quality first, last and always. Order a sample shipment; you'll be satisfied with the results.

All good jobbers carry OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND
All the best class of customers demand it.

Do You Know of Any Better Way to Build Up a Business than by Selling High-Grade Goods ?

Thousands of grocers in Canada have found by experience that prominently displayed in their store helps wonderfully. This is due to the belief on the part of the consumer that "SALADA" is the best value in tea. Hence the fact that the grocer who sells "SALADA" quickly becomes known in his community as "a man who sells the best goods" and consequently a merchant deserving of patronage.

"SALADA"

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

Griffin & Skelley

Messrs. Griffin & Skelley (whose products are listed below) have always conducted business on that safe old principle that "the best is the cheapest in the long run." It has paid them and the grocers who handle their goods handsomely. And it will continue to do so.

Seeded Raisins, Canned Fruits,
White and Green Asparagus,
Griffin's Prunes, Cured Fruits,
Griffin's Seedless Raisins

No detail of their work is neglected from start to finish because no detail is too small to receive the scrupulous care and attention that assures perfection. There is an old fashioned goodness about their prepared fruits (and asparagus) that wins trade—and keeps it.

A Little Thing Multiplied Many Times Becomes a Big Thing.

If you were to put all the money you get selling Mathieu's Nervine Powders into one Till you would be surprised at the largeness of the profit. This headache cure sells awfully well—little profit, multiplied many times becomes a big profit. Your order now please.

Merely to remind you that Mathieu's Syrup of Tar and Cod Liver Oil is in demand all through summer.

THE CAPSTAN MFG. CO.

TORONTO, CANADA.

TO THE TRADE:

England consumes nearly four times as much of

CEYLON TEA

as of all others, save India, although she has been getting it only one-eighth as long.

"WHY?"

Mainly because, of all Western peoples, the English best know tea.

For the Same Reason

England consumes about 6 lbs. and Canada 5 lbs. to the United States 1¼ lbs. of tea per capita. Every English Grocer knows tea; he has made it a study.
